ASSASSIN PROMPTLY SEIZED

PARIS, June 15.—General Essad Pasha, the Albanian patriot, was murdered at 1 o'clock this afternoon in front of the Hotel Continental, Rue Castiglione. His assassin was an Albanian student named Avenic Rustem.

When the General was shot to death thousands of people were passing near the scene, which is just opposite the Tuileries Garden. Crowds were leaving nearby restaurants and the streets were filled with automobiles bearing the elite of the French capital to Longchamps to see the races for the Jockey Club Prize, which is the Derby of France.

Essad Pasha, with a woman friend, had just walked from the Continental to get into his automobile to go to Longchamps. A young man stepped from behind a column of the arcade, and, drawing a large revolver from his coat pocket, fired pointblank at the General at a distance of two yards.

The first bullet lodged in Essad Pasha's stomach. He half turned, when the assassin fired again, the bullet entering the heart. A third shot went wild. Essad Pasha fell to the pavement as twenty men rushed upon his assailant. A physician stepped from the crowd and after a moment's examination said the General was dying. The stricken man was borne into the hotel, but was dead before his apartment was reached.

Hundreds of persons saw the murder, and it was with difficulty that the police protected the assassin from a furious crowd. He was rescued only after he had been severely handled.

Taken to a nearby police station, Rustem said he was born in Albania in 1890. He left home last month to come to Paris to study. He said he had passed several weeks in Rome, and reached Paris three days ago.

According to his story, he did not plan to kill Essad Pasha. He said he always carried a revolver, and that he was waiting to meet one of Essad Pasha's secretaries, when he found himself in the presence of the General. Then he said he could not resist the temptation to kill the man he regarded as a tyrant, responsible for his country's plight.

"I do not regret my act," he told the police.

The assassination just at this time is regarded here as highly sensational. It is Essad's faction in Albania, which is in revolt against the Italians. His presence in Albania had been forbidden by the Italian Government. In working for the independence of his country he was naturally opposed to Italian claims to Albanian soil.

Essad Pasha had a picturesque history. His full name was Essad Pasha Toptani, Descended from one of the oldest Albanian families, he was possessor of large estates in the vicinity of Tirana.

When Albania was under Turkish sovereignty he entered the Turkish Army and rose rapidly. As a Turkish General, he commanded the Fortress of Scutari in the Balkan War and his defense against the Serbs and Montenegrins was one of the best feats of the Turks during the war.

In the period between the Balkan war and the World War Essad Pasha took the political leadership of his country and succeeded in effecting a good understanding between King Peter and his faction in Albania. The Government of Ismael Kemal Bey, established at Avlona, never succeeded in gaining the support of Essad, whose authority was supreme in Central Albania.

After the resignation of Ismael Kemal, Essad Pasha made peace with Avlona and was a member of a mission which established the Prince of Wied as head of independent Albania, and when the Prince did not make good Essad Pasha had something to do with his going.

During the World War Essad Pasha fought on the side of the Allies. He aided the Serbs in their tragic retreat before the armies of the Central Powers. He then placed himself at the disposition of the allied command at Saloniki and made several official trips to Paris and London. As a reward for his work the French named him Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor.

In the Autumn of 1918, just before the end of hostilities, he raised a new Albanian force to aid the Allies. During the peace negotiations the Italians succeeded in having him expelled from Albania. He then came to Paris.

Essad Pasha was a close friend of Rules Children Cannot Be Sent By Parcel Post as Live Animals

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Children may not be transported as parcel post, First Assistant Postmaster General Koons has ruled in passing upon two applications received at the Washington City Post Office for the transportation of children through the mails.

Mr. Koons said children did not come within the classification of harmless live animals which do not require food or water while in transit.

One of the applications received by the local Postmaster was from a 9-year-old girl, who entered the main Post Office and asked that she be sent to Kentucky.

TWO FALL TO DEATH OFF SUBWAY TRAIN

ALL PITCHED OUT AT CURVE

A southbound Lexington Avenue express swung around the sharp curve in the subway at Astor Place at 1:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the left rear door of the second car from the end slid open, and, unobserved by the guard, two men pitched out to death, while a third clung for his life outside the safety gate between the cars.

The train was speeding between the Canal and Worth Street stations before the cries of the third man were heard above the roar of the train and the express was brought to an emergency halt.

It was "jumper" on the first car of the express following which signalled the motorman that something was wrong, and then he discovered that he had run over the bodies of two men.

One passenger witnessed the accident, according to the police. His version of the tragedy differed in essential details from the report to Interborough officials by S. Killeher, a train guard. The result of an investigation by the Public Service Commission had not been announced last night.

A. L. Merritt, Superintendent of the Interborough, in a statement last night declared the two dead men had been drinking, and he hinted that they were in some manner responsible for the accident. George Allan, who suffered a broken arm but did not lose his grip on the safety gate after an upright had thrown him between the cars, was under an opiate at his home last night, unable to give a coherent report of the accident.

Door of Self-Locking Type.

The door, which opened the way to death for William Killeen, 28 years old, of 349 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, and Wesley Price, 22, of 640 Academy Street, Long Island City, young clerks employed by the American Railway Express Company in Long Island City, was operated by an electro-pneumatic device recently installed in subway cars and controlled by a handle at the guard's station at the end of a car. The centre doors of a car are controlled by a second handle. The door was of the self-locking type and had not been opened at Fourteenth Street, as it was not on the platform side of the train.

Persons on the uptown side of the Astor Place station saw the train speed by and several got a glimpse of Allan as he hung outside the safety gate. They shouted in vain, but presently the express, following halted, and F.

HOTEL COMMODORE FIRE PANIC AVERTED AS ELEVATORS STOP

HOT BLAZE NEAR BALLROOM

LOSS PLACED AT $35,000

Flames Started from Electric Current—Manager at Phone Switchboard Reassures Guests.

With every elevator in the big hotel out of service, for some unknown reason, fire, the second blaze in the day, swept through the reception room of the west ballroom of the Hotel Commodore, Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street, last night. In thirty minutes firemen, working at top speed, stopped the fire within the original area, but not before some of the guests, frightened by smoke and the failure of the elevators had begun a hasty descent of the stairs, carrying with them personal belongings hastily caught up.

The fire near the ballroom on the second floor of the hotel was discovered shortly after 10 o'clock by a bellboy carrying baggage to a suite. The boy was passing down the main hallway leading from east to west, when, just as he was opposite the large glass doors of the room, he saw a wisp of smoke between the partially opened doors.

The lad dropped the baggage and investigated. He saw a streak of flame running across the ceiling of the room and over in one corner patches of fire seemingly branching out from the wall. He rushed to one of the telephones in a vacant room and got the office on the wire.

Hotel Fire Alarm Sounded.

As soon as word came into the manager's office, the hotel's fire alarm system was put to use, and the city fire headquarters was notified. In the meantime an employee ran to the fire alarm box at Park Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street and turned in an alarm from there.

A battalion chief later declared that his apparatus had responded to an alarm from that point, instead of going directly to the hotel. The fire fighters' central, however, had put through the fire call to hook and ladder companies and engine companies covering the hotel district, while the hotel's hose was run out.

It was speedily found that the Commodore's lines alloted to the vicinity of the fire were too short. The canvas-covered hose, it was said, reached only part of the way to the blaze.

Just as employes were getting ready to tackle the rapidly-spreading flames with firebuckets, Deputy Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin and a big force of fire-fighting apparatus arrived. The Deputy Chief at once rushed hose right through the carpeted lobby, ladders up from the street to the second floor windows, and firemen up through the hotel's many floors. The latter were to reassure the guests, for the Chief declared within a minute after looking the fire over, that he was confident the flames would be held within their original area.

Firemen Rip Down Ceiling.

It was necessary for the firemen to rip down about seventy-five square feet of ceiling in the west ballroom and in the foyer leading into it. The ceiling had been cracked and loosened by the intense heat so that large sections fell to the floor.

Several firemen from Truck Co. No. 2 and Engine Co. No. 8 narrowly

Gov. Coolidge Pays $32 Rent; Fears Landlord Will Raise It

BOSTON, Mass., June 13.—Governor Coolidge, as he was greeted by newspaper men this morning, made a whimsical complaint of a statement published in a local paper that he paid $35 a month rent for his half house in Northampton, whereas he actually pays $32. He said that if the landlord should happen to see the story the rent might be raised to correspond, and this, the Governor declared, he did not want to happen.

SCOUR CITY GARAGES FOR ELWELL CLUE

SLAIN OVER WOMAN, BELIEF

Countess Szinawska and Mrs. L. Hardy Questioned—Brother Aids Investigators.

Ending a day that served only to deepen the mystery of the murder of Joseph Bowne Elwell, sportsman and whist expert, who was shot through the head as he sat in his home, 244 West Seventieth Street, on Friday morning, the police at midnight ordered every garage in Manhattan canvassed.

The police sought, by their unprecedented stroke, to find a car that stood before the racing man's home during the hours when a man or perhaps a woman pointed a .45-calibre revolver at Elwell and fired once.

Although the police intimated that their order to every precinct commander to check up taxi calls between the hours of 11:30 o'clock Thursday night and 8:30 o'clock Friday morning was something in the nature of a last resort, a TIMES reporter learned that evidence had been unearthed indicating that the murderer of the whist authority used an automobile on his mission of death. Soon after the order went out from headquarters men were detailed in all precincts to make the canvass, but up to early this morning no reports connecting taxi calls with the case had been turned in.

Slain Over a Woman, Friends Say.

Assistant District Attorney John F. Joyce, in charge of the Homicide Bureau, said yesterday at the Elwell residence that all the friends of Mr. Elwell whom he had questioned believed he had been killed by a husband or father.

"They all think some man did the shooting," said Mr. Joyce, who questioned a number of witnesses at the Elwell home yesterday, "and that it was done on account of a wife or daughter."

Mr. Joyce said that no evidence had yet been found which pointed to any individual as the slayer, although he had received information regarding a number of affairs of Mr. Elwell. Regarding reports that Mr. Elwell had been engaged in race track feuds, Mr. Joyce said:

"All that I have learned points the other way. They all say that he was generous in all his dealings on the turf and had no enemies there."

Countess Szinawska Questioned.

The Assistant District Attorney talked for several hours yesterday with Countess S. Szinawska and her sister, Mrs. L. Hardy, of 200 West Fifty-seventh Street, who were former friends of the bridge whist expert and race horse owner. He said he intended to discuss the case with two or three other women, whose names he has.

Walter Elwell, a brother of the murdered man, who was at the home yesterday, said:

"We believe in 'An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.' We will do our utmost to run down the murderer."

The brother was present when Mr. Joyce was reviewing some of the statements which had been made about the life of the murdered man. Walter Elwell made no objection when intimate facts were recited, saying:

"That's all right, go right ahead. I want you to have all the information we can give you. It will all help in running down the guilty person."

When he was asked if the family had any clue or theory regarding the murder, he said:

Hear of Threat Against Elwell.

Groups of detectives came and left the Elwell home during the five-hour period of questioning in the afternoon, but at the close Mr. Joyce said no light had been thrown on the movements of Mr. Elwell from the time that he left the Lewisohn party at the Follies at 2 o'clock on Friday morning until the murder was discovered six and a half hours later. Reports that Mr. Elwell had been seen after that at a dancing place and at a so-called whist club could not be verified.

The day ended with the detectives and prosecuting official a little more familiar with the friendships and ways of the murdered sportsman and with neighborhood gossip to the effect that the hus-

LA FOLLETTE AS CANDIDATE

Johnson and Borah Are Said to Have Known of Movement.

ELEMENTS AIM TO COMBINE

CONVENTIONS TO BE HELD

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—While a bolt by United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California and his erstwhile progressive following was averted by the agreement on the treaty plank in the platform adopted by the Republican National Convention, the possibility of widespread and probably disastrous dissension in the Republican ranks over the nomination of Senator Harding was foreshadowed soon after the gavel had fallen finally over the big party gathering last night.

United States Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin was mentioned in these gloomy predictions as the possible leader of a third ticket sponsored by the Committee of Forty-eight and radical elements among labor and political agrarian groups. These elements will be represented at three conventions to be held in this city a month hence for the purpose of determining whether a third ticket is to be placed in the field. The Non-Partisan League, which is gaining headway in certain hitherto Republican States, in the Northwest, will be an important factor in these conventions.

Scouts from the various bodies that have been instrumental in bringing these elements together and arranging for the conventions, which are scheduled to begin on July 10 and last three days, were on the ground all through the Republican Convention, watching the proceedings. One of the men who was here to survey its doings said, shortly after the convention had adjourned:

"If the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco will do as well for our cause as has the Republican National Convention just ended, there will be some fun. A reactionary nominee by the Democrats will, in my opinion, make a third ticket certain and pave the way for a third party victory."

The Chicago Tribune says that Senators Johnson and Borah knew of the proposed third party and used it as a club over the Republican leaders. It adds that the third party movement is expected to have the backing of William R. Hearst. The La Follette followers do not consider the League of Nations plank in the Republican platform sufficiently definite to bind the party against going into a League of Nations.

Many Kept Aloof From Harding.

In connection with this, it was pointed out that fully one-third of the delegates in the Republican Convention failed to give their support to Senator Harding, even after it was clearly apparent that he would win. The twenty-four delegates from Wisconsin, pledged to support La Follette, who never was a factor in the fight, held out stubbornly and resisted every effort to persuade them to consent to declaring the nomination of Senator Harding unanimous.

The delegates from Wisconsin left Chicago soon after Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of that State had been defeated for the nomination of Vice President. They were in an angry frame of mind.

Members of delegations from other Republican States in the Northwest, before leaving Chicago, expressed the fear that the nomination of Senator Harding might affect the result of their State and local elections this Fall. That was true especially with regard to delegates from Minnesota, where the Non-Partisan League has recently secured control of the Republican Party machinery in very much the fashion it used half a dozen years ago in North Dakota, and is preparing to elect a ticket manned by Leaguers running under the Republican emblem.

The delegation from Minnesota, on the final ballot in the convention, cast twenty-one votes for General Wood, one for Senator Johnson and only two for Senator Harding. One of the delegates declared after the convention that the determination of the Republican Party to hit "the trail to yesterday," as indicated by the nomination of an "extreme reactionary" as head of the ticket, would make it impossible for the more conservative elements in the Republican State organization of Minnesota to shake off and purge the party in their State of Non-Partisan League influences.

Other States in which Progressive or semi-radical influences have been at work in the Republican ranks failed to give their undivided votes to Senator Harding. An exception was North Da-

Committee of Forty-Eight to Name Third Ticket; Amos Pinchot Says G. O. P. Fails to Face Problems

CHICAGO, June 13.—Asserting that the Republican National Convention "ignored most of the serious problems and mentioned others only to reveal its unwillingness to face them honestly," the Committee of Forty-eight, in a statement tonight, signed by Amos Pinchot and other members, said that "whatever uncertainty existed as to whether there would be a new party candidate for President has been removed."

The organization will adopt a platform and nominate a candidate for President at a convention in Chicago on July 10.

"The Republican party has now driven out of representation in its councils the millions of voters who followed Roosevelt, Johnson and La Follette," the statement said. "The new party will represent these voters and will present a definite and constructive program."

The statement said that the new party had been organized in thirty States and that it would be prepared to put its electoral ticket on the ballots in every State.

HARDING ARRIVES IN WASHINGTON

HOLDS CONFERENCE TODAY

Will Remain in Capital a Week and Then Go to His Home in Marion, Ohio.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 14.—Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican nominee for the Presidency, arrived in Washington from Chicago at 12:05 o'clock this morning, and, after a brief stop at the station, went direct to his Wyoming Avenue home. The nominee had no statement to make. While his immediate plans are not known, it is understood he will participate in a political conference this forenoon and will remain in Washington about a week before going to his home at Marion, Ohio.

There were about 2,000 persons at Union Station when the candidate arrived, and they did their best to give Senator Harding a rousing welcome. Music was furnished by a Boy Scout band from Oil City, Penn., which waited an hour at the entrance to the Presidential room of the station for the arrival of the train.

Inside of the great concourse about 1,500 persons had gathered, and were peering through the fence as the candidate's train pulled in. There were also some persons in the Presidential waiting room at the entrance to which an open automobile was waiting for Senator and Mrs. Harding.

Lodge First to Appear.

After the arrival of the train its passengers began to trickle down the platform toward the concourse, but for five minutes none of the convention participants hove into sight. At 12:05 o'clock the figure of Senator Lodge, Chairman of the convention, with a radiant smile and wearing his usual black attire with a straw hat, came into view. There was a cheer from the crowd and Senator Lodge raised his hat in response.

Several minutes later Senator Poindexter of Washington walked down the platform holding his straw hat in his hand and there was another cheer. The next of the leaders was Senator Sutherland of West Virginia, who was met on the platform by several members of his family.

Some minutes later the candidate came into view of the crowd behind the fence of the train shed. He was walking down the platform with his straw hat in hand, accompanied by Representative Bowers of West Virginia.

"Hurrah for Harding!" shouted a man in the crowd and a salvo of cheers followed and increased into considerable din when automobile horns began "honking" in front of the station.

Senator Harding walked along inside the fence, on the further side from the crowd, peering through. Then he turned into the Presidential waiting room, where the cheering continued, stopping there long enough to shake hands with newspapermen and a few friends.

It was there that Senator Harding said he did not care to make any statement tonight, either at the station or at his home.

Some One Cheers for Johnson.

Outside the waiting room, as he was about to enter his automobile, Senator Harding was halted by camera men and to the explosion of a flashlight, still and motion pictures were taken, while the band played and the crowd cheered.

Some one in the crowd yelled "Hurray for Hiram," but this was smothered in cheers for Harding.

Just as the flashlight was set off Mrs. Harding stepped through the crowd and joined her husband. He smiled and bowed as he helped her into the automobile.

Led by the Harding automobile, the procession started off. Men, women and children ran behind the Senator's car, cheering and waving hats. Senator

NEW YORK GROUP DIVIDED ON TICKET

DELEGATES START FOR HOME

Wood Men Call Wadsworth a Traitor—Will Join Opponents in Senate Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Republican delegates from New York started back to their homes this morning with a divided sentiment regarding the convention's choice of a nominee. The reactionaries are well satisfied, as they think a better candidate than Senator Harding could not have been found. The independents and progressives are frankly dissatisfied.

They believe a more progressive candidate should have been chosen and that Harding will not be a good vote-getter. The followers of General Wood particularly are in a critical mood. They say the General did not get a square deal from Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Chairman of the delegation. The Wood delegates had been led to believe, according one of their number, that Senator Wadsworth would go over to Wood after a majority of the delegates had given a complimentary vote to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler. Instead of doing this Wadsworth fought against the nomination of Wood and did all in his power to prevent it.

At no stage of the game, the Wood delegate complained, was Wadsworth for Lowden, although the delegates he controlled continued to vote for him until orders came for Wadsworth to swing his delegates to Harding. Lowden was merely used to stop Wood's nomination, and when this was accomplished the reactionary candidate the Old Guard wanted was "put across." The Wood men accuse Senator Wadsworth of breaking his promise and of underhanded dealing.

One outcome of the result will be additions to the forces opposing Senator Wadsworth in his campaign this Fall for renomination. The Wood men declare they will join with the suffragettes, prohibitionists and all other elements aligned against the Senator and do their best to defeat him. They claim considerable strength throughout New York State, particularly with the farmers, and assert the anti-Wadsworth combination will be strong enough to beat him.

Pressure is being brought to bear on Representative Norman J. Gould, who was Eastern manager of the Wood campaign, to head the anti-Wadsworth movement, even to the extent of becoming a candidate for United States Senator against him. Mr. Gould said he had not made up his mind. His one thought now, he said, was to get out of politics and devote all his time to his business. As a candidate against Wadsworth in the primaries Gould would have the support of the suffragists, headed by Mary Garrett Hay, and of the "drys," who have not forgotten Wadsworth's position on prohibition.

To what extent the nomination of Senator Harding will split the party in New York State could not be accurately gauged today, for the weary and homesick delegates thought of nothing but getting away from Chicago, and all but a handful left at 10 A. M. on the delegates' special. Among those remaining until tonight were George W. Aldridge, leader of Monroe County and former State Senator, and Elon R. Brown of Watertown. Both are strong for the Old Guard, and they view the Harding nomination with equanimity.

Harding, they said, was the strongest candidate the convention could have selected. As a conservative, they added, he would have the business interests of the State solidly behind him, while he was not objectionable to the labor element, and was acceptable to the suffragists and the prohibitionists. They predicted that he would carry New York State by an overwhelming plurality and take the whole State

JOHNSON ALLAYS FEARS

Sends Brief Message of Congratulation to Senator Harding.

WESTERN DELEGATES SULK

LEADERS PREDICT VICTORY

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The cold gray dawn of the morning after found the group of Republican leaders who brought about the nomination of Senator Harding for President by "steam roller" methods which rivalled any used in the past attempting to put the result of their manoeuvring in the best light.

Yesterday they took the convention out of the hands of the delegates and over the protests of the groups from several of the States where the progressive spirit runs high, named a ticket which they declared to be safe, sound and satisfying. Today they are trying to determine what they are going to do with it.

Hope is being kept up by talk among the leaders that the ticket will immediately restore confidence among the business interests of the nation and that it will end any danger of a financial panic and dull peace and good will. But such thoughts are interrupted by others which have to do with what may occur in some States of the Middle West, and many States west of the Mississippi, which played the determining part in the reelection of a Democratic President in 1916.

Senators Johnson of California, Borah of Idaho, Kenyon of Iowa and other leaders of the Progressive elements, are keeping to the privacy of their quarters, with little or nothing to say, and much to think about. Admittedly they are trying to determine just how far they can go in supporting the ticket which has been named; whether they will logically be forced to restrict their support to attacks upon the Democratic Administration and Democratic nominees, or will be able to face their constituents of the West on the basis of going the "whole hog" for Harding and Coolidge.

Johnson Congratulates Harding.

There will be no bolt so far as the Johnson-Borah-Kenyon group is concerned. Senator Johnson made that certain today when he sent a brief message to Senator Harding, now on the way to Washington. His message, which was signed "Hi Johnson," read:

"Congratulations to you."

The important part of the incident, however, was that Johnson sent any message at all. This fact was held to put at rest rumors that he would enter a third party movement.

Senator Borah is silent so far as public utterance is concerned, but the attitude he has assumed makes it appear that he does not contemplate breaking away from the party.

In this connection there is a story going the rounds which has attracted considerable attention. It is that Senators Johnson and Borah were kept in line by assurance that with Harding as President the League of Nations plank in the platform would be interpreted as meaning that the Wilson League of Nations should not be adopted with the Lodge reservations or any other reservations; that, in fact, it never would be ratified under any circumstances.

Strength is given to this report by the fact that Senator Harding has been classed at times as practically a member of the irreconcilable group of the Senate. It is declared that, if the truth were known, he would prefer throwing the League of Nations overboard entirely.

Reaction Against Senate Group.

The feeling of doubt in the minds of many leaders here as to the wisdom of the course pursued is a feature of the day-after situation which parades itself for every one to observe and comment about. The calculated and deliberate action of the Senate group headed by Lodge, Smoot and others in nominating Harding in disregard of the views of large groups of defegates came as a distinct shock and there was a sharp reaction.

About the lobbies of the hotels today it was a simple task to find men (and not a few of them Republicans) who were ready to assert that Saturday, June 12, was a red letter day for the Democratic Party; that the tactics used in applying the steam roller, and the conservative type of the ticket named, had given renewed hope to the Democrats and would develop the Democratic Convention at San Francisco on June 28 into a reasonably "peppy" affair. The leader, be he Republican or otherwise, who proclaimed with effusion that was genuine that the Republican Party would have a runaway race in the Fall elections, was the exception.

There was no difficulty in finding

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, June 13.—The audience at the National Theatre was thrown into a panic this afternoon and six persons were seriously injured when a bomb exploded in the midst of the farewell performance of Enrico Caruso at a popular matinée. Neither Caruso nor any of the other opera performers was hurt, but hundreds in the audience were bruised and beaten in the rush to get out of the theatre.

The bomb, with a pressure of 20,000 pounds, was placed in the washroom of the gallery. It wrecked the acoustic box, three walls of the washroom, and some of the scenery crashed on the stage.

No arrests have been made. Judge Hector de Saavedra is still taking testimony in the lobby of the theatre. Caruso was in his dressing room at the time the bomb exploded. He rushed out to see what the trouble was. Rudolfo Bracale, manager of the theatre, fearing that another bomb might have been placed, rushed him in his costume for the second act to the Hotel Sevilla in Mme. Navarrete's automobile, which was waiting at the stage door.

The police say they have no explanation, except that seats were selling at a premium and the public had little opportunity to see Caruso, who is a hero here. Anonymous letters received by the management protested against the prices, from $35 up. Today was a popular matinée, and the bomb was taken as a demonstration, not against Caruso and the opera performers, but against the management.

According to Benno Zirato, Secretary to Caruso, the bomb was timed for the triumphal scene in "Aida" in the last act, but the performance was forty-five minutes late getting under way and the explosion came as Bezanzoni and Escobar were singing the famous duet in the second act.

In a moment the theatre was in an uproar. Crowds swept aside the police guards in the aisles in the rush for the exits, women fainted and men fought each other.

Scores were trampled in the panic, the gallery audience plunged down stairways to the streets and many emerged with bloody faces and clothes torn to shreds. No complete record of the number injured was obtainable, but hundreds were treated for minor injuries. The police guard accorded for the Caruso performances were unable to handle the situation and reserves were rushed to the scene to hold back the street crowds attracted by the explosion.

The musicians rushed under the stage from the pit, and when several appeared on the street their clothes were bloody and they carried battered violins and musical instruments. The supers, clad in costumes of Egypt, rushed frantically out, making a hectic scene as they were swallowed up in the street throng.

leaders and near leaders among the men and women politicians who were prepared to admit that the so-called "Senate cabal" had dominated the convention in the end to the exclusion of almost every other interest and had made a thorough and, to them, a satisfactory job of it. Even the members of the Senate clique who were sincere in their statements owned up.

Delegates Taken by Surprise.

A tour among those delegates who were in town for a few hours today showed that the majority, if not all of them (they were not on the inside at the early Saturday morning conferences of the Senate clique when the decision to nominate Harding was made), had not had the ghost of an idea that Harding would be selected until they received their orders and were "delivered." Some of them have not yet recovered from their amazement and confusion and not a few were resentful.

It is a simple statement of fact to say that when the convention assembled on Tuesday, talk of the nomination of Harding was accepted as one of the jokes of the convention. Delegates looked in on the pretentious headquarters which he maintained in the Florentine room (one of the coveted spots in the Congress Hotel at such times) and openly expressed wonder that a candidate who they felt had no chance to be nominated should keep up such a display. Some expressed the belief that Harding was probably looking after the nomination for the Vice Presidency and they even had doubt as to the fate of such aspirations.

That the selection of Harding as the nominee for President was a shock, although a joyous one, to his managers is another plain statement of fact. There was a story going the rounds last night that it came about so suddenly and unexpectedly that no provision had been made for a band which always must form part of the celebration staged for a successful candidate.

A canvass of the delegates twelve hours before Harding was nominated, it is said, disclosed scarcely more than a handful who felt that the Ohio Senator had a chance of obtaining the prize and few more who were enthusiastic about throwing their support to him. This picture is drawn as illustrative of the power exercised by the group of leaders who really nominated Harding and the methods by which they carried their plan to fruition.

Barnes Played Big Part.

The confusion of emotions which ran riot among the delegates at the convention was easily observable while the ninth and tenth ballots were being recorded yesterday, when the leaders began to take the skids from under the Wood and Lowden booms and deliver delegates to Harding by the armfuls. Men and women were talking in excited voices and pushing about, filled not so much with enthusiasm for what was being done as amazement at it, and their inability to stop the flood, once it was started by New York, Pennsylvania and other large Eastern States.

Delegates shouted protests and demanded that the flow be stopped, but they had no power to accomplish their desires. Lodge and Smoot, directing the rout of the Wood and Lowden forces, went on relentlessly about their allotted task.

In this scramble, when the delegates began to realize that the convention had been snatched away from them and was in the control of the few, William Barnes, Jr., of New York played a dominant part. Barnes had promised at the early morning conferences to "deliver;" and the promise was carried out. If Barnes had had his full say, the result would have been accomplished on the ninth rather than the tenth ballot. He was antagonistic to more talk or delay and was prepared to put Harding across with a summary procedure which outran the program of the others.

As it turned out, New York was the State which tipped over the kettle by giving Harding a big proportion of the delegation on the ninth ballot. Those who had felt that Barnes was practically out of politics, that he had lost his grip, are whistling another tune today.

The reaction set in today when delegates and leaders began to ask themselves how the "Progressive" States of the West would view the ticket. Some commented upon it as an ideal ticket from the viewpoint of the so-called international banking group whom Senator Johnson has charged with attempting to control the Republican Convention and Party for its own purposes.

There was much discussion, even with the nomination but twelve hours old, of the kind of a campaign which it would be advisable for Senator Harding to conduct, whether he should go out before the people, and especially if he should venture into the far West. Tonight the predominant opinion among the leaders seems to be that Harding would make the strongest run by remaining at home and not venturing forth to challenge the fates, as did Charles E. Hughes in 1916.

Front Porch Campaign Urged.

Walter F. Brown of Toledo, who left the party with Colonel Roosevelt in 1912, but is now back in the ranks and recognized as one of the leading figures, if not the leading one, in Harding's home State, Ohio, started the ball rolling tonight by taking a definite stand for a porch campaign.

"I am in favor of a porch campaign," said Mr. Brown. "I think the candidate should remain at his home in Marion, Ohio, and receive visitors there, the procedure followed by McKinley. In this way he will obtain more publicity for his utterances than he would get by traveling, as by the latter method he could get in touch with few people at best.

"And another thing—an extensive campaign is not conducive to a candidate's health. By remaining quietly at home he would keep himself in much better condition."

Mr. Brown added that in his opinion there was not the slightest doubt that Harding would carry Ohio and receive a larger plurality in that State than he had in 1914, when he was elected Senator by 103,000. He also said that Senator Harding had never had trouble with labor and that employes of the Senator's newspaper were shareholders.

Comment upon Senator Harding's ability to carry Ohio and his dealings with his employes comes naturally to the front where the leaders discuss what was done at the convention. For there are some who feel that even if Harding is from Ohio there is some danger of his losing that State, just as Hughes lost it in 1916.

Labor Antagonism in Ohio.

It was a topic freely discussed today, and with some shaking of heads, for Harding has run counter to tremendous opposition by the railroad brotherhoods and other influential labor organizations of Ohio because he voted for the adoption of an anti-strike clause when the Cummins-Esch Railroad bill was being considered, and also voted for the bill in its final form.

Harding felt this opposition in his contest against General Wood in the Presidential preference primary in Ohio, and it is generally believed that the labor vote was what caused his defeat in Cleveland, a stronghold of the railroad unions. The opposition is still there, for the brotherhood leaders have pledged themselves to oppose Harding if they are confronted with a situation where their influence will play a dominant part.

Some of the delegates who were a bit disconcerted about the manner in which Harding was nominated by the Senate group were trying today to find something to boast about in the fact that Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin met disaster when an attempt was made to make him the nominee for the Vice Presidency. The version which the delegates present is that a deal was made whereby the Old Guard promised to try to name Lenroot. But as it developed in the convention such a move never had a chance, and it is doubtful if the Senate group was really for Lenroot or wanted him nominated.

Distrusted Lenroot as Vote Getter.

The half-hearted nature of the effort that was made by the leaders who controlled the convention to bring about Lenroot's nomination was so obvious that it could scarcely deceive. They knew that much objection to the Lenroot candidacy had been caused because of his vote on the McLemore resolution in Congress and that if he was named this would add fodder to the Democratic campaign publicity.

The sentiment for Coolidge for second place on the ticket had been building up rapidly and the Senate group had no objection. In fact, Coolidge fitted in with their plans, and they felt that whatever strength might be obtained among the Progressive elements of the West by the nomination of Lenroot for Vice President would be more than overcome by other things which would be brought against him.

That there had been no effort to control delegations for Lenroot and that the objection to him was so strong that it would be dangerous to force the issue was made plain by the fact that hundreds of delegates who had permitted themselves to be delivered without protest for Harding—delegates from New York, Pennsylvania and other States—cast their ballots for Coolidge. It is inconceivable that the leaders who could toss these delegates into the pot for a candidate for the Presidency whom the leaders desired, but for whom the delegates themselves had no enthusiasm, would have been unable to carry out their complete program if they had seen fit.

In this connection it might be pointed out that when Lenroot was offered in nomination by Senator McCormick and the name of Wisconsin, which elected Lenroot to the Senate, was mentioned, there was a gasp of disapproval from many delegations, and a few hisses. This demonstration was not aimed at Lenroot, but at the mention of Wisconsin, which also claims parentship to Senator La Follette. La Follette's name was hissed and booed every time a ballot was taken yesterday and twenty-four of the twenty-six Wisconsin votes were cast for him.

But the scene was staged where the group which controlled the convention permitted it to appear that they really waned to nominate Lenroot, a Western man, and in this "unbossed" convention the delegates would rebuke any effort to shut off their self determination. The nomination of Coolidge for Vice President was least of all an exhibition of a free and unbossed convention. It was simply an illustration of the cleverness of the Old Guard leaders in seeking to make it appear that they would behave themselves and "get away" with a situation in the manner which they most desired.

Fears for Harding in West.

That the elements of the party will get together in the Fall elections, at least in a half-hearted way, is the general opinion here today. But that there will be a vigorous campaign in the Western States for Harding, who in 1912 called Colonel Roosevelt a traitor to his party and invited Progressives to come back on their hands and knees, is another question. Although Harding endeavored to explain in the pre-convention campaign the statements which he made in the past, his attitude where the Progressives were concerned was one of the things that had made his nomination improbable, it not impossible, until the Senate group took control and did the trick. There is little attempt here to deny that Harding had practically given up hope of being nominated and that his case, while it was in the hands of free delegates, was hopeless.

What the attitude of the Western States will be as the campaign progresses is one of the questions among the leaders who were responsible for Harding's nomination. Talks with them indicate that they have hope that Harding will "build up" in the estimation of the Western voters.

Count on Opposition to Wilson.

The Republican leaders when they discuss the situation say that the opposition to the Wilson Administration is so strong that there will be no question as to the result. This recalls the talk, which was floating around the hotel lobbies a week or ten days ago, that some of the Old Guard leaders were convinced that they could nominate anybody and win. Some hold to the opinion that such a course was followed at the convention, in disregard of the progressive elements of the party.

Old leaders were recalling today, however, that granting for the sake of argument that hundreds of thousands of Democrats would withhold their votes from their party ticket because of opposition to the Wilson Administration, the Republicans could not feel on safe ground. For instance, in the 1892 campaign Benjamin Harrison was defeated for the Presidency not only because of the swing to Cleveland, but because hundreds of thousands of Republicans failed to vote.

A campaign in the West where there is no enthusiasm for the Republican nominee, it was pointed out, might result in a great block of Republican voters failing to cast their ballots.

The Republican leaders are counting on Harding and Coolidge carrying the Eastern States, including New England, without trouble. They are satisfied as to that, and count also on New York supporting the ticket without fail, but this some of the Democratic leaders here question.

Frank Knox of New Hampshire, one of the more important Wood leaders, said today that he felt that Harding would sweep the New England States. The ticket, he said, would restore confidence in New England and prove satisfactory to the majority of voters there. He felt that the antagonism to Wilson in that section would assure Republican victory, no matter who was nominated by the Democratic Party.

There was much talk like that; talk about the ticket restoring confidence and having a calming effect; talk about the feeling in some sections of the country against the Wilson Administration. It is obvious that today the plan of campaign is emphasis on what is declared to be the need of the country to restore the party to power and to do away with "Wilsonism," rather than a positive campaign which puts the candidate and the platform in the front line trenches.

Doubt Verdict of Constituents.

The fact that the Western States were reluctant yesterday when it came to the question of throwing delegations to Harding is another topic of discussion in political circles. There is more than appears on the surface in such a situation, and the Republican leaders know it. Most of the delegates from the Western States knew that they were not sent to the convention by their constituents to help nominate Harding. They knew also that if they registered their votes for Harding in the convention they would have to answer to their constituents for it upon their return.

Such a situation helps to develop the picture of what Harding's campaign managers will have to contend with in the States west of the Mississippi. They may find that it is a difficult task to bring out great strength for their candidate in the event that the Democrats make no blunders of a serious nature and put forward a candidate who has the sympathy of the progressive elements.

The first reaction which the leaders have obtained here in regard to the platform adopted by the convention is that it wins no warm approval, at least from labor or the progressive States. In fact, there have been some "kickbacks," of which they are saying little. And so the combination of candidate and platform is not causing many of them to give three cheers. At least that is the way the Western leaders are talking today.

Naturally, under such conditions the leaders are not discussing their opinions for the purposes of publicity, with the exception of those who feel that they can make the statement that a sweeping victory will be won. It is probable that the majority expect that the party will be put in power next Fall, but there is no tendency to look upon the outcome as a sure thing, especially among those workers who must plunge into the Western country and make the best of what has been handed to them on a platter by the Senate group.

The Western managers are recalling with not a little concern that Oregon and South Dakota were the only States of the Western group which held in line for the "G. O. P." in 1916.

SENATORS COMMEND TICKET.

Will Appeal to Country, Says Brandegee—Knox Says He Is Delighted.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Senator Brandegee of Connecticut said today that he was confident the defeated Republican candidates would loyally support the ticket, but it was not to be expected they should be eager to do so until the bitterness of defeat should give way to a call for a united party.

"The ticket will appeal to the country," said Senator Brandegee. "Senator Harding has had experience in public life as Lieutenant Governor of his State and its representative in the Senate. Mr. Coolidge is an able administrator and both are upstanding Americans as opposed to the international egotist.

"They are conservative, the country is conservative, and when the Democrats name, as they will, radicals, on a radical platform, the Republican ticket will be accepted by voters of both parties as the safest to elect. The Republican ticket will be stronger after the Democratic Convention than appears now. It stands for Americanism and sanity as opposed to internationalism and radicalism."

Senator McCormick, who supported Lowden and was friendly to Johnson in the treaty fight, expressed the opinion that the party would present a solid front in November as the result of Chairman Hays's activities.

Mr. Hays declined to make a formal statement about the ticket and will have nothing to say on present conditions for a few days. He will hold a conference of his active staff tomorrow, and expects to join Senator Harding later at Marion, Ohio.

Chairman Hays said that while the campaign would be "snappy and thorough," as he termed it, it was likely that Senator Harding would not make more than a dozen speeches in different parts of the country. As far as possible Senator Harding will make it a "porch campaign" and confine his chief efforts to speeches from his porch to visiting delegations. Of course the Democrats may adopt methods which will change these plans entirely and compel the nominee to make a nation-wide tour.

Congratulatory telegrams poured in for Senator Harding today. More than 2,000 messages pledging support and good wishes were received after the Senator and Mrs. Harding had left for Washington.

Senator P. C. Knox telegraphed: "I am delighted with your nomination and will do all I can to secure your election."

Dan R. Hanna of Cleveland wired: "My Dear Mr. President: Congratulations, best wishes. Also extend my congratulations to Mrs. Harding."

"We're going to the capital, pack up our bags and go back to California," he said, while bidding farewell to a party of friends. "There is nothing that I should care to say now relative to the political situation."

Senator Borah also declined to make a statement, but his friends said that he would not bolt the party and intimated that he might take an active part in the campaign.

HUGHES REFUSES COMMENT

Says He Will Have Opportunity Later to Give Views on Nominees.

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 13.—Charles E. Hughes, the standard bearer of the Republican Party in 1916, who is here for the Wellesley College commencement, said that he did not care to comment today on the candidates and platform of the Chicago Convention. He said he was here only for the commencement, said that he did not care to would be abundant opportunity for him to express his views later.

COOLIDGE HAS HOST OF SUNDAY CALLERS

TO SEE DELEGATES TODAY

Governor Will Then Join Amherst Class Reunion—He Won't Resign the Governorship.

BOSTON, June 13.—The plans of Governor Calvin Coolidge, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, to go to Amherst for the opening of the Commencement Week of his alma mater and then to his home in Northampton, were changed today upon receipt of a telegram from the Massachusetts delegates saying they would arrive here tomorrow afternoon and parade to the State House. The Governor decided to remain in Boston to receive them, after which he will journey to his home.

During the day the Governor was besieged with callers, who came to extend their congratulations on his nomination. His secretary, Henry F. Long, continually brought him telegrams from a host of friends and prominent Republicans.

William H. Taft in his message to the nominee said:

"I congratulate you most heartily and sincerely on your nomination as Vice President. The ticket of Harding and Coolidge will sweep the country and its certain victory means a useful and successful Republican administration of the affairs of this country the next four years."

Hailed as War Veterans' Friend.

Among the host of messages received were telegrams from Governor Bartlett of New Hampshire; the Massachusetts Society of Washington, D. C.; National Chief of Staff Timothy W. Kelly of the United Spanish War Veterans; Adjutant Leo Spillane of the American Legion; General William Weigel, U. S. A., who trained the Seventy-sixth Regiment at Camp Devens; General Beaumont B. Buck, U. S. A., and ex-Congressman L. D. Apsley.

One of the telegrams which particularly pleased the Governor was that from Chief of Staff Kelly, U. S. W. V. The message was:

"Congratulations and best wishes for success to you, a proven friend of war veterans and their dependents."

The Governor was the target during the day for a battery of movie men and photographers. With Mrs. Coolidge, he went for a short walk in the vicinity of their hotel in the forenoon, and in the afternoon he took a three-mile walk. He is not enthusiastic over any particular sport, and finds most of his recreation in walking. In the evening he and Mrs. Coolidge attended church services.

Governor Coolidge talked over the telephone today to his two boys, John and Calvin, Jr., who are at Northampton. They said they were pleased with their father's nomination, but considered it a matter of course.

After receiving the Massachusetts delegates tomorrow afternoon the Governor will go to Springfield to join his Amherst classmates of 1895 at a dinner in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their graduation. On Tuesday he will attend commencement week exercises at Amherst, and on Wednesday he will present the diplomas to the graduating classes of Holy Cross College at Worcester.

Not to Resign Governorship.

Governor Coolidge denied tonight the report that he would resign as Governor on accepting the nomination for Vice President. He will serve out his present term, which expires the first Wednesday in January, and if elected Vice President cannot assume that office until two months later.

The Governor said he could conjecture no reason for resigning, since in any event the Constitution provides for the Lieutenant Governor to serve as Acting Governor in case the Governor is absent from the State. As for a stumping tour, that matter is entirely in the hands of the National Committee.

He and Mrs. Coolidge submitted with courtesy and patience to the ordeal of facing cameras today. A movie man captured them in the public garden near the Washington Monument, and, to impart a background of pure democracy, waylaid an elderly citizen smoking a corncob pipe and trailing by the hand a little girl, beguiling the pair to stand in focus. But no persuasion could prevail upon the citizen to keep his pipe in his mouth. He carefully deposited it in his pocket and deprecatingly declined to accept assurances that "neither the Governor nor Mrs. Coolidge object to smoking."

The Governor's favorite brand of cigar is a Havana stogie. When asked when he first took up with them he replied with a whizzical smile, "When the landlord first raised the rent."

"Did smoking the stogies have any effect, Governor?" he was asked.

"I can't say that it did, on the landlord," he replied, "but it did on the cost of living."

Governor and Mrs. Coolidge are planning to visit the old Coolidge homestead in Plymouth, Vt., among the Green Mountains. The Governor's stepmother recently died, and his father is 75 years old. The Governor does not care for fishing, finds haying too strenuous, and prefers to take life easy for a while. He will take a thorough rest when at Plymouth, Vt.

NEBRASKANS NOT AROUSED.

Progressives Likely to Support Ticket, but Women Criticise It.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, June 13.—Republicans here have not had sufficient time since the Chicago convention to decide what they will do about supporting the ticket. The general opinion is that the Progressives will probably vote for the ticket, but without the least enthusiasm. Progressive Republican women were not at all pleased with the nomination.

An indication of what Nebraska Progressives think of Harding is found in the action of the delegation at Chicago. Not a single Progressive delegate from this State voted for Harding until the question arose of making the vote unanimous. Previous to this action the Nebraska Progressives voted for Wood or Johnson.

Victor D. Reynolds, former State legislator and Secretary of the Fontenelle Club, the Progressive Republican Club of Omaha, said:

"I was very pleased when I heard of the nomination of Harding and Coolidge. They will unite the Republican Party solidly and I feel that we could not have done better."

Mrs. Draper Smith, Chairman of the Republican Women's Committee, said:

"The Nebraska Republican women will be whipped into line, regardless of the way they look at the candidates today."

"Harding does not appeal to me," said Mrs. H. C. Sumney, a prominent Progressive Republican.

"I cannot see Harding at all," said Mrs. James Richardson, another Progressive Republican.

BACK HARDING IN KANSAS

But Progressives Say Coolidge Should Have First Place.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, June 13.—The few Progressive Republicans here who have expressed themselves say they will support Senator Harding for President. These say that Governor Coolidge is an ideal candidate for Vice President and should have had first place.

It is the belief of Senator Capper and other leading Progressives that the ticket will have whole-hearted support from the Republicans of Kansas.

TO NOTIFY HARDING AT HIS HOME SOON

MARION, Ohio, June 13.—United States Senator Warren G. Harding will be officially notified of his nomination for the Presidency by the Republican Party at his hotel in Marion within the next few days, it became known today.

It also became known that Senator Harding will adopt the custom of former President McKinley and receive party leaders at his home for conferences during the Summer. These conferences will be held on the lawn in front of the Harding residence.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Campaign managers for Senator Harding said today no time would be lost in getting things under way. Harry M. Daugherty, director of Senator Harding's pre-conception campaign, requested the National Committee to take "prompt, snappy and energetic action" in placing the merits of the Republican issues before the voters of the country.

Party managers, it is said, will not wait until Senator Harding and Governor Calvin Coolidge are officially notified of their nomination, but plan to start the campaign soon after the Democratic convention is held.

Will H. Hays, re-elected Chairman by the new National Committe, was out of town today, resting after his strenuous days during the convention. The members of the new Executive Committee, of whom seven will be women, will be named without delay by Chairman Hays. A Vice Chairman of the Executive Committe, who will be a woman, will be selected at the time the committee is announced.

kota, which sent to the convention a Republican delegation solidly opposed to the Non-Partisan League, which was seated by the Republican National Committee, over the league delegation that contested for North Dakota's ten seats.

Far Western Delegates Held Out.

California stuck solidly to Johnson to the end. Idaho gave but two of its eight votes to Harding. Montana did not give him a single vote in the convention at any time. Nebraska gave him only four votes on the final ballot.

In Oregon he got only two against five for Johnson and three for Wood. From South Dakota he received four to six for Wood. Utah withheld three of its eight votes from Senator Harding. Washington gave him only five.

The Committee of Forty-eight, composed of middle-of-the road men, who according to the declaration of party principles, are opposed alike to reaction and radicalism, expects to function as a co-ordinating influence to bring the other liberal groups together into solid co-operation behind a common program and perhaps a common set of candidates in the event of the action of the Democratic National Convention not being acceptable to them. They adopted at a conference held in St. Louis last December a party creed declaring for public ownership of all public utilities, including transportation, stock yards, large abattoirs, grain elevators, terminal warehouses, pipe lines and tanks and for public ownership of fundamental necessaries and natural resources, such as coal, oil, natural gas, mineral deposits, water powers, and large commercial lumber tracts.

In their effort to effect amalgamation with labor groups the Committee of Forty-eight in its program came out against injunctions in labor cases and in favor of collective bargaining and a share for labor in the managemet of industries.

AWAIT LA FOLLETTE DECISION.

Wisconsin Followers Won't Decide Course Till He Recovers.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, June 13.—Until Senator La Follette, who is now recuperating from an operation at Rochester, Minn., returns to Madison and again takes up the reins the status of the La Follette wing of the Republican Party in this State will not be known.

While the Philipp-Lenroot faction is satisfied with the nomination of Harding, the delegates who represented La Follette at Chicago showed their animosity by refusing to vote to make the nomination unanimous. The action of the La Follette delegates in sticking to their hero even to the last ballot was a surprise to the political observers, who had figured that they would make a switch as early as the fourth ballot in the direction in which it would most benefit the senior Senator.

The delegates returned home today thoroughly dissatisfied with the treatment accorded them in Chicago. While Republicans of the conservative wing are condemning the action of the delegates, it is clear that La Follette is the political power in Wisconsin and if he does not want to support Harding the State will go to the Democrats.

The selection of Harding was received with joy by the Democrats here. They expect that the Progressives will refuse to stand by him.

HARDING 'REGULAR' IN SENATE VOTES

WITH LODGE ON TREATY

Supported Cummins Railroad Bill and Anti-Strike Clause, and Approved Suffrage.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The voting record of Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, Republican nominee for the Presidency, as disclosed by the Congressional Record for the last five years, shows that he usually voted what might be described as "regular" with the majority of the Republican side, but that there were times when he was rather independent in his attitude toward pending measures.

Senator Harding voted with the "drys" of the Senate on the prohibition question, went with the majority of his party on most of the war resolutions and issues, voted for the Cummins railroad bill and for the anti-strike clause in that bill, supported woman suffrage, and when he voted on the treaty he cast his vote for the Lodge reservations and for the ratification of the treaty with the Lodge reservations.

Senator Harding entered the Senate March 4, 1915. His fifth year of Senatorial service was passed during the midst of his campaign for the Presidential nomination. He is Chairman of the Committee on the Philippines and a member of the committees on Commerce, Expenditures in the Treasury Department, Foreign Relations, Pacific Islands, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, Public Health and National Quarantine, Standards, Weights and Measures, and Territories.

Almost a "Bitter Ender."

While Senator Harding's record on the treaty, so far as his recorded votes on the various reservations and proposed amendments and substitutes is concerned, is "regular," it is a fact that he came dangerously close to being a bitter-ender.

Organized labor, as represented by leaders in the American Federation of Labor like Samuel Gompers, is displeased with the record of Senator Harding on the Cummins Railroad bill. Senator Harding offered no apologies for his vote on the Cummins bill. His attitude toward labor and his votes on the railroad bill were set forth on Dec. 30, 1919, in a letter to E. J. Miller, Secretary of the Baltimore & Ohio Federation of Newark, Ohio, in answer to an inquiry from Miller.

In this letter Mr. Harding said he voted for the Cummins bill and its anti-strike clause because he believed it to be the best measure presented to the Senate for the restoration of the railway lines to their owners.

Harding's Treaty Votes.

When the vote was taken on the Lodge reservation on Article X. Senator Harding voted for that reservation. Borah did likewise. Johnson, of California, was recorded as not voting on this. On March 17, Senator Owen proposed that ratification of the covenant should in no way be regarded as modifying the terms of the armistice. This was rejected by a vote of 55 to 12. Harding voted against the Owen proposition, but Reed and Borah were among the twelve who voted for it.

The vote on the resolution of ratification, with the Lodge reservations, took place March 19. The vote was 40 to 35, 12 not voting. Harding did not vote, being paired with Penrose, who was absent and ill. Announcement was made in the Senate that if Penrose were present he would have voted "No" and Harding would have voted "Yea." As a two-thirds vote was required to pass the resolution, each vote paired "against" had to be paired with two votes "for" the resolution. Senator Nelson of Minnesota and Senator Harding furnished the two votes paired "for" the resolution with Penrose's vote "against" ratification.

The Senate then adopted, by vote of 47 to 37, the Lodge resolution to notify the President that the Treaty had failed of ratification. Harding was also paired on this vote, and recorded as not voting.

The Senator supported the movement for recognition of women in the national electorate by favoring the granting of woman suffrage.

The war record of the Senator shows him as supporting the vote to recognize that a state of war existed and as supporting the President generally on war legislation. After the armistice, however, the record indicates that Senator Harding favored getting the nation back to a peace basis as rapidly as possible. Some of his campaign literature carried the slogan "Back to normal."

He urged and voted for lifting the war restrictions on business, pleaded for an effort to have the nation return to normal, and supported this idea with his votes.

The peace treaty issue showed that he was one of the Senators who in the closing days of the first session signed the Senatorial round robin. On the peace treaty he supported the Lodge reservations whenever he voted. When many of the votes on reservations were taken he was absent from the Senate. On those occasions he was paired with Senator Underwood.

In March, when the votes on the treaty were nearing their final stages, he returned to Washington, was present in the Senate and voted. He is recorded as voting against the Frelinghuysen, Kirby, Shields, Simmons, Reed and other substitutes for the Lodge reservation on Article X.

During the session of March 18, 1920, which lasted nearly until midnight, Senator Harding voted against propositions which sought to have the Senate declare its sympathy with Irish aspirations for a Government of their own, and declaring if their self-government was obtained they should be admitted to the League of Nations. On the same day Senator Lodge, during the treaty fight, moved to strike out of one of the pending amendments the words "the principle of self-determination," so as to make the proposed Gerry amendment provide that "in consenting to the ratification of the treaty with Germany, the United States adheres to the resolution of sympathy with the aspirations of the Irish people." This was rejected, but Harding voted with Lodge for its adoption.

Senator Lodge then moved to amend the Gerry Irish reservation so as to limit the declaration of principle and avoid a general declaration in this reservation. On this vote Harding voted "Nay," with Borah and Johnson, as well as Brandegee, Cummins, Watson and Smoot.

Against the Gerry Reservation.

Senator Gerry's reservation, without the Lodge amendment, was then adopted by a vote of 38 to 36 in the Committee of the Whole. Harding joined with Lodge in voting against the Gerry reservation.

When the resolution was reported from Committee of the Whole, Harding again voted "nay," as did Lodge.

The Morning Post says:

"The refusal of the Chicago convention to yield to the intrigues and menaces of de Valera shows that the Republicans are not only sensible but consistent, for a party which is so sensitive about interference of foreigners in American affairs cannot be willing to mix itself up in domestic difficulties of other countries. This same desire for caution, too, explains the somewhat cryptic declaration which Root drew up for the party platform concerning international relations. All that we can gather from it is that whatever league of nations the Republicans favor it will not be that particular brand with which the name of Wilson will always be associated, though perhaps like our own subtle Prime Minister they may in time be prepared to approve of the league for perroration purposes only."

The Daily Telegraph notes that throughout the proceedings at Chicago no encouragement whatever was given to the wild hopes of de Valera and the Irish-American extremists.

"That does not mean," it says, "that the Irish problem will not figure in the election, but it is formal recognition by party leaders that it is a British and not an American question and that American interference would only add to their present embarrassments."

The Daily Express declares that Anglo-American relations are not necessarily threatened by the revival as a plank in the Republican Party platform of the demand for preferential treatment of American ships using the Panama Canal. It adds that many things are proposed at election times which do not materialise when the elections are over.

SISTER'S VIEW OF HARDING.

Mrs. Votaw Thinks Nomination Natural to "Finest Man in the World."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—"I'm not a speck surprised. I think my brother the finest man in the world."

This statement was made by Mrs. Carolyn H. Votaw, a sister of Senator Harding of Ohio, when she heard the news of the nomination of her brother to be the standard-bearer of the Republican Party in the 1920 Presidential contest.

Mrs. Votaw, who is the wife of Dr. Heber H. Votaw, of Takoma Park, a suburb north of Washington, on the Maryland-District of Columbia boundary line, is a member of the Policewoman's Bureau of the District of Columbia Police Department. She devotes her time to the normal upbuilding of erring girls. Her husband is a clerk in the Senate Committee on the Philippines.

Speaking of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Votaw said that the former had purposely taken little part in Washington society, as she preferred to work with her husband along political lines.

"Of course," said Mrs. Votaw, "whenever persons of note came to Washington Mrs. Harding made it a point to meet them, but she was never ambitious to take her position in high circles and is a member of no club that I know of except the Congressional Club."

A story which throws a sidelight on the character of the Republican nominee was told at the Votaw home last night. Senator Harding was devoted to his mother and for a long time before she died, it was said, he never permitted a week to pass without sending her a bouquet.

Besides his sister, Senator Harding has an aunt, eighty-four years old, Mrs. Jennie Coker, whose Summer home is in Maryland, just across the District of Columbia boundary line.

DISLIKES CHICAGO PLATFORM

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, June 14.—Commenting upon the selection of Senator Harding as the Republican Presidential candidate, The Daily Chronicle recalls that THE NEW YORK TIMES as long ago as last December prophesied that the ultimate choice would lie between Lowden, Harding and Wood, and ranked Johnson's chances in a lower category—which was, says The Chronicle, "a remarkably accurate forecast."

"The platform contains one or two items—notably the remission of Panama Canal tolls on American coastwise shipping and the curious threat to Canada regarding timber—which may herald some international friction; but Harding is not the type of politician to seek friction for its own sake or for purposes of domestic electioneering, which is more than could be said of at least one of his rivals, Senator Johnson."

The Daily News thinks the selection of Harding reduces materially the heavy odds against the Democrats in the Presidential election, and it declares that the best thing they could do would be to persuade Hoover to accept their nomination in spite of everything.

The London Times says: "Whether a Republican or Democrat goes to the White House in March, 1921, is a question of American domestic politics with which foreigners have no concern. We shall welcome either as representative of the American people and we shall be prepared impartially to discuss with either in the friendliest manner many questions which affect that people and ourselves.

"Our special correspondent at Chicago states that we must be ready for a thorough readjustment of our relations with the United States and he predicts that the process will not be easy. That depends in a great measure upon ourselves. If we have a straight, clear, and honest policy in world affairs, firmly based upon those plain principles which are common to us and to Americans, we may have tiresome disputes to arrange, but we cannot doubt the result."

MOVE TO DECREASE SOUTH'S DELEGATES

SEE HIT AT F. H. HITCHCOCK

Manipulating of the Negro Vote Held Dangerous to Party—District Quotas to be Revised.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Prevention of a repetition of the quadrennial scandal in connection with Southern negro delegates is sought by a resolution providing for a change in the basis of representation in the convention within the next twelve months which was passed by the Republican convention just before adjournment yesterday.

Incidentally, the resolution, the result of which is expected to limit the representation of some Southern States to the four delegates at large, will, in the opinion of its sponsors, entirely eliminate the political power of Frank H. Hitchcock, fear of whose domination was one of the strongest motives of the party chieftains who united to prevent the nomination of General Wood.

Passage of the resolution, which was offered by Paul Howland of Ohio, a Harding supporter, made evident the main purpose of the rule previously voted on, permitting business to be transacted after the nomination of a candidate for Vice-President. That rule had been adopted at an early session, and at the time it was supposed to presage the naming of candidates ahead of the adoption of a platform. The present resolution, the "teeth" of which are hidden, is expected to bring about a sweeping reform hereafter.

Representation from the Southern States was restricted by a rule adopted four years ago, which limits a Congressional district to one delegate, unless the Republican candidate for President at the last election received 7,500 votes in that district. The effect has been to limit most of the Congressional districts in the Southern States to one delegate.

It is now proposed to go further, and a rule is likely to be adopted providing that there shall be no Congressional district delegates, except in districts where the Republican vote at the last Presidential election reached a figure yet to be determined, probably in the neighborhood of 5,000.

The representation of the Northern Republican States probably would not be greatly affected by the proposed rule, which would be likely to provide for two delegates from each Congressional district wherein the vote at the last previous Presidential election had reached a figure of approximately 10,000.

The new rule, which will have no effect until the Republican National Convention of 1924, is not likely to receive detailed consideration until after the coming election. Many of the party leaders are said to have been greatly dissatisfied with the disclosures before the Committee on Credentials, and to feel that some of the disclosures before the Senate Investigating Committee concerning the Southern delegates did the party no good. They were reported to be determined to end a condition that made likely the election of easily influenced, if not purchasable, Southern delegations. The limitation of the representation from the Southern Democratic States is believed to be the best way to end what has always been, and still threatens to be, recurring party scandal unless corrected.

The decrease in number of the Southern delegates would, in the opinion of the leaders now in control of the national organization of the Republican Party, reduce what is left of Mr. Hitchcock's influence to nothing. There was said to be a general desire among them that he shall have no connection with the national campaign this year.

ticket with him, no matter who the Democratic candidates were.

William Barnes expressed the same view. Aside from Senator Harding's qualifications for the Presidency, Mr. Barnes said he would be elected this year if for no other reason than that the people were determined to turn out the Democratic Administration.

Senator Wadsworth's handling of the situation here has made him the acknowledged leader of the party in the State. Barnes and the rest of the Old Guard will be behind him to furnish advice, but Wadsworth has shown ability as a leader, and the reactionary element is satisfied with him. The organization is expected to accept his orders from now on.

Ex-Senator Brown, as much as any other man in the convention, was responsible for the nomination of Governor Coolidge for Vice President. Wadsworth was satisfied with Lenroot, but Brown did not like the war record of the Wisconsin Senator, who voted against tabling the McLemore resolution, and advised his friends in the delegation to get behind Coolidge. The response was general and the majority of the delegates followed his advice. Brown was a Harding man from the start.

"If either Wood or Lowden had been nominated," he said, "the party would have been on the defensive, explaining the charge of excessive money spending. Furthermore, it would have been charged throughout their administration that any appointment they might make was made to pay off old debts."

The New York Governorship situation came in for discussion by the State leaders during the convention. It was generally agreed that former Judge Nathan L. Miller had eliminated himself as a possibility because of his stand in favor of Hoover. A few of Hoover's friends put forward the suggestion that Hoover himself might make a good candidate. It was pointed out that he might not be averse to accepting it on the theory that it would be a good way to keep his name before the public for the next four years. The leaders did not take the suggestions seriously.

The Republicans will hold an unofficial State convention in July, and candidates it is understood, will be selected at that time. Asked if the convention would recommend a ticket, Lafayette B. Gleason, Secretary of the State Committee, said:

"Well, it ought to be pretty well known after the convention whom the party wants."

There will be many candidates to select from, for to the half dozen already in the field it is expected that several more will be added. It is considered here that the chances of Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State, are the best.

State Leaders Praise the Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION SPECIAL, June 13.—The nomination of Harding and Coolidge is arousing little enthusiasm among the New York State delegates and their party as they speed homeward after leaving Chicago at noon today. The belief is expressed that the ticket will win because the country is "set" against the administration of President Wilson and the Democratic Party rather than by any strength of its own.

"It is an ideal ticket," said George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee. "It represents the stability and sanity the people are demanding. The convention recognized the dignity and importance of the Vice Presidency as well as that of the Presidency. Both men are strong and will run upon their records, which are clean. New York State will give this ticket more than a double record plurality because of the vote of the women. Harding and Coolidge will carry Greater New York."

"The country is to be congratulated on the selection of the ticket," said Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee. "The outstanding features are that the platform and candidates are satisfactory to the members of the party and that they will receive the enthusiastic support of the people. If the Democrats are counting on any Republican division they are doomed to disappointment. In my opinion, Harding and Coolidge will be overwhelmingly elected."

"It is a fine combination," said Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, Chairman of the Republican Women's State Executive Committee. "The country needs stability, it needs sanity and it needs fearlessness. We have these three things in the candidates. Women are essentially conservative, because they are the housekeepers of the nation, and this ticket will appeal to them."

"If it be true that Senator Harding has the qualities of President McKinley, as they say he has," said Miss Helen V. Boswell, Chairman of the Women's Division of the New York County Republican Committee, "he ought to please the women. The combination of Harding and Coolidge is a happy one. Each supplements and complements the other."

"The ticket will grow stronger week by week and I believe that the better the people become acquainted with the candidates the stronger they are going to be," said Charles S. Whitman, former Governor. "I believe that their election is certain."

F. H. La Guardia, President of the Board of Aldermen of New York City, was not over-optimistic. "Now that we have nominated the ticket," he said, "we must all put our shoulders to the wheel and work with might and main."

"It is a safe and sane ticket," said Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State. "Its slogan should be 'Safety First.'"

Some women on the train expressed dissatisfaction over the prominent part Miss Mary Garrett Hay took in the women's activities at the convention after she was out as Chairman of the Women's National Executive Committee. Miss Hay has stated that she intends to oppose Senator Wadsworth for re-election and the feeling among the women of the delegation is that she should not have continued to act in her official party capacity at Chicago if she intended to bolt a party nominee.

Mrs. Livermore was stated to be the choice of the State organization for one of the five women members of the Executive Committee of the National Committee.

DOWN DROP HOTEL RATES.

Chicago Rooms at $30 a Day Last Week Now Offered at $3.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Elon R. Brown, ex-State Senator of New York, went up to a Chicago hotel clerk to pay his bill today. He had engaged the room at $20 a day.

"It's $30 a day," said the clerk.

"What's the extra $10 for?" inquired Mr. Brown.

"Because nobody was in the room with you."

A big kick was forthcoming promptly. The New Yorker paid at only the $20 rate. But there were other convention visitors who paid and murmured not.

At one hotel a patron said to the clerk this afternoon:

"My $20 a day period is past. How much is the room if I want it for another night?"

"Three dollars," said the clerk.

Senator Harding's household staff was in a state of much excitement all day. Inez McWhorter, cook at the Harding house, said that all she had done all day was to answer the telephone and doorbell.

Senator Harding said that he would retain his seat in the Senate.

"That's my job," he said, with a laugh indicating that he would not resign his seat until after the election.

"Of course, all my plans are tentative," he said. "I have not really made any definite plans yet."

"It was all I could do," she said, "and I was awfully worried when church time came. But I didn't have to miss church. I got one of the boys from the Siamese legation next door to look out for me until I got back."

Frank Blackstone, the Senator's chauffeur, bought all the Washington, New York, Philadelphia and other papers he could find and spent the forenoon cutting out his employer's pictures and pasting them on the walls of the garage. The neighbors, too, seemed to be celebrating in Senator Harding's honor, for flags appeared above several front porches.

YORK, Pa., June 13.—Senator Harding came near being left behind in this city tonight while on his way to Washington. The special arrived at 9:10 P. M. and in the three-quarters of a minute stop he grasped the hands of a score of enthusiasts who crowded the vestibule.

"Let me down on the ground to talk to the boys," he said. He was shaking hands right and left and getting ready to speak when the engineer, no respecter of persons, gave two blasts and the train started. The candidate had to catch it on the jump.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Senator Harding, accompanied by Mrs. Harding, left for Washington about 12:35 o'clock this morning.

CALLS CONVENTION A 'SENATE CAUCUS'

DELEGATES NOT NECESSARY

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., June 13.—Under the heading, "Where There Is No Vision," The World-Herald, owned by Senator Hitchcock, until recently Democratic leader in the Senate, refers editorially today to its editorial of March 20, 1920, which bore the title "At Two in the Morning," and says:

"And Penrose—Senator Penrose—said, 'Let it be Harding—Senator Harding,' and it was Harding.

"And the evening and the morning were the fifth day. And the Senators—the Cataline conspirators—having accomplished their purposes throughout, having made a nominee worthy of the platform, signalled to the sweating, tired boys over in the Coliseum that they might finish up their chores and go home.

"It had been a great, a glorious week for the Cataline Senators. Senator Lodge, their chief, had presided over the convention and sung the initial hymn of hate.

"Senator Penrose, though a sick man in Philadelphia, had directed the strategy and bossed the job.

"Senator Watson, late paid lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers, had been Chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

"Senators Borah and Johnson had their way, and found a willing, eager helper in bludgeoning the Peace Treaty.

"Senators Smoot and Brandegee and Wadsworth and Calder had sat in the conference, 'along about eleven minutes after 2 o'clock in the morning, that decided one of their associates in the Senate should be given the nomination for President of the United States.

"Senator Harding, so far as we know, is an amiable and honest gentleman, who pays his bills promptly and goes to the Baptist Church regularly on Sunday. Before he was elected to the Senate he was Lieutenant Governor of Ohio for two years, a State Senator for four years and a partisan lieutenant of the late Joseph B. Foraker.

"By occupation he is a newspaper publisher in Marion, a city of some 25,000 people. In all his public life if he ever did anything or said anything to antagonize a single Republican voter it was by inadvertance. He didn't mean to do it. His record, like himself, is colorless and conservatively—very conservatively—respectable. He never raised a disturbance. He never stepped on a brother Republican's toes. He never proposed anything radical, or strange, or new. He is no eagle to fly open-eyed toward the blazing sun.

Called a Wise Selection.

From The Kansas City Journal.

From something more than the usual abundance of available material, men who measure up to the Presidential stature demanded by the conditions now confronting the nation, the Republicans have made an eminently wise selection in the nomination of Senator Warren G. Harding to that exalted office. Only one man could win and the man who did win commands unequivocally the confidence of the party which he has served with such distinguished ability. He commands as well the confidence of the entire country.

Thinks All Factions Can Unite.

From The St. Paul Pioneer Press.

First impressions of the ticket nominated at Chicago yesterday by the Republican Convention are that it is hind part before. Calvin Coolidge, the resolute little Massachusetts Governor, with his great gift of common sense, his fine power of expression and his splendid record on the side of law and order during the riots attending the Boston policemen's strike has fired the popular imagination as few public men of recent years have succeeded in firing it, and at first blush it seems strange to find his name second rather than first on the ticket. But first impressions are not always correct impressions, and a little analysis of the ticket nominated by the convention will indicate, we think, that the Republican Party, if it has not succeeded in arousing such enthusiasm as would have attended the nomination of General Wood, has at least presented to the voters affiliated with that party a ticket upon which all factions can unite—and this, after all, was one of the principal problems confronted by the delegates.

Says Candidate Is Like Convention.

From The Des Moines Register.

The nomination of Senator Harding has at least this merit, that it is perfectly representative of the convention that chose him. Harding is a conservative acceptable to the stalwart branch of the Republican party, and that branch typified by Penrose, Crane, Knox, Watson and Smoot was dominant in the convention. What the nominee says in his speech of acceptance may and should define the party's stand better than the noncommittal platform.

Dubbed Feeblest Nominee Since '76.

From The Springfield Republican.

Senator Harding impresses one as the feeblest Republican candidate for the Presidency since 1876, if he be judged solely by his personality, training, education, experience in office, quality of high leadership and actual public achievement. No one would say that in these respects he compared today with Hughes, Taft, Roosevelt, McKinley, Harrison, Blaine and Garfield when they received their nominations.

Gives Full Credit to Senators.

From The Indianapolis Star.

United States Senators, after having framed a platform in which they bow in adoration before their own supernatural wisdom and nobility, have nominated this ticket as the result of their own plans and specifications.

It remains to be seen whether it can be elected.

Deemed a Happy Solution.

From The Omaha Bee.

The Republican National Convention, called upon by unprecedented conditions in American political life to nominate a candidate for President whose personality and private and public career would have the strongest appeal to the cool, deliberate, patriotic judgment of the people, found a happy solution in the selection of Senator Harding of Ohio. His entire career, both in business and politics, has been typically American, and shows striking parallels with those of other famous Ohio men, particularly Hayes, Garfield and McKinley.

Calls Ticket Strong as Steel.

From The Milwaukee Sentinel.

Unbought, unbullied and unbossed. Such, as the event proved, was the character of the Republican National Convention of 1920. Money spent like water in the primaries did not taint nor brow-beating blatancy coerce its choice of the men who will lead the party to victory in November. It is a ticket strong as steel, American as Theodore Roosevelt, Republican as Abraham Lincoln and William McKinley, "clean as a hound's tooth."

A Candidate to Be Proud Of.

From The Detroit Free Press.

In Warren G. Harding the members of the Republican party have a candidate for the Presidency to whom they can look with satisfaction and confidence and in whom they may justly take pride. If he is elected, Senator Harding may be depended upon to give the country a thoroughly American administration, so far as his capabilities go, and his intimate knowledge of the ways and works of Congress ought to be a guarantee in a man of his temperament that the legislative and executive branches will work in harmony, each duly recognizing the other's rights and perquisites.

Called Old Guard Triumph.

From The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The nomination of Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio as Republican candidate for President constitutes a triumph for the Old Guard and the reactionary ring of the party.

COLBY TICKET DEFEATS BRYAN OPPOSITION

Capital Delegates Unpledged—Secretary of State May Speak for President.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, was being discussed today as the possible spokesman for President Wilson at the Democratic National Convention. The delegates ticket headed by Mr. Colby, according to official returns from the city-wide primary announced today by the Secretary of the Central Democratic Committee, won by an overwhelming majority over the so-called Bryan ticket.

Because of Mr. Colby's relatively short residence in Washington, the opposing delegation made strenuous opposition to the inclusion of his name.

The District delegation, including 12 members with half a vote each, will go to San Francisco uninstructed. It will make an effort to have included in the party platform a plank declaring for suffrage in the District of Columbia.

PRINTER'S RULE KEPT IN HARDING'S POCKET

He Said Last Week He'd Rather Make Up Front Page Than be President.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Of course they are telling all the anecdotes they can remember concerning Warren G. Harding. "By the way," says the man in the street to anybody he meets, "have you heard this one about Harding?" It goes on all day among that part of the convention crowd which remains in Chicago. Some of the narrators really know the candidate and can talk interestingly of his personality and doings.

"Do you know," observed one of these, "that the Senator habitually carries a printer's rule in his pocket? I met him the other evening, when nobody about Chicago seemed to think he had much chance of getting the nomination. He happened to fish out the rule.

"'Well,' he said, laughing, 'I may never get to be President, but it's all right. I'd rather make up the front page of a daily newspaper than go to the White House.'"

They all agree that he's a human being, despite his dignified bearing and stately appearance. His favorite sport, if it can be called that, is poker. As will be recalled, one of the first comments he made about the convention result was that it reminded him of drawing a full house to a pair of eights.

HARDING EASY TO BEAT, SAYS GOV. EDWARDS

He Declares That a Democrat of Progressive Type Can Win the Election.

SEA GIRT, N. J., June 13.—"Senator Harding is the easiest man in the Republican Party for the Democrats to beat," said Governor Edward I. Edwards tonight, in commenting on the result of the Republican National Convention at Chicago.

The Governor, whose friends have been booming him for the Democratic nomination, in his further comment on the Republican candidate, said:

"The nomination of Senator Harding shows the 'Old Guard' is in control again and would not permit the nomination of a man with progressive ideas and tendencies. It will be easy for a Democrat of the progressive type to be elected over Senator Harding. I believe that such a Democrat could have won from any of the leading aspirants for the Republican nomination at Chicago."

He added that "winning over Harding will be very easy."

Counteracts "Acid-Mouth"

Twice-yearly examinations by a reliable dentist, and the twice-daily use of Pebeco Tooth Paste seem to be the most effective means of combating harmful mouth acids. Pebeco simply encourages the saliva to do its normal daily work, and there is no tooth cleanser, mouth wash, or neutralizer of "Acid-Mouth" that can equal natural alkaline saliva.

PUT CHICAGO BOOMS INTO COLD STORAGE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The impulse to describe the raceaway proceedings here today in terms of departure of a big circus is almost irresistible. A moment's reflection, however, brings to mind such obvious differences in procedure and purpose that this seems hardly fair—to the circus.

After all, the migration of a circus is as orderly as a big corporation's card index; moreover, when it leaves a place it's going somewhere. Not so the assorted candidacies which just missed success by a trifle of anything from 402 votes down. The majority of those who yesterday still had their lightning rods protruding from elaborate and highly organized headquarters, today have just simply quit. That is so obvious it would not be worth mentioning were it not by way of serving for contrast to the statement that a few, to get back to the circus, have really gone into Winter quarters. They know it is going to be a long Winter and a frigid one, but already one hears those same whispers of "just wait till four years from now," which in 1916, emanated from the entourages of various politically ambitious men whose names, even, one cannot recall now. Doubtless one could proceed by arithmetic retrogression, four years at a time back to the beginning of things, and find at the end of each period this same last-ditch optimism with respect to "next time."

This is not surprising when one takes into consideration the presence in each and every boom of a staff of eager and industrious persons who were well paid during the candidacy period and who were looking forward to excellent jobs for four years, if only their particular candidate proved to be the winner. What more natural than that it should occur to such, very early on the morning after, that there still remained a way to avoid the painful surgery involved in being separated from the payroll?

Surely Governor this, or Senator that, or Mr. the other can see that all this work should not go for nothing. Surely he can be made to understand that even a great nation can be trusted to learn in four years what a mistake it made when it overlooked the modest, but self-sacrificingly willing men in question. And what could be fairer than that the organization should be maintained, drilled and made ready, just so the nation may be rendered a little patriotic assistance at the moment of its inevitable awakening to its own blunder.

That is why certain hundreds of thousands of campaign buttons and certain tons of campaign posters (on which by happy chance no date was specified for the elevation of the subject pictured), and certain costly political lists are on their way already to storage warehouses to be brought out and dusted off and put into service in 1924. Meantime those fortunate men whose campaign ammunition is going into reserve instead of into the discard are not to be deserted by those unselfish servitors who devoted themselves so faithfully to the boom task and who so narrowly missed.

What a pity to waste all the desperate struggle! "Of course, Governor, we can't keep right on campaigning openly, you know, but just a little judicious publicity to keep your name before the public. It's such a pity to let all this die when we came so near to getting across this time."

Some of these men really believe it. The convention adjourned on Saturday, so how is one to disprove their earnest expositions of what would have happened had it gone on till Monday? How refute the imposing column of delegates, set down on paper for one's conviction, who would have been "uncovered" just as soon as it became finally evident that this one and that one and the other one could not be nominated?

The most genuinely disappointed boomers here are the Hoover backers. For the most part they were distinctly not professionals. Their boom had many of the aspects of a "call," to which response had been made by men with a mission; they believed sincerely in their cause and their candidate, and, amateurs that they were and are, they hoped and expected to the last that this little affair here would resolve itself into an earnest, unselfish and independent hunt by 984 patriots for the man best qualified to uphold the traditions of Washington and Lincoln before the nation. They know better now.

Passing from circuses to soap bubbles, it is astonishing how quickly a full-fledged, boom, with all the appurtenances, impedimenta, paraphernalia and personnel appertaining thereto, can disappear, once it is all over. Last week it seemed there was nothing more permanent, nothing more important, nothing more deeply significant in all Chicago than that rallying point of the plain people, the headquarters of Hiram W. Johnson, Senator in the United States Congress from the State of California.

Three hours after Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio had rudely elbowed aside the people's man and taken unto himself the destiny that history so manifestly had prepared for the Californian, there were three persons in the Auditorium Hotel quarters where had congregated vast throngs of men and women who still remembered that one could be a Democrat with a small "d" as well as with a big one, and who knew that Hiram, and Hiram alone, could save us from those foreigners. Gone were banners and bands and badges, while, huddled into a corner where a single electric light picked them out from the surrounding gloom, the three ruefully contemplated the ruins and ruminated over the consequences to the soap bubble when some roughly experimental person lets the air out of it.

It is conceivable that by and by the Congress and the Auditorium and the other boom centres will be cleaned up, because four years ago on the day after they looked very much as they do now, and a week ago, when the first of the faithful arrived, they were in goood order. Manifestly they must have been cleaned up in the meantime.

But today this part of the town is a mess. Every one knows that men who separately are orderly and neat and careful enough can make a terrible wreck of things when they get together to play poker. Just so, when they gather to shuffle the political deck, they are apt to mistake the carpet for an ash tray, the bath tub for a waste paper basket, and so on.

The only busy people here today are sundry persons with fat checkbooks industriously paying the final reckoning. All sorts of lavish expenditures have been made in the heat and excitement of the last days, and now comes the proverbial piper with his bill. It is a long one and some of the items are curious and interesting.

The Great Store-wide Movement Continues

Monday about ten million dollars of merchandise—summer goods, holiday goods, exclusive goods—all but a few price-restricted articles (not more than $50,000 worth) is at the disposal of the public at 20 per cent. off the actual prices.

Tomorrow a Story of the Stars and Stripes for Young Americans will be told, to be cut out and preserved as a true history of the flag of the nation of their birth, a story to give them opportunity, to instruct our foreign-born comrades, who have chosen our country for their future home.

Henceforth the United States must be the home of true-hearted Americans by birth and by sincere naturalization papers.

No country in Europe would permit a native American to remain in its bounds who was antagonistic to its government.

This one house employs at times in the year nearly seven thousand persons, and it claims that every one must be loyal to its principles and work, and no honest person would be allowed to remain in its service if disloyal.

The United States will never be safe to live in unless we are all united under the Stars and Stripes that represent our beliefs and standards.

The Music of Summer

EVERYBODY wants music in the summer months. There is so much of music everywhere—in the wonderful dawns, in the long twilights, in the roses just blooming, in the goldenrod that is coming later, in the cool hills and on the beaches, in the country where the trout stream gurgles over the stones under the trees—SO much of music EVERYWHERE, it gets into the heart. And it must be expressed, in song and in dance.

There are more than seventy makes, styles, sizes and grades of pianos, player-pianos, and reproducing pianos in the Wanamaker Piano Salons.

MUSIC-producers, all of them. Not merely sound-producers—we wont offer such to our customers. Pianos for those who can play. Player-pianos for those who cannot play. And the CHICKERING AMPICO Reproducing Piano for those who want the finest pianoforte music played by such masters as GODOWSKY, LEVITZKI, MOISEIWITSCH, RUBENSTEIN, and the great Russian composer-pianist, RACHMANINOFF.

If you cannot come to the Salons we shall be glad to have one of our representatives call upon you and advise you, with absolute impartiality, what would be the best instrument for the particular environment in which you wish it to be.

We have a number of good used pianos at reasonable prices, which some might prefer for temporary Summer homes.

Original Art Displays

"Those interested in things that take one from the beaten track of art and lead into its fascinating byways will be pleased by the special exhibit now being held in the Little Art Galleries in the Wanamaker Store.

"Distinctly original masks by W. T. Benda, eight miniature groups with wax figures by Dwight Franklin and seven ship models collected and built by Ellsworth Ford are now on exhibit here. Although entirely different in character, the work of each of these men equally intrigues the imagination.

"All three of these artists have carried to success that which was in its beginning only a pastime with them. Each began to express himself in these respective fashions for the pure pleasure of creation. Today all are able to offer to the world something that is unique in art."

FRENCH WELCOME JOHNSON'S DEFEAT

WISHES HIM "GOOD LUCK"

Temps Calls Him "a Man of Middle Courses"—Sees the League Killed if He Is Elected.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 13.—The Matin will publish tomorrow morning an article by Stephane Lauzanne, its editor, declaring that Europe should be glad that the Republicans named Senator Harding as their candidate, because they might have named Senator Johnson. He believes that despite the Republican platform, Harding would be a President well inclined toward France.

In an editorial published three days ago, M. Lauzanne predicted the nomination of Harding, basing his calculations largely upon his coming from Ohio.

"Who is this man?" he asks. "He is not the anti-European, anti-Japanese Johnson, who was so badly distanced. He is another sort of man. I said the other day that France had no business mixing in the quarrels of American political parties. It is, however, impossible not to manifest the great satisfaction which this choice gives us. For there was among the Republican possibilities a shadow very disquieting for us. It was Johnson, whose thoughts and whose heart have never been with us. He is fortunately disposed of. On the other hand, the figure of Senator Harding, a man of rectitude, of work and of good will, deserves all our sympathy.

"Harding is a self-made man. The proprietor of a small newspaper in a small city—Marion, Ohio—he is adored by all those who have worked for him and with him. During the war he was pro-ally from the start. His percentage of loyalty to America and affection for France is 100. He roused all his State, raising funds for the Red Cross and preaching against the Boche.

"And, more than that, Harding is the intimate friend and preferred candidate of Myron T. Herrick, whose name Paris and France will never forget. All that comes to us from Mr. Herrick is good. 'Friends of our friends.' With all our heart we wish good luck to Senator Harding." The Temps tonight publishes a long review of the political situation in America, in which it calls Harding a man of middle course and says he certainly affords a better prospect for France than Johnson. The Temps then dicusses the Republican platform at length and finds it very hard to swallow in so far as it relates to foreign affairs. It says that it would kill the League of Nations. It takes up the theory that wars can be prevented by an international tribunal and quotes President Madison as opposing the use of force against one of the States of the Union and favoring the settlement of differences by the Supreme Court. It adds, however, that this system did not prevent the Civil War.

"For us who live on this side of the Atlantic," says the Temps, "it is clear that the system of a Supreme Court will not suffice to assure the peace of Europe. Despite its theory, we again point out to our American friends that it did not prevent the War of Secession. However, we must take into consideration this American point of view if we wish to be ready to deal with the United States, should Mr. Harding become President. Against the League of Nations the Chicago platform proposes a project of international accord by which justice would be rendered among nations by impartial courts with the additional resource of a meeting of the nations in time of danger of war. If the Republican candidate wins in November, it is probable that it will be by some such propositions that the Government of the United States will seek in 1921 to replace the Wilson covenant and to regulate the relations of America with foreign Governments.

"This perspective gives great importance to the work which the international committee of jurists is going to begin June 16 at The Hague for the elaboration of a plan for a permanent Court of International Justice. The United States will be represented by the eminent Republican statesman Elihu Root. It is to be hoped that this work, organized by the League of Nations and necessary to the execution of the treaty of Versailles, will create a basis upon which the United States, even if directed by the enemies of the treaty, can help in the maintenance of world peace. But we must remember in the meanwhile that the responsibility for European peace rests, above all, upon France."

ITALIANS EVACUATE BESIEGED PORTS

Dispatch of Troops from Italy Hindered by Strikes of Sailors and Railroad Men.

By AUSTIN WEST.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 13.—After a furious night battle lasting over four hours Avlona has been saved from capture by Albanian rebels through a desperate bayonet charge on the part of Italian Alpine troops.

When the attack began shortly after midnight on Friday the city was already isolated, for all communications had been destroyed except from the sea. The Albanian insurgents, whose number is diversely estimated at 5,000, 10,000 and 15,000, had mined every road, blown up every bridge, and occupied all the adjacent heights, whereon they had planted batteries of 6-inch guns wrested from the Italians earlier in the month.

While the main body of the besiegers approached within 800 yards of the town these batteries directed a heavy fire on the naval base, which was vigorously replied to from the Italian warships. The shelling completely wiped out three villages, and prevented the arrival of reinforcements.

Defenders Attacked from Rear.

At 4 o'clock the plight of the city became almost hopeless, owing to the treachery of the Mussulman element, who made a savage onslaught on the defenders from the rear. When the bayonet charge of the Alpini finally put the rebels to flight, leaving behind them 400 dead, the Italians captured a battery of guns and took several thousand prisoners, among whom were many Turkish officers and Albanian gendarmes.

The fighting over, the Italians proceeded to arrest Aly Islan, Mayor of Avlona, and all the dwellers in the Mohammedan quarter. These were put aboard a steamer and immediately deported to the Island of Sarena. Their fate is unknown. A residence belonging to Osman Effendi, former Prefect of Avlona, who commanded the insurgents, and Ossaed Klezim, his army chief, was burned to the ground.

The civil population, together with Said Kemel, actual Prefect of Avlona, have been transported to Brindisi.

There are uncertain reports about the fate of the garrison at Scutari, but those at Santi Quaranta, Duleigno and Antivari have been driven to embark. Durazzo continues to maintain a plucky resistance, but every preparation has been made for its abandonment.

The dispatch of men and munitions to Albania, where a national insurrection is said to be now in progress everywhere, has been impeded through partial strikes of seamen and railwaymen in various ports and cities in lower, central and upper Italy, proclaimed for this very purpose.

Sanguinary conflicts have occurred at Trieste, where companies of arditi destined for Albania after refusing to embark joined in a common revolt with Socialists and plunged the town into anarchy. The rioters have mined railway bridges to thwart passage of trains.

ROME, June 13 (Associated Press).—A semi-official statement issued today, describing the Albanian attack on Avlona, admits that two Italian detachments at Hill 115 and Giorni after heroic resistance surrendered to overwhelming forces.

The Italian casualties at Avlona, according to the statement, did not exceed ten killed and fifty wounded. Reinforcements are now arriving and the critical situation has been overcome, the statement asserts.

The Italian General Cavallo was captured in bitter fighting which occurred in the outskirts of the city. Italian warships bombarded the insurgents and razed the villages of Dukati, Trias, Radina and Kanina.

Dispatches received today state that on June 6 Albanian rebels commenced isolated attacks in the region of Kanina, Giorni, Dukati and Tepeleni to the south and southwest of Avlona. The Italian forces opposed desperate resistance, giving way only before the superior strength of the enemy. The garrisons of Tepeleni and Dukati capitulated, but the other garrisons retreated.

News of the fall of Tepeleni and Dukati to the Albanians caused a feeling of sadness here today, as 70 officers and 800 men of the garrisons were taken prisoner.

The Idea Nazionale says: "The Albanian insurgents have been strengthened by American equipped Serbians wearing American uniforms." It adds: "It is true the offensive by Serbian and Jugoslav troops aims to chase Italy from the Balkans."

The Corriere d'Italia says that after the recall of General Raimondo recently the command of Avlona was entrusted to General Bobbio.

Shall New York Yield to Manchester and Liverpool?

A RECENT report from the University of Manchester, England, shows that their endowment fund has received subscriptions amounting to over $800,000 from business firms and individuals of the city. The University of Liverpool is likewise receiving generous support from its community.

English business men have suffered from the war—perhaps even more than Americans. They, too, have been besought for funds for other worthy causes. But they realize clearly that the education of their young men and women is an all-important part of the recovery and future progress of their business and industry. They have found ways and means to support this work.

If New York is not to yield her commercial leadership to other cities she must maintain leadership in her education. New York University has been training over 10,000 this year. She stands ready to supply more and better training—if she is adequately financed to do it.

New York University needs $6,450,000. She must have this sum as a minimum if she is to train New York's men and women as they want to be trained and ought to be trained—and as New York needs to have them trained.

Manchester with less than 800,000 people has given over $800,000 to the University of Manchester; New York, with its 6,000,000 people, should not find it difficult to give $6,450,000 to New York University.

New York can do it. New York business men will do it if they realize how vital it is to every interest in the city.

If you desire further details, one of our graduates will gladly call at your convenience. His facts will amaze you.

But if you already realize what it means to New York, send in your subscription now (check made payable to Charles H. Sabin, Treasurer).

MEXICAN CENSORS STILL STOP NEWS

Carranza's System of Suppressing Facts About Mexico Has Not Been Changed.

SOME TALK OF REFORMS

Special to The New York Times.

LAREDO, Texas, June 12.—Until the Mexican censorship as now organized and operated is abolished or materially modified the world will not get the whole truth concerning conditions in the country south of the Rio Grande. For a month, or since the overthrow of the Carranza régime, the factions now in control in Mexico City have been through, their official spokesmen, daily pronouncing the doom of the censorship machine. It is always "Manana," and in the meanwhile the censorship continued as of old. Even the same censors who, under the Carranza Government, made the transmission of news, except by courier and word of mouth, impossible, are still in charge and just as busy deleting or suppressing outright press and other information regarding the situation or the news of the day in the Mexican Republic.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, who arrived last night from Mexico City, heard on all sides, from Mexicans as well as from foreigners, protests against the censorship as it is enforced in Mexico at this time. The present censoring machine was organized during the Presidency of Victoriano Huerta, was made more strict by Carranza, and has continued in operation under the new Government.

There are two censors who are detailed to pass on all press messages which are filed for transmission by cable or telegraph in Mexico City. The newspaper correspondent is compelled to file three copies of his message, one for the President of the republic, a second for the Minister of Gobernacion, while the manager of the cable company, is kindly permitted to retain the third copy and put it on the wires provided he can get the O. K. of the censors.

The newspaper correspondents are not permitted to know the fate of their messages, and there is no way open to them by which they can ascertain from the cable company or the Government whether or not the messages have been killed, or deleted. They even have no way of finding out whether or not any message has been put on the wires, as the employes of the transmission companies are forbidden under penalty of immediate dismissal or even more severe punishments to give any information to the senders of the messages. It is also understood that outgoing mail continues the subject of censorship the same as wire messages.

Newspaper correspondents, under the existing Mexican law, always have starting them in the face Article 33 of the Constitution of 1917, which gives to the President absolute authority to banish from the country any person of foreign citizenship who shall "meddle in any way whatsoever in the political affairs of the country." Under Carranza telling the truth about Mexico was "meddling," as defined in the 1917 constitution. While in Mexico City THE TIMES correspondent was informed of the facts in the cases of several Americans who in recent years were "thirty-threed" out of Mexico. One of these was a prominent American lawyer, for years a leader in the American colonf; another was an Associated Press correspondent and a third was a newspaper man of independent affiliations.

The new government, of which De la Huerta is the head, has not up to this time applied Article 33 against any person so far as THE TIMES correspondent knows. In fact, the new president, as well as General Obregon, are reported to be in favor of the modification of Article 33.

Last week railway traffic from Mexico City to the American border, via the Laredo route, was interrupted for two days as a result of bandit activities. The best private information obtainable in Mexico City was that two bridges near Monterey had been burned by the bandits. No official information was obtainable but during those two days neither mails nor passengers from the north arrived in Mexico City. The writer suggested that it might be well to cable the facts to the United States. The persons to whom he made the suggestion laughed and strongly advised that no such message be filed.

He was further informed that the old Carranza censorship machine, which is still functioning, would not permit the message to go through, and that if it was filed it might mean a trip to the Minister of Gobernacion.

On June 2 last there occured in Mexico City a military parade, in which it was officially announced that 30,000 soldiers participated. It is certain that Blasco Ibanez, during his stay in Mexico, never saw anything like that parade. It is probable that nothing like it was ever seen on this hemisphere. THE TIMES correspondent filed a friendly story in which brief references were made to the uniforms, equipment and mounts of the men as well as to the fact that the thousands of Mexicans who lined the Avenidas looked on in silence as Yaquis and armed men of Michoacan, Chihuahua, Zacatecas, and others filed by. The impression prevails in Mexico City that such stories as were written did not get by the censors barrage.

There are other instances in which it is believed the censors have killed recently stories from American correspondents. However, the correspondent has no way of finding out until a week has passed, when an inspection of the columns of his newspaper will show whether his dispatch was permitted to be sent out of Mexico.

THE TIMES correspondent talked with three of the highest officials of the present Government regarding the censorship as now enforced. All agreed that a modification was needed and all were in favor of something being done right away. Two said they would speak to the President about it "manana." In the meantime the censorship remains in force, at least it was up to the time THE TIMES correspondent left Mexico City.

SHOOTS GIRL FOR THIEF.

Jersey City Man Fires Through Door, Wounding Morning Caller.

Mistaking fifteen-year-old Viola Panucci, of 44 Sixth Street, Jersey City, for a thief, Louis Dileo, of 467 Grove Street, Jersey City, early yesterday morning fired a shot through the door of the apartment and so badly injured the girl that she is dying in the Jersey City Hospital, with a bullet in her back.

Before she became unconscious she told the police that she had called to borrow money from Dileo.

Dileo explained the shooting by saying that he had heard someone at the door and suspecting that it might have been a thief, fired. He denied that he had heard the girl call out to him. He also denies that he had any reason to suspect that the girl would visit his home at that hour of the morning.

"If the girl recovers a charge of incorrigibility will be made against her, the police say, and that in the meantime they are holding Dileo at the station house.

Two Weeks More Of Very Low Milk Prices

TWO more weeks in June. Two weeks more when milk may be had at the lowest prices of the year.

If you could realize what a bargain a quart of milk is at this month's prices, surely you would eat more milk.

There are 180 Sheffield stores in Gerater New York where you can get a quart of milk in your own container for 10 cents.

There is no other way in which you could invest 10 cents and get so much for it.

There is no other food at any price so good for you.

July is but two weeks away. The pastures dry up. The milk supply slackens. The increase in price is inevitable. July is the turning point. Further increases are bound to occur until the peak is reached in December.

But now milk is cheap. There is an abundance of it. At no other time is there such a flow. At no other time are the prices so low.

Do not think of milk as a drink, as a beverage. Milk is full of solid food. Everything that nature intended you to eat is combined in a drop of milk in just the right balance. Try a quart of milk a day for a while, and see for yourself what wonderful things milk will do for you.

Best Becomes Biggest

Broad foundations of value must underlie the greatness of any industry.

Fulton's foundation is the simple fact of greater service and the greatest economy achievable in a basic human necessity.

Sugar production, primarily of the soil, depends secondarily on the machinery or process that extracts the juice from the cane. The Fulton cane sugar mill equipment makes more than 2 per cent greater extraction than any other mill can make out of the cane, and the higher percentage of extraction is Fulton's exclusive development.

Pioneers in the making of sugar machinery, the Fulton Company today are the only manufacturers in the world who manufacture only sugar machinery and the complete mechanical equipment of a plantation, including the power plant—the whole embracing every stage in the handling of sugar from the cartip to the delivery of the juice.

Insured efficiency and protection of the Fulton equipment against break-down during the comparatively short crushing season has solved or surmounted the gravest difficulty which can confront the sugar producers—through a service that is almost without a peer in any industry. Fulton's universal distribution of duplicate parts and the maintenance of a field service of engineers and executives in the great cane sugar centers are two of the reasons why Fulton stands alone at the head of milling equipment makers—and an elemental reason why Fulton equipment enters into plantation values.

Fulton mills and crushers uphold their long established standard for low maintenance, long life, high extraction and maximum capacity.

The Fulton Iron Works Company enjoys a fundamental advantage of central location at St. Louis as a manufacturing site unsurpassed in relation to labor, raw material, rates and shipping facilities with about equal access to all of the great American ports—rendering the shipper independent of embargoes, strikes or tie-ups in any one section, and assuring timely delivery to all parts of the world.

Wolf, conductor of the first train, walked back on the express tracks. With aid of his electric torch he found the body of Killeen 160 feet south of the Astor Place station. Price's body was discovered about 140 feet north of the station. Both had been badly mangled.

The bodies were removed to the Mercer Street police station and traffic on the express tracks, which had been halted from Brooklyn Bridge, was resumed. Allan was treated in the Brooklyn Bridge station by an ambulance surgeon from Volunteer Hospital, who found he had suffered a compound fracture of the right arm and possible internal injuries.

He was unconscious, and later when he had recovered somewhat at his home, 541 Hudson Street, his physician would not permit him to discuss the accident.

Says Guard Was Talking to Girl.

James Henry Williams, who said he was a salesman for the Ford Motor Car Company, with headquarters at Chicago, said he thought he was the only witness to the accident. He told the police of the Mercer Street station that the train guard, Killeher, was in the rear car talking to a young girl when he (Williams) noticed that the rear door was half open.

"I boarded the train at Mott Avenue," Williams said, "and when we reached Fourteenth Street a number of women boarded the train. I gave my seat to a woman, and so did Allan, who had been seated beside me. I then stood on the platform. Next I noticed that the left rear door of the car was half open—I thought I was in the first car of the train—and immediately I looked for the guard.

"As I went into the car behind to call the guard's attention to the open door I am sure I noticed Allan on the platform. I missed a man who had been standing on the platform, and ran back shouting that a man had fallen off the train. The guard pulled the emergency switch and the train came to a stop. Then I missed Allan. We found him some distance down the tracks—about 100 yards from the rear of the train, I think, and carried him back to the train. He had a miraculous escape."

According to Interborough officials Allan did not fall off the train but was found clinging to the safety gate when the train came to a stop.

"When I went back to look for the guard," Williams continued, "I found him talking to a young girl. He did not respond very quickly when I told him I was certain some one had fallen from the train, and wanted to see the open door for himself before putting on the emergency brakes.

"The platform from which the men fell was crowded, and the seven or eight men standing there were jockeying for comfortable positions. The door was half open when I first noticed it, but when I returned with the guard it had swung fully open."

In his report to the police Williams made no reference to the statement by Interborough officials that the men who were killed had been under the influence of liquor. He left on business early last night for Springfield, Mass., before the investigation by the Interborough had been completed.

According to Superintendent Merritt the train left the Jerome Avenue station promptly at 12:30 o'clock.

"When it reached Grand Central," he added, "three men, two of whom at least had been drinking, boarded the train and took positions on the rear platform of the second car from the last. The guard, S. Killeher, was in his proper position on the forward platform of the rear car.

"Between Grand Central and Fourteenth Street, Killeher, who had been watching the men on the platform just ahead, noticed that one of them had taken sick and was standing between the cars, while one of his friends supported him. A third man slapped him on the back. The man who was sick was leaning over the door control handle, and Killeher noticed that he had reached out over between the cars. It is quite possible that one of these men set in motion the mechanism which caused the door to open.

"Killeher, however, told the men that they were in a dangerous position—standing between the cars—and they moved back to the platform on which they had been standing, only to find, we think, that the door upon which they had been leaning had opened in the manner described. The door can be opened only from the control handle. Two of the men fell out and were killed, and a third man was struck by one of the upright pillars and then was thrown back onto the train, obtaining a grip on the safety gate.

"He was found clinging to the safety gate when the train came to a halt. The conductor, F. Wolf, went back with his electric torch and found the motorman of the express train following wondering why he had been 'tripped up.' The tripper device had come into contact with one of the bodies. The bodies were then found and the trains proceeded to Brooklyn Bridge."

The locks on all the doors of the car from which Price and Killeen fell to death were said to be in perfect order, following an examination of the car at the Jerome Avenue car barns last night by T. G. O'Connor, an expert mechanic employed by the Interborough, and Deputy Public Service Commissioner Charles V. Hailey, Jr.

Mr. O'Connor described the "tripper" as a hanging brake which stops the train when hit. He said that one of the men, after falling from the train, landed on the tracks and when his body struck the "tripper" the express which followed came to a halt so abruptly that only the first car had passed over the body.

A further examination into the accident will be held this morning in the office of the Public Service Commissioner.

ADMIT DELEGATION SPLIT.

Massachusetts Leaders Say Democrats Are Divided as to Candidates.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 13.—Senator David I. Walsh and Chairman M. A. O'Leary of the Democratic State Committee admit that the Massachusetts delegation to the San Francisco convention will start divided into more factions than any previous delegation as to the Presidential nominee, the platform and the National Democratic Committeemen.

One faction, led by Daniel H. Coakley and District Attorney J. C. Pelletier, one of the big four delegates at large, has decided to start tomorrow in a special car, whereas the "regular" party will not start until next Sunday. Another group will go under the guidance of Francis J. Finneran, President of the Democratic Club of Massachusetts.

Senator Walsh denied the report that he would accompany the Pelletier-Coakley party. "I believe," he said, relative to the Democratic Convention, "that there will be a sifting out process and that it will be a long period before the nomination is reached. So far as the Massachusetts delegation is concerned, I believe it will be split among several candidates."

While a majority of the delegation is said to be divided between McAdoo and Palmer, John H. Backus, Assistant United States Attorney, declared there were Wilson men who would stand up for the President on the League of Nations issue.

"I am a candidate for the position of National Committeeman on the League of Nations issue," he said, "and I shall stick, even if the Wilson votes number only half a dozen."

NEW WATERBURY BOMBING.

Worker's Family Stunned by Explosion Which Wrecks Room.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 13.—Residents of the north end of the city were startled tonight by a bomb explosion at 26 Division Street, which resulted in the almost complete demolition of the sleeping room of Charles Russo, a stocking employe of the Chase Metal Works, in which he and his wife and three children were abed. The explosion severely stunned the entire household, which included three other persons, all relatives of the family.

According to the police the affair was the work of a bomb thrower and occurred at almost the same hour that the explosion occurred at the home of John H. Goss two weeks ago.

Virgani Amattini, 39, his son, Giuseppe, 19, and Antonio Garges, 40, were detained soon after the arrival of the police.

The most popular "XXth Century" Cooler we make for business use—Style 560, rich mahogany finish. We also make a handsome embossed de luxe style for banks and finely finished offices and an "All-white" cooler.

More Efficient, Sanitary and Economical Equipment

To serve drinking water in a sanitary way means better health and greater efficiency of employees—and increased patronage for hotels and restaurants. Pure water cannot be served pure from an unsanitary container in which dirty or germ-laden ice comes in contact with the water. Such coolers are dangerous. They cause illness and epidemics.

"XXth CENTURY" COOLER

The "XXth Century" Cooler is absolutely sanitary. The ice cannot get into the water and contaminate it. Dust and germs in the air cannot reach it. The patented "C & H" push faucet will not become clogged and foul, nor drip after pressure is released.

The water from a "XXth Century" Cooler is always as cool and refreshing as that from a woodland spring—never disagreeably and harmfully cold. The cooler soon saves its cost in ice savings because its "Fibrotta" ice container (an exclusive feature) is a non-conductor which keeps the heat out and the cold in.

"C & H" Dispensers for serving beverages at soda fountains are as sanitary and economical of ice as "XXth Century" Coolers. No dirty ice can contaminate or dilute their contents.

"Fibrotta" WARE

For business offices, hotels, stores, factories, institutions and public buildings, rich mahogany colored "Fibrotta" equipment is not only the best looking, but the most durable, sanitary and economical equipment on the market.

"Fibrotta" is made in one piece, under tremendous hydraulic pressure. It has no cracks or seams to catch and hold dirt. It will not rust, warp, swell, leak or dent out of shape. We make "Fibrotta" pails, fire pails, waste baskets, umbrella jars, spittoons, tubs, keelers or small tubs, waste jars, etc. They are far more durable than articles of metal or earthenware. They are exceptionally attractive in appearance and easy to clean on account of their hard, glasslike finish.

If you cannot get the "XXth Century" Cooler or "Fibrotta" ware through your dealer, write or telephone us.

Kitchen Comfort

IF YOU, Mr. Man, had to prepare three meals a day in a hot kitchen and lean over steaming pots, you would quickly buy a G-E Fan and prepare your meals in comfort.

Then be fair to your wife and provide her with the same refreshing "fan comfort" that you enjoy in your restaurant, subway and office.

G-E Fans

Dependable G-E Fans, made by the General Electric Company, can be bought for very little and it costs less than one cent an hour to run one.

ELASTIC

WHEN we designed Lastlong Union Suits we had in mind the men who wanted underwear that wouldn't and couldn't pinch, bind or grip.

Instead of giving you a couple of inches of elastic knit insertion we make the whole suit of the best featherweight, flat-knit, cotton fabric made in the U.S.A. It's elastic all over.

Plenty of "give"—loose fitting, featherweight, and incidentally the Lastlong fabric absorbs perspiration. See it, compare it, wear it.

Short sleeve, three quarter leg and athletic suits for men. Boys, athletic.

DALTON SUES BRYAN ON 'MOVIE' CONTRACT

SEEKS MONEY RETURN ALSO

Bryan Accused of Refusing to Carry Out Agreement to Appear in "Dry" Picture.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Before leaving Chicago, where he had been reporting the proceedings of the Republican National Convention, William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska was served with papers in a suit in which George R. Dalton seeks an injunction restraining the former Secretary of State from infringing on his copyright and appropriating the result of his labor.

According to Dalton, he originated the idea of producing a motion picture as an argument for prohibition. The picture was to be a dramatization of certain lectures in which Mr. Bryan was to appear as hero.

Dalton claims an agreement was made under which he was to devote all his time to promoting and producing the picture and was to set aside 10 per cent. of the net proceeds to further the cause of prohibition under the direction of a commission to be appointed by Mr. Bryan.

Later, he asserts, Mr. Bryan refused to carry out the pact, demanding a modification under which he was to be paid for his services as an actor and was to receive 20 per cent. of the net proceeds. The clause about the commission and the 10 per cent. for prohibition propaganda, was abrogated.

Then Another Hitch.

Then, according to Dalton, another hitch arose. On March 18, 1919, Mr. Bryan demanded 37 per cent. of the proceeds and proposed that the financing be done by Edward F. Goltra, of St. Louis.

Before Dalton agreed to this change in the contract, he declares, he learned from Goltra that the financing was very uncertain. It was contingent on Goltra being able to recover from the Government $160,000 penalty imposed upon the Hostetters Bitters' Company for an alleged violation of the Internal Revenue laws.

By his agreement with Mr. Bryan, the latter obtained copyright on the idea of using his lectures for scenario purposes, it is alleged.

According the bill, Dalton expended $12,000 on the proposed movie, and time and effort which he values at $25,000.

"Defendant Byran is a man of peculiar attainments," the bill reads, "possessing especial ability as an actor. The complainant is unable to obtain any other person of such ability."

Served at the Coliseum.

Mr. Bryan was served with the notice by Deputy Sheriff J. E. Olis, who called him from the press platform at the Coliseum.

"Have you got something for me?" Mr. Bryan asked.

"Yes, Colonel, I've got a summons," answered the deputy, who proceeded to read the document.

When he had concluded, Mr. Bryan remarked: "Well, they're not going to have it all their own way," and beyond this he declined to discuss the matter.

In addition to seeking to restrain Mr. Bryan from infringing his copyright, Mr. Dalton asks the court to fix the sum to be paid to him by Bryan for Dalton's loss of time and money due to the former's failure to live up to his contract.

JUBILEE AT ST. CECILIA'S.

Father Phelan's Fifty Years as a Pastor Celebrated.

St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic Church, 106th Street, was crowded yesterday morning at the golden jubilee of the ordination of the Rev. Michael J. Phelan, the pastor. A letter from Archbishop Hayes to Father Phelan was read from the pulpit. The Archbishop expressed his appreciation of the splendid work Father Phelan had done for St. Cecilia's.

The jubilee sermon was preached by Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney. The master of ceremonies was the Rev. Thomas Duggan of the Church of the Ascension. Father Phelan was the celebrant of the solemn high mass. The deacon was the Rev. James Aylward and the sub-deacon was the Rev. William P. Nixon.

At a reunion of parishioners Friday evening Father Phelan received a purse of $3,000.

TRIAL OF MURGUIA ORDERED.

Carranza Commander Accused of Pillage and Ordering Execution.

MEXICO CITY, June 12.—Trial of General Francisco Murguia by a military court on charges of having abused his authority and having authorized pillaging has been ordered by the de la Huerta provisional Government, according to the newspaper Excelsior.

One of the specifications against General Murguia is that he ordered the execution of Colonel Ruben M. Rocha. General Murguia has made formal denial of the charges.

Fernando Lera has been named as diplomatic representative of the provisional Mexican Government to Norway, according to the newspaper El Universal.

Other recent semi-official reports state that Enrique Gonzalez Martinez has been named as envoy to Chile, Jesus Urueta envoy to Argentina and Uruguay and Juan Sanchez Azcona envoy to Spain.

The same reports state that Fernando Iglesias Calderon has been named as confidential agent to the United States.

ROTARY CLUB Activities

The Gathering of the Clan!

ATLANTIC CITY has been the setting for conventions galore, but the week of June 21st-26th will see, probably, the greatest gathering of business men from big cities and small, from the wide stretches of the West and the more crowded areas of the East, than has ever attempted to crowd on to the famous Boardwalk at one and the same time.

The International Convention of Rotary Clubs is on at Atlantic City that week, and for months the committees in charge have searched the town for another and still another room in some remote corner. The big hotels will not be able to house half the Rotarians who want to find shelter in them. Commandeering the beach for sleeping quarters is being seriously considered.

It's disquieting not to know where you're going to hang your shaving mirror, but, at the same time, it's gratifying to Rotarians all over the world to realize that Rotary has grown to such tremendous proportions. The thousands and thousands of successful business men who will attend the Convention, as well as the thousands who find it impossible to attend, are all exponents of the best there is in business.

Each is pledged to carry out the Rotary motto: "He profits most who serves best." Each is instrumental in working for civic and national betterment. And each feels that his membership in Rotary is about his most valued possession.

Since Rotary Clubs are composed of one man in each line of business, the great Convention at Atlantic City will be a treasure house of business information, where the makers of machinery may jaw the railroad men for imperfect transportation; where the advertising wizard may pick on the paper manufacturer for the present shortage.

They're jolly good fellows, who never lose sight of their moral responsibilities in the business world—and Rotarians all!

THE typist is there at nine. The boss strolls in at ten-thirty. At five in the afternoon the typist tidies her hair and adjusts her veil. She has done a day's work—and wants to go home.

But five in the afternoon is the boss's time for brilliant ideas. He must get rid of them! The tired girl is the answer.

He thinks he's fair to his employee. He isn't. Let him have brilliant ideas at five. But let him dictate them to The Dictaphone. Next morning while he's dawdling over his eggs, the girl gets them on paper. They're on his desk when he arrives. And both the man and the girl are content.

15 gears and 12 bearings racked by shocks

SEVEN gears and 6 bearings in the transmission, 8 gears and 6 bearings on the rear axle—in the average car every one is subject to the constant damaging shocks caused by metal universal joints.

Metal joints fail to cushion the shocks of starting, suddenly shifting gears, or driving over rough roads. They transmit every blow and jar. Every differential gear, every transmission gear—every axle bearing feels the racking effect of these sudden blows.

At least 15 gears and 12 bearings in the average car—more in many cars—are subject to the severe wear and tear caused by metal universals. As metal joints wear loose the strain is intensified, hastening depreciation of the entire car.

Cushioning the racking shocks

The effective way of protecting the gears and bearings from this severe strain is by the new flexible fabric universal joint. The Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint is constructed of flexible fabric discs which act as cushions in the drive shaft. The Thermoid-Hardy Joint transmits a smooth, even flow of power to the rear axle.

Having no metal-to-metal wearing surfaces the Thermoid-Hardy Joint cannot wear loose. It requires no lubrication—no constant attention.

Fanwise construction for strength

The patented fanwise construction of the flexible fabric discs gives the Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint its extraordinary strength. By this unique construction, illustrated at the right, uniform strength and elasticity are obtained.

Adopted by leading manufacturers

On more than fifty cars, trucks and tractors—the Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint is being installed as standard equipment. It has stood severe tests for endurance—in many cars running 60,000 miles without replacement or adjustment of any kind.

When you ride in a car equipped with Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joints—notice the absence of backlash, jerks and rattles that are so common with worn-out metal joints. Observe how smoothly the car starts—how much more quietly it runs, even over rough roads.

Send for our new book, "Universal Joints—Their Use and Misuse." It will give you in detail the construction of the Thermoid-Hardy Joint, records of performance, opinions of leading engineers and manufacturers who have adopted it.

In building up the flexible fabric discs, the several layers of fabric are put together so that the strands in each piece run in a different direction. This patented fanwise construction provides the greatest tensile strength. In a laboratory test made recently at Purdue University, the drive shaft itself was twisted at a total stress of 21,700 inch pounds without injury to the universal joint.

GROCERS CUT PROFIT AND FOOD IS LOWER

Retailers Generally Observe Agreement to Keep Within 25-35 Per Cent. Maximum.

FOLLOW WHOLESALE PRICES

Consumer Now Gets Benefit of Drop in Market, Flying Squadron Agents Report.

The agreement made by the New York Retail Grocers' Association, Peter H. Ainer, President, to limit the gross profits of its members to 25 per cent. on dry groceries and 35 per cent. on green groceries has done much to stabilize market conditions, according to Special Agent J. J. Price of the Flying Squadron of the Department of Justice. There has been a tendency by dealers, he said, to bring their gross profits well within the maximum fixed, with the result that the consumer is now getting greater benefit when wholesale prices show a drop.

For the last two or three weeks Special Agent Price has had a squad of men combing the city for food profiteers and a number of merchants have been called to squadron headquarters, where they promised to lower prices.

"In the average case," Mr. Price told a TIMES reporter last night, "it has been found that the retailer has been speculating with the market to the extent of going up with the rise, but seldom reducing with the fall. Take, as an example, the case of a retailer who buys a barrel of potatoes for $16 and sells them at 13 cents a pound, then fails to make a reduction when his next barrel cost him only $15.

"It has been made plain to dealers that this practice must stop and that the consumer must receive the benefit of even such a small reduction. By means of a follow-up system we have been able to ascertain whether or not the dealer who has been reprimanded has rectified his fault. Practically all of them have.

"Recently the market has been fluctuating considerably and often a merchant has been selling stuff at what appears high prices, but this in many cases is because the particular commodity was bought when the market was high. A small merchant is often a poor buyer, believing that the market will rise, he buys more of a certain commodity than he can handle and when the market falls he finds himself with a large stock on hand bought at a high price, hence his prices will be higher than competitors who bought better.

"Ample notice has been given to merchants and violations will be severely dealt with. It is hoped that the legitimate merchants and the public will aid the department in stamping out illicit trade. Again the public is asked to send its complaints to the Flying Squadron and assurance is given that complaints will be investigated at once."

band of a woman who had visited Elwell had made threats against his life, but with nothing to suggest a solution of the extraordinary tragedy.

The Countess Szinawska and her sister, Mrs. Hardy, were questioned because they were at one time good friends of Mr. Elwell and because after the United States entered the war, the Countess had been detained for two months as a suspected enemy alien on information reported to have been furnished to the Government by Mr. Elwell.

"The Countess, who is a Pole, said that she had met Mr. Elwell at Carlsbad in 1913, but that she had not seen him for more than a year," said Mr. Joyce. "She said she knew Elwell pretty well, but had never visited the house, although the sister had. They said they were not acquainted with any one who had a key to his house."

Women Had Keys to House.

Mr. Elwell had frequently been the host to whist parties and other affairs at his house, and according to his chauffeur a number of women had keys with which they admitted themselves to the four-story dwelling, usually in the morning, a fact which had caused the building to be regarded with suspicion by neighbors long before the tragedy. Mr. Joyce said that inquiries had apparently reduced the number of women key-holders to three or four. These keys had been rendered obsolete six months or more ago by changes Mr. Elwell had made in the lock. Changes in his relations with possessors of the keys, or embarrassments resulting from unexpected calls, are supposed to have resulted in the change of the lock. The fact that an attempt had been made to rob the place was another reason or pretext for this change. Mr. Elwell, according to the Assistant District Attorney, had some slight changes made in the key, so that it fitted the lock, and the key of the housekeeper, Mrs. Marie Larsen, was made over. But, so far as is known, he did not refit any of the other keys.

Mr. Joyce said that no woman who had ever owned one of the keys had been discovered. According to Arthur Bishop, the former chauffeur, some of the women who had keys and visited the place were married. According to the District Attorney, the housekeeper was unable to throw any light on these visits and knew nothing of the keys.

The effects of the dead man, which were searched yesterday, suggested nothing, according to Mr. Joyce. He read the letters which were found there, but none of them indicated that Mr. Elwell had enemies or was in danger from any source. Most of them were from men or women who wrote to obtain an authoritative opinion from him as to what card should be played or what penalty exacted in given circumstances at a card table. These appeals were generally to settle bets, Elwell having been regarded as an infallible lawgiver on bridge and other card games, because of books on those games, published under his name, but which his former wife, who divorced him, claims to have written. A check for $4,000 and some correspondence about horses, which Elwell was continually buying and selling in connection with his stable of racers, were among the papers.

Mr. Elwell's will and other documents will be brought to light when his box in the safe deposit vault in the Columbia Trust Company is opened. An application will be made to the Surrogate to open the vault today. A will contest has been threatened by Mrs. Elwell in behalf of their 16-year-old son unless he is liberally provided for. The relatives who may benefit by the will are the father and mother, a brother and two sisters. Some of Elwell's racing employes and associates are said to have been mentioned. As an all-round sporting man, who made most of his amusements pay heavy dividends, Mr. Elwell is believed to have left an estate of several hundred thousand dollars. According to friends, he won constantly and heavily in the stock market, on the race track, in horse deals, at faro and at bridge and other card games, in which $10 a point was the usual stake.

Mrs. Hardy, when she was interviewed at the house yesterday, said that although her sister, the Countess, had not seen Mr. Elwell for more than a year and had nothing but surmises to offer about the murder; either that it was the outcome of a gambling or a race track feud or that a woman was involved.

Baffle the Photographers.

The two sisters said that they had been told that Mr. Elwell was responsible for the detention of the Countess as a suspected spy, but that they knew no reason why he should have done such a thing and that he had not only denied it but had made representations to Washington which aided in giving her liberty. Mrs. Hardy said that the last time she had seen Mr. Elwell was in 1918, when he was about to sail for Palm Beach. Occasionally, during the questioning, a woman's voice raised to a high pitch could be heard on the sidewalk. After being five hours at the residence the two women emerged, pulling their hat brims over their faces to baffle photographers, in which they were successful.

Further questioning of neighbors yesterday failed to establish the exact moment when the shot was fired. The fact that it was not heard raised the question whether the murderer had not muffled the shot in some manner. The small visitor's room, in which the murder took place, is in the front of the house, just two or three feet above the sidewalk. A passerby at the time the shot was fired would have been about ten or twelve feet from the murderer, with only a stained glass window to prevent his seeing the act itself.

Dr. Charles Norris, the Medical Examiner, who performed the autopsy, said he did not believe that the .45 calibre army automatics, with one of which the murder was done, could be equipped with silencers, but that there was nothing in the nature of the wound to support or demolish this theory. He said also that there was nothing to disprove the suggestion that the bullet had been fired by the murderer from the pocket of his coat. The theory that the murderer might have fired with his hand in his coat pocket grasping the pistol was suggested by the conditions under which the murder was committed, because there was nothing to show that Elwell had been alarmed or that he knew that his companion was aiming a revolver at him.

"Those matters are purely speculative at present," said Dr. Norris. "There is nothing in my examination which bears on them. I can say fairly positively that the muzzle of the weapon was held not more than three feet from his forehead, and probably not more than one foot. The narrowness of the room makes it improbable that the murderer could have been more than three feet away. There were no powder burns about the wound, but grains of powder were embedded over an area of three inches in diameter about the wound. The pistol was held so near that explosion of the powder gases broke inward the bones of the forehead. The wound itself would prove, in my opinion, that it was not self-inflicted, even if the disappearance of the weapon did not show it.

"The circumstances, in my opinion, prove that Elwell was not taken by surprise, at least that the presence of the man or woman in the house was not a surprise to him. He might have been shot without knowing that he was about to be shot. On the other hand, he might have been sitting there, trying to induce the murderer not to shoot. There are no indications one way or another on that point."

When he was asked if the size of the weapon did not make it improbable that a woman had fired the shot, he said:

"A woman could have fired it, if she were familiar with firearms."

Through error the statement was made in yesterday's TIMES that Lyttleton Fox, attorney for the Lewisohns, had an engagement to go to Long Beach with Elwell and others on the day of the murder. It appears that this was not the fact. Mr. Fox's sole connection with the matter being confined to his professional engagement by the Lewisohns after the murder.

A conference of police officials was held yesterday afternoon in the office of Second Deputy Police Commissioner William J. Lahey to bring about the greatest possible co-ordination of the department in working toward a solution of the murder. Besides Deputy Commissioner Lahey there were present Captain Arthur Carey of the Homicide Squad, Acting Captain John B. Coughlin, in charge of the Brooklyn detectives and Captain Walsh of the Fourth Inspection District.

Questioned as to the meeting, Mr. Lahey said:

"There is absolutely nothing new in the case."

35,418 New Telephone Stations Since January First

In spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, this Company, since January 1st, has installed 35,418 new telephones in New York City, almost as many telephones as there are in Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne combined.

We would have been proud of such an installation in normal times when materials were plentiful and quickly obtainable, and when the demands for service and equipment were moderate. But to have accomplished the task in the face of the obstacles to the proper conduct of business that have confronted this organization, just as they have every other organization in the country for the past six months and more, stamps the work as one of the biggest jobs this or any other Company has ever done.

Yet big as this accomplishment is, and regardless of efforts we have made and are making to meet the abnormal and ever increasing demand for service, new applications continue to come in faster than we can provide the necessary facilities.

64,843 Unfilled Applications are now on our books

The demands for new service are even greater than they were at the first of the year and the means for meeting them becomes less each day because of conditions outside the telephone business which are wholly beyond our control. Shipments for example from factories near Chicago that in normal times took but eight days to reach their destination now take all of ten weeks.

Not only is there a great shortage of the raw materials needed for fabricating telephone facilities, but the transportation of such material is so far behind schedule that it is almost impossible to carry our construction work to completion in anywhere near the time we planned it. There never has been a time when the demand for service was so great as it is today, and never a time when it was so difficult to secure even a small percentage of the material required to meet this demand.

Applications for service, from doctors, nurses, hospitals, for cases of serious illness and fire or police purposes, will, because of their emergent nature, be cared for first,—service required as a business necessity second, and thirdly, service that is for convenience only. This policy will be followed until conditions governing the production, transportation and installation of telephone materials improve. Until then we will meet conditions to the best of our ability and with every facility at our command.

How Big is a Full Truck Load

He will tell you it means his profits—his bread and butter.

He will tell you further that rating to him is what the truck will carry—not what the manufacturer says it will carry.

Trucking from New York to Philadelphia, Seco Transportation Company is now operating five Packard Trucks. Exceptionally heavy freight demands have made it necessary to pile on the last possible ounce every trip.

A year ago they entered the Packard Truck Efficiency Test. Individual cost records were kept for each truck.

The cost records for one of these trucks show that in twelve months' operation its cost per mile was reduced 20 per cent.

Its cost per ton was reduced about 50 per cent.

Its cost per ton-mile was reduced 66 per cent.

One of these trucks has at times been forced to carry three times the merchandise a conservative manufacturer would have permitted if he rated it at the factory.

The records, taken on the ground, at work, show that these trucks have a reserve of stamina way above their ratings.

Ask local Packard Headquarters about the new policy of rating trucks. All a part of Packard's plan for selling transportation.

THE SCREEN

One reason why the Douglas Fairbanks pictures hold their popularity is that Mr. Fairbanks does not depend entirely upon himself, nor upon a hackneyed story, to keep the public interested. In nearly all of his productions there are extraordinary scenes that could be shown in no way except by motion pictures and are conspicuously within the scope of the motion picture camera. People who go to see a Fairbanks picture are assured in advance of several novel and spectacular examples of cinematography.

In this respect the last two Fairbanks films have been especially noteworthy. In "When the Clouds Roll By" there was an unequalled flood scene, and in "The Mollycoddle," at the Strand this week, there is a landslide that outdoes anything of the kind in the memory of the writer. To all appearances, and certainly to a great extent in actuality, it is the real thing. Half a mountain, it seems, moves down the steep slope, through an Indian village and over half a dozen people protected by a thin ledge. The whole is a moving picture that will startle the most hardened movie-goer.

There are other excellent scenes in "The Mollycoddle," too, and it should be said, perhaps, that as Victor Fleming directed both "When the Clouds Roll By" and its successor he is entitled to much of the cinematic works. But, of course, there's Fairbanks, himself, and no matter how much or how little he is responsible for the conception and execution of the scenic action of his films, the things he does are always a dynamic part of any picture he is in, and this is true in the case of "The Mollycoddle." He even challenges the landslide to beat him at its own game and demonstrates that he and Wallace Berry, the villain of his story, can roll and tumble, and fall and slide, down a steep mountain with quite as much concentration on getting to the bottom as any rock that was ever started anywhere by the single-purposed force of gravity. The two men start fighting in a tree at the top of a mountain and are still at it after they have dived over a waterfall, several precipices, many feet of rough ground and two or three brick walls below. Camera tricks? Some of it, but none that can be noticed and more that must have been performed exactly as it is seen. It is said that the making of "The Mollycoddle" sent Fairbanks to a doctor for repairs four times, and anyone who sees the picture will accept the report without question.

"The Mollycoddle" is an adaptation of a story by Harold McGrath made by Tom Geraghty and narrates the adventures of a foreign American who returns to Arizona after an absence of many years and finds it everything he imagined it to be. It abounds in action, Fairbanks's personality, Wallace Berry's villainy, and Hopi Indians.

The Strand program also includes a James Montgomery Flagg Comedy entitled, "Pride and P'ok Chops."

Those unfailingly enjoyable comedians, Douglas McLean and Doris May, are at the Rivoli this week in an amusing, though too lengthy, photofarce called "Let's Be Fashionable," in which a devoted young couple find themselves in a community where affinities are more fashionable than husbands who love their own wives, and vice versa. They try to be fashionable—and then move to another community. The story was written by Mildred Considine, adapted by Luther Reed, and directed by Lloyd Ingraham under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Although Senator Harding was nominated by the Republican Party in Chicago Saturday night there was no picture of him in the Rivoli Pictorial, nor at the Capitol yesterday, and, presumably, he was not at the other Broadway houses, as most of them subscribe to the same news service. Should one wonder that the Republicans seem to have nominated a man who has never been in the movies or that the pictorial news editors apparently failed to provide themselves with pictures of a man who has been a Presidential possibility for some time?

The Rivoli pictorial is otherwise full of interesting subjects and the program also includes "Beating Cheaters," a laugh-making Carter de Haven farce, and "Tree Magic," a scenic of considerable natural beauty marred by the dancing of a girl with little grace, the blotting of the landscape by a huge man, and the addition of stilted subtitles.

The chief joy at the Capitol this week is provided by "Edgar's Jonah Day," another of the delightful Booth Tarkington comedies of boy life. There is also a scenic of the Alps, in which much of the majestic beauty of the mountains is shown, and a photoplay claiming derivation from O. Henry's "A Double-Dyed Deceiver," of which Jack Pickford is the unilluminated star. Except for the acting of Sydney Ainsworth it is a dull picture.

The feature offering of the Rialto this week is "Miss Hobbs," with Wanda Hawley in the leading role. "Humoresque" remains at the Criterion and "The Return of Tarzan" at B. S. Moss's Broadway.

"Madonnas and Men," with Burrows Fontaine, Faire Binney, Edmond Lowe and others in the cast, was shown to invited spectators at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre last night.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Herbert Corthell will succeed Sam Bernard in "As You Were," at the Central Theatre, at tonight's performance. Mr. Bernard will rest for the Summer, and probably will return to the attraction in the Fall.

A comedy by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton has been accepted for production by Marc Klaw, Inc.

"Come Seven!" a dramatization by Octavus Roy Cohen of his own stories of Southern life, will open tonight at Long Branch. The play is being produced by George Broadhurst.

Fay Bainter, following the close of "East Is West" at the Astor this week, will sail for Europe for the Summer. "East Is West" will begin its tour in Boston in the Fall.

"Cinderella on Broadway," the new Winter Garden show, will open tonight in New Haven. It will come to the Winter Garden next week.

Ernest Truex will have the leading role in Avery Hopwood's "Don't Be Afraid," which the Shuberts will produce at the Crescent Theatre in Brooklyn next week.

"Daddy Dumplins," a comedy by George Barr McCutcheon and Earl Carroll, will be tried out by Edward H. Robins's stock company in Toronto this week. Thomas A. Wise will head the cast, and will be seen in the play later in New York.

Madelon la Varre, a French singer and dancer, will arrive here tomorrow on the Leopoldina to appear at the Century Promenade.

MUSIC NOTES.

Weather permitting tonight, there will be an outdoor festival in Crojona Park, on the lawns surrounding the Pavilion, under the auspices of the Bronx public schools. The Morris High School Orchestra, a chorus of 100, a children's chorus of 300 from Public School 4 and the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band will take part, and the Grand Opera Society will present "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Claire Spencer, Egrid Taillerir, Belle Fromme, Elfrieda Hansen, J. S. Greene, Jacques Renson and Antonio Pons in the principal roles.

Irene Williams sings a Mexican folk song, "Las Golondrinas," and another from the Tyrol, "On the Alps," in the current week's bill at the Rialto. Bertram Peacock, who also is a recruit from the recent Gilbert and Sullivan opera productions, has Kipling's ballad, "On the Road to Mandalay." The various dancers add the waltz from "Faust" and an Argentine tango.

$50,000 GEMS STOLEN ON DELEGATES' TRAIN

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, June 13.—Diamonds and other jewelry valued at more than $50,000 disappeared today from a stateroom on a special train carrying delegates from the Republican convention in Chicago to New York. The jewels were the property of Mrs. Arthur Whitney, wife of State Senator Arthur Whitney of Morristown, N. J. The loss was discovered while the train was speeding between Alliance, Ohio, and Pittsburgh. The train was held in the yards here nearly an hour while railroad police and detectives conducted a thorough investigation.

According to members of the train crew, Mrs. Whitney and her husband left their compartment when the train stopped for a few minutes in the Alliance station. The jewels were in a small handbag. When the train had left the station Senator Whitney and his wife returned to the compartment, found the handbag lying open and the jewels missing. The conductor and a detective on the train searched the compartment thoroughly and interviewed passengers who were in the car. None of them had noticed any one enter the compartment. The search here failed to reveal any trace of the missing jewels. The train made no stops for passengers between Chicago and Pittsburgh, being one of a number of special trains from the convention.

Shortly after the robbery was discovered railroad officials in Pittsburgh were notified and a number of company detectives were ordered to meet the special in the Union Station. The detectives are of the opinion that unless the culprit made his escape in Alliance he took advantage of a stop on the north side here to leave the train unobserved. No one, passenger or member of the train crew, was permitted to leave the train in the Union Station until the investigation had been completed.

FOR RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

Judge Crain Advocates Training of Children in Faith.

A resolution adopted by the Amsterdam Democratic Club, 131 West Sixty-fourth Street, last night pointed to a need for laws, a constitutional amendment, if necessary, providing for the religious training of public school children. Judge T. C. T. Crain of General Sessions, who sponsored the resolution, declared that education no longer could be officially severed from faith.

The resolution called for proper safeguards against attempts at proselytism, and stipulated that the religious training of the child be in accordance with the convictions of the parents.

His long experience on the General Sessions bench had shown him that neglect of the religious training of children was largely responsible for the prevalence of crime, Judge Crain said. He has been a student of criminology for many years, and has also been interested in settlement and welfare work. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

"We demand that religion be made the key to life," the resolution said in part. "Our children are entitled to the compass of divine truth. We insist that they wear from the first, God's colors. The atheist and the agnostic shall not keep the bread of life from our young."

A copy of the resolution was forwarded to the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall and to the Democratic County Committees of the New York district for adoption.

AND IDLY strolling,
PAST THE Mint.
IN PHILADELPHIA,
IS TOUCHED by a stranger.
ACT TWO. Our hero
LEARNS FROM the stranger,
A SPLENDID way,
TO MAKE money.
AND HE makes lots of it,
BIG BALES of it.
AND THE curtain falls,
ON SCENES of luxury,
ACT THREE. Our hero
MAKES MORE money,
AND THE plot thickens,
AND THE dark,
MYSTERIOUS STRANGER,
FOREVER.
AND ONE fine day,
OUR HERO is caught,
PASSING THIS money,
ACT FOUR. Our hero wakes,
AND TELLS the world,
THROUGH THE bars,
OF HIS Atlanta cell,
THAT UNCLE Sam's money,
IS LIKE the blend,
OF THOSE cigarettes,
THAT "SATISFY."
IT CAN'T be copied,

THE Turkish tobacco in Chesterfields is real Turkish, not counterfeit. The Domestic is the best leaf money can buy. And the blend is a secret—it can't be copied. Chesterfields are "good" anywhere—and you'll never tire of "Satisfy."

THE SENATE TRIUMPHANT.

"Government of the Senate, by the Senate and for the Senate." That motto and intent could hardly be written plainer upon the nomination of HARDING. He was all along the secret and favorite choice of the Senatorial oligarchy that finally proved to be in control of the Chicago Convention. Its preference for HARDING was suspected from the first announcing of his candidacy; now it is established. Senator PENROSE speaks boldly of the satisfactory "conferences" which he and his colleagues had with HARDING. And when the time came, predicted by the frank-spoken DAUGHERTY of Ohio, Senator HARDING's manager, for a few men to meet in a room and decide whom the tired and deadlocked delegates should nominate for the Presidency, nine out of ten of the conferees were Senators. They agreed that the moment had come for them to take their courage in both hands and "put over" their original candidate. This they then proceeded to do in the most open way, giving the word of command to the delegates in the eyes of all.

Why the clique of dominant Republican Senators should want HARDING is no mystery. They like the man personally, as do all his associates. He is of infinite good nature, never harboring resentments, and forever smiling even over the wall of parties. But it is because these amiable qualities indicate the temper which HARDING would bring to the Presidency that the Senators pitched upon him as a man after their own heart. They think that he would be an "easy" President. He would never attempt to force a policy of his own upon the Senate. Indeed, it is doubtful if he would originate any distinct and forcible policy at all. His rôle would be genial co-operation with the Senate. If a treaty was to be negotiated, he would let Senators do the work and have their way. As for "Senatorial courtesy," it would be delightfully enthroned in the White House. Patronage and appropriations would go smoothly under the sweetly reasonable dictation of the rulers of the Senate.

Whatever may be in the mind of Senator HARDING himself in regard to all this, there is no doubt what the Senate aspires to achieve. It wishes to make itself dominating in the Government. In the Republican platform, written by and for Senators, there is a demand that the President be stripped of certain alleged "autocratic powers." To whom are they to go? Naturally, to those who can make a better use of them—namely, the Senators in control. For some time their appetite has been growing by what it has fed upon. They have killed the Treaty. They have thwarted the President. Now they desire to make their supremacy permanent. To them it seems terrible that a President should venture to say, "The State, it is I," but if they can only change that to read, "It is we," they see no objection. So to change it is the scarcely concealed ambition of the Senate. And it is because the Republican Senators are firmly convinced that HARDING will oppose no obstacle to this grasping of power that they favored his nomination, did their best to bring it about, and now openly rejoice in it.

The plan is evident, but there are difficulties in the way of its execution. Even a "too accommodating" man, to use the phrase applied to Senator HARDING by his own father, cannot go through a Presidential campaign without being forced to take a stand in his own name. General TAYLOR used to put off inquiries about his policy by saying, "Ask my committee." Mr. HARDING can scarcely say, "Ask the Senators." Were he minded to surrender a good part of his power as Executive, he would be ashamed to avow it. And in one particular he is certain to be pressed to make his position clear. He voted with the majority of the Republican Senators to ratify the Treaty. Does he still believe this is the thing to do? Or is he content to leave it to be supposed that his Senate vote was insincere? These questions cannot be put aside because, the Republican platform being what it is, the candidate will have to make his own plank about the Treaty. He cannot go on all through the canvass facing both ways—even if there is a winning smile on both faces.

THE COURSE FOR DEMOCRATS.

Because Senator HARDING is generally regarded as a weak candidate, it does not follow that the Republican Party will enter the campaign seriously weakened. Its leaders have, it is true, lost a good deal of the careless rapture of confidence which they felt six months ago, but are still pretty sure that they have a safe margin between themselves and defeat. And in one respect, at least, they may argue that they left Chicago stronger than they went there. They succeeded in beating off the impudent assaults of HIRAM JOHNSON. This means that they have freed their party from the suspicion of being in alliance with unsettling radicals. The labor and railroad planks of the platform strengthen that impression. And we may be sure that, as the campaign proceeds, the Republicans will be making much of the fact that theirs is the party of financial reconstruction and business stability. They will make a strong appeal to all who have been troubled about threats to the security of investments and to the peaceful enlargement of industry.

In view of all this, the wise course for the Democrats is plain. They must, in the first place, nominate a man of much greater weight and strength of character than the Republican candidate. Nine-tenths of popular confidence lies in personality; and the Democratic Convention must make it its first care to select a man whose record and utterances are sufficient guarantee that he intends to exercise the powers of the Presidency, unaugmented but undiminished. He ought also to be one in whose hands the great productive interests of the country would feel safe. The temptation at San Francisco will be to try to take up with the leavings at Chicago; to court JOHNSON's following; to kotow to GOMPERS or PLUMB; to devise planks to win over this form of discontent or that form of disgruntlement. Little but disappointment could result from such a policy. The professional exploiters of "unrest" are very apt to go off and flock by themselves this year, in any event. Whether they go or stay, the Democratic Party ought to have the wisdom and firmness not to allow itself to be outdone by the Republicans in interpreting the overmastering desire of the great masses of the people. This is to rebuild the fabric of industry and commerce as rapidly as possible, to assure all sound business of its opportunity and all workingmen of the fruits of their labor.

KEEPING OPEN THE CHANNELS OF TRADE.

The Citizens' Transportation Committee in supplying trucks and drivers to relieve freight congestion at the piers is making an effort in the public interest to keep open the channels of trade; it is not making war upon union labor, as leaders of the teamsters and longshoremen proclaim. The time had come when something must be done to save the Port of New York from decay. It was no use sending freight here if it was to be piled up on the docks and neglected by ukase of the labor leaders who would not make terms with the steamship companies. Business was being diverted to other ports. Intervention by the Merchants' Association became a duty. There would have been no attempt to organize independent trucking if the union truckmen had listened to reason and if certain steamship companies by their feebleness of initiative and lack of enterprise had not played into the hands of the strikers. In his illuminating opinion in the Burgess Company injunction case Justice FAWCETT spoke out very plainly about the responsibility of the companies for having failed to find means to move freight for their customers.

The day has gone by when any employer of labor can object to unions. They have their legitimate place in industry. It is only when they exceed their rights and abuse their power, obtained by organization, that they are censured and opposed. The head of a great railroad company was once accused of exclaiming, "The public be damned!" It made him for a time about the most unpopular man in America, although he entered a denial. The behavior of more than one leader of a strike in recent times has justified the belief that they acted on the principle that in any controversy between capital and labor the American people were not concerned and had better mind their own business. The third party is always concerned in a strike that affects the prosperity and welfare of the community. It must stand and wait; it pays most of the higher cost of living which results from a dispute long drawn out and unsettled. The longshoremen's and truckmen's strikes, which threatened the peace as well as the welfare of New York, had become intolerable, and an independent trucking enterprise was the only alternative to letting the business of the Port of New York stagnate.

One labor leader declares that the Merchants' Association has raised a fund to wage "open shop" warfare, when the fact is that all it did was to provide for the expense of moving freight that the strikers would not touch and that steamship companies allowed to lie on their piers rather than make a final issue with the strikers. The independent trucks are now in operation under adequate police protection. There has been talk of a labor war of magnitude. Such struggles are usually accompanied by violence before the end, with the result that, as public sentiment always opposes violence in a labor disturbance, the strike fails. The labor unions concerned in this case are in a mood for reprisals upon the Citizens' Transportation Committee and invoke the support of the American Federation of Labor. It is difficult to see how that support can be wisely given when the plain issue is whether the Citizens' Transportation Committee has the right to break a freight deadlock for which the strikers and some of the steamship companies are responsible, and to conduct an enterprise in which it has invested its money for as long a time as it pleases.

THE HIGH COST OF LOAFING.

The Chairman of the Mayor's Housing Committee has called the attention of Mr. GOMPERS and the American Federation of Labor's annual convention to the limitation upon output by the plasterers working on 300 apartment houses in Queens Borough. According to his statement, the cost of this work is made about 25 per cent. above that in other parts of the city, with the result that there is a check to construction at a time when housing is desperately needed. Mr. GOMPERS boasts that he never calls strikes, but it also is true that he shows little discrimination in the strikes which he approves after others call them. Here is a situation which has resulted in something like a strike of capital in refusal to continue to pay wages to those who refuse to work according to American standards of output.

The question is typical of the mixture of morals and economics which lies at the root of the World War and its sequels in many lands. Germany's policy of domination through terrorism was beaten because it was an evil mixture of political immorality and economics to which it was not possible to submit. The war was followed by strikes in many lands, with similar professions of high policy on the part of labor leaders, enforced by methods of German ruthlessness, against which there is an uprising that will check the labor movement if it does not discipline what it has called its "outlaws." Surely there is nothing of "repression" or "coercion" or "slavery" in suggesting that unions should see that unionists deliver the output for which a union wage is paid.

Before the war a capable mason would lay 1,900 bricks a day for $5. The industry is a good example of what labor calls speeding up and what capital regards as the result of reducing muscular effort, and increasing its results, by the application of brains. Labor alone would never study how to lay most bricks with least effort, for unions regard their objective as the reduction of output to a standard average which necessarily is below the capacity of many. The standard is lowest where unions are strongest. In England, for example, there is now proceeding an inquiry whether it is an offense against unionism that 700 bricks shall be a day's work instead of the average of 350. There is no complaint that the 700 bricks were laid as the result of speeding up, but a grievance is made of the effect of the demonstration of such a capacity and of the fact that the foreman of that team was willing himself to work instead of merely superintend his team.

The unions to which appeal was made were as embarrassed as the Federation ought to be, but refrained from condemning what it was difficult to approve. There are variations of labor standards, which are greater here than in England because of the greater variations of conditions throughout a continent compared with small islands, but it is perhaps fair to say that a standard stint for American bricklayers would be 800 bricks for $9. The comparisons throw a light on the housing shortage in both England and the United States. The Queens plasterers admit that they do not work up to the trade standard, and presume even to set a lower standard where there is a presumption that a higher wage can be extorted because of the extent of the work to be done and the resources of the employers. It is no wonder that the building industry has been brought almost to a standstill in the nation as well as in the city at a time when the rent problem is so acute for renters that landlords are thought to be extortioners as a class, as no doubt not a few of them are as individuals.

Yet the fact is that rents have risen less than either wages or materials. A national average for the rise in rents is only a fraction of the rise in prices and profits in many industries, but in none has there been such harassment of the profiteers as of landlords. Without asking condonation for the extortioners among them, may it not be said that even the Federation would benefit if it would give attention to the slacking plasterers and bricklayers, and to the dominating iron erectors who demand that others than they shall not work, and even that work done by others shall be torn down? Would this not be a sensible and reasonable first step toward cheapening housing?

NOT ORATORS AS BRUTUS WAS.

If there was feminine heartburning because the newly enfranchised did not enjoy mathematical equality at Chicago, it must have been assuaged by the fact that the top notch in speaking was reached by two women. They were not orators as BRUTUS was. Consciously or unconsciously, their triumphant model was MARK ANTONY—who was, to be sure, the feminist of Ancient Rome. With a want of logic which can scarcely be called masterly, but for which there is no properly feminine adjective, they created the very effect which their mere words seemed to disclaim. ALEXANDRA CARLISLE (who is not only "a musical comedy star" but a legitimate artist among the best) praised Governor COOLIDGE for all exalted virtues—for having "walked in high places humbly, without pomp, without ceremony"; and to this lofty tribute the delegates listened in respectful silence. But when she told them that her candidate "is a real American born on the Fourth of July" the representatives of their party's intellect rose to her, waved their shirt sleeves and cheered. According to all accounts, it was the high spot of the convention. What man could conceive that ultimate stroke—or, having conceived, could execute it?

It was, however, the sister of THEODORE ROOSEVELT who developed the Antonine method most fully. "I come "not, friends, to steal away your "hearts!" Some folk had intimated that Mrs. DOUGLAS ROBINSON was swayed by sisterly affection, "because "LEONARD WOOD was a friend of my "brother, THEODORE ROOSEVELT," and sought to exert a similar influence upon the delegates. Not at all! She seemed wholly unconscious of the way in which that name was destined to fall upon the convention, or of the dramatic effect of her family likeness in speech and gesture. "I wish every "delegate in this great hall to under-"stand that that is not the reason I "wish LEONARD WOOD for President. "I want LEONARD WOOD for President "not because he was my brother's "devoted friend, as was my brother "his devoted friend. I want LEONARD "WOOD for President not because he "was his friend, but because he was "his type." In some causes it is impossible for a lady to protest too much. Mrs. ROBINSON's description of the nature of this "type" will scarcely add a stroke to the portrait of THEODORE ROOSEVELT; but it contained by far the subtlest and most effective bit of special pleading registered in behalf of any candidate. The Wood-Roosevelt type is distinguished by "a great, self-sacrificing patience."

Having witnessed Lady ASTOR's invasion of the House of Commons, and her twisting of the members round her little finger, the world should have been prepared for this sort of thing. It will be hereafter. As a companion-piece to the voluminous collection of "The Female Poets of America," once so widely circulated, we shall have an equally imposing collection of the female orators. When we hear the voice that is ever gentle and low (an excellent thing in orators), we shall know that not only our hearts but the throne of reason itself is destined to be stolen away.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Reasoned with the Rest of Us. In explaining why he dismissed the indictment of the American Woolen Company and its President, Judge MACK showed that he appreciated, just as does everybody else with ordinary human intelligence, the absurdity of prohibiting and penalizing those who charge unreasonably and therefore illegally high prices for "wearing apparel," and leaving immune those who do the same thing with respect to the cloth out of which the clothing is and must be made.

"Interpreted in the light of reason," the Judge said, "wearing apparel must be held to include the material used to make up a garment," and he added: "The legislative intent to secure reasonable prices in the distribution of wearing apparel cannot possibly, or perhaps reasonably, be carried out unless the limitations imposed upon the distribution of the made-up garments are extended to the materials out of which they are made." To like effect was his discussion of the question whether or not cloth is as much a "necessary" as clothing.

He reached, therefore, exactly the conclusion that seems unavoidable to the layman as he talks the matter over at home or in the street. And yet Judge MACK dismissed the indictments, not in contradiction of his own contentions, but because he had to do so. His duty was to apply the law as it stood in the statute book; and the law explicitly mentioned "wearing apparel" as a "necessary," but said never a word about cloth in the bolt. And he had to assume that if the lawmakers had wanted to put cloth and clothing in the same category they would have done it.

Lawmakers and What They Mean. It is in the assumption that lawmakers, in drafting a law, put in it what, and all, they mean—an assumption all courts feel obliged always to make and usually to act upon—that lies the explanation of the frequency with which court decisions fail to agree with what laymen call common sense and get denounced by them as mere quibbling over empty and arbitrary technicalities.

Instinct tells the public that this assumption is not sound—that some legislators are careless and others ignorant, and that justice and equity will suffer if more attention is not paid by courts to presumable intention and less to words. That this is a dangerous doctrine is not realized by the amateur interpreters of law. They fail to see that the realm of intention is both limitless and misty and that they would be far oftener displeased and angered if Judges ventured into that domain oftener than they do. They do take into account, more than now and then, the obvious and necessary purpose of a law, but they are properly reluctant to strain discretionary powers, and the result is an occasional decision like this one of Judge MACK's.

As usual in such cases, he, or "the law," will be ridiculed as absurd or denounced as unjust by the unthinking, but others will see where the blame should be put and where the remedy should be found.

Meanwhile, the fact remains, indubitable, that a bolt of cloth is not wearing apparel, and just possibly—only the deeply and darkly suspicious will believe it—that fact was not forgotten by everybody who had to do with the drafting of the law Judge MACK interpreted. When a statute has in it a hole through which, to modernize an old phrase, the biggest of automobiles can be driven with room to spare, there is excuse for seeing evidence of design in the convenient aperture.

A Timidity Needing Explanation. Isn't there something just a little excessive in the haste and vehemence with which the State Commander and other high officers of the American Legion are denying that the organization, as such, had anything to do with supplying men to operate the trucks by the use of which the merchants of the city are trying to save the city and themselves from further heavy losses?

One might imagine, from the documents issued by these officials, that the American Legion would be ruined if any relation between itself and the effort to restore New York's much-needed facilities for freight transportation were to be established. If that is true, it is a truth to be regretted, for after all there is nothing disgraceful about the manning of these trucks, and the former soldiers who do it can fairly claim to be rendering a public service of great importance—something which their recent experience abroad has taught them to regard as the performance of a duty.

The theory that they are enemies of labor, or of union labor, cannot be maintained, for the strikers are not using the only or the best means they have for bettering their condition and remedying their wrongs. The expedient to which they cling so persistently is a menace to the welfare, to the very existence, of the city, and their disregard for other interests than their own invited the adoption of just such measures as have been taken against them.

They are mistaken if they think their quarrel concerns only themselves and their immediate employers.

Conditions Here Are Different. If the establishment and observance of Neighbor Days succeeds in inspiring New Yorkers with the spirit of friendliness that usually marks the relation of nearby dwellers in smaller towns, of course it would be a cause of rejoicing. It is to be feared, however, that New Yorkers will not be convinced soon or ever that mere proximity as to residence creates social affinity in a city as big as this one and with a population so heterogeneous. The chances are that, in spite of the Mayor's well-intentioned efforts, we shall all go on, in the future as in the past, choosing our friends and acquaintances for other than topographical reasons. The results of the metropolitan plan are not so bad as lonely newcomers think; after all, even in the country the people who live next door are not much more nearly certain to be congenial than they are here, and intimacies enforced by local custom are sometimes troublesome in little villages. New Yorkers are not "cold." It is merely that they have ways of their own—ways that have grown out of New York conditions and therefore are right—for New York.

Appeals to Conscience.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"I beseech you to tell England how urgent is our need of protection. Surely the great heart of England will not let our people die." —From the appeal of a "cultured Armenian" to Sir Philip Gibbs.

What an appeal! Well fitting are the words, "the great heart of England." Thank Heaven, the Senator Lodges, Hiram Johnsons and Borahs of Britain have not as yet run away with her national conscience! But I am afraid that the Armenian who so graphically described to Philip Gibbs the present and probably more terrible sufferings his people are undergoing and will have to undergo unless aid is rushed from England or America very soon would have hesitated to appeal to the "great heart" of America, which has been of late listening to the subtle arguments of those apostles of isolation, obstruction and desertion, Messrs. Borah, Johnson and Reed. No, the great heart of America no longer articulates as it did when it was fighting the Prussian menace. Unfortunately, political bitterness has rendered it leaderless. The only great moral leader now holding political office is willing to help Armenia, but finds himself a victim of partisanship such as probably never before the country has known.

The stories coming from Armenia are increasing in their emphasis of a greater disaster. "Your allies desert you," jeer the Turks; and to such ridicule, that has the sting of truth in it, the Armenians are powerless to reply. Again, and probably not for the last time, does Sir Philip Gibbs recount the latest stories of exhaustion and martyrdom that only too eloquently picture the life in death that the Turks are forcing upon the Armenian people today. In America many imagine that the worst is over. But today the Armenian people are appealing, as never they have appealed, for immediate aid from the moral element of the world. Is America ready to prove her right to the honor of being a part of that element? HUGH RUSSELL FRASER, Sr.

HOME.

Through the wide window of this sunless room
 I see the long street where they buy and sell;
Behind me shrills a never ceasing bell,
But a lost woodland wind has brought perfume
 From quiet far-off places, and the spell
 Of Spring is on me, for I know so well

I feel the grass beneath my feet again—
 Damp meadow grass, all matted with my weight;
 I hear, above the dull town's empty roar,
The song of robins and the sound of rain;
 I smell wet lilacs by a little gate
 That never opens to me any more!
HANNA HENRY.

WHAT WILL THEY DO?

Questions the Republicans Have Left Unanswered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Republican convention has completed its business, would it be impertinent to ask just what that party proposes to do in reference to effecting a treaty of peace with Germany?

Are we to conclude peace with Germany? If so, will this be made in conjunction with the Allies, or will it be a separate peace? If our peace with Germany is to be made separately, what is to be its nature?

If we make a separate peace with Germany are we in any way to join with the Allies in means to insure that Germany fulfill its pledges?

Are we to release our war associates from the pledges they made in the treaty looking toward the preservation of future peace by substituting mediation for impulse, by eliminating secret treaties, by safeguarding the rights of small nations, by preventing the acquisition of peoples by conquest and by limiting armament?

Are we to release our allies from their agreement to handle former German colonies and disputed territory under the League of Nations plan looking to their individual independence, and leave them free to divide up these colonies as the private chattels of nations, mostly Great Britain?

On the other hand, if we are to join with our allies in making peace with Germany, in what way are we to ask the Allies and Germany to change the Versailles Treaty?

Are the original Lodge "amendments" to be insisted upon? Or, will the subsequent Lodge "reservations," which were quite different, be used? Or will Senators Borah and Johnson rewrite the treaty, and if so, how?

Or, once Mr. Wilson is disposed of, is the treaty as it stands to be approved with only such interpretations as Mr. Wilson has agreed were acceptable?

The awesome silence of the Republican platform to these questions seems to me to bring to the surface the startling truth that there is today one overshadowing positive character in American statesmanship, and that is Woodrow Wilson.

No definite program has been agreed upon as to what to do in place of what Woodrow Wilson proposes to do. Nothing concrete and constructive is outlined and agreed upon as a substitute for the definite program of Wilson. On the one hand we have a man with a positive and constructive plan. The greatest brains of the opposition have been unable to propound a substitute plan which may be laid down by its side that the people may choose from the two.

It is this that justifies the faith that Woodrow Wilson in America's name has written an immortal document—that the further nations depart from its spirit, if they do depart from it, the larger its virtue will loom to the peoples of the world and the more surely Governments will be forced by their people to return to its principles for shelter and safety.

"Red Liquor" and Light Wines.

By the ruling of the United States Supreme Court the Volstead Act is now a law.

The Republican majority in our Sixty-sixth Congress, just ended, has upheld this obnoxious law and so helped to end the rights and freedom that we once enjoyed. Will our next Congress have fanatics rule us?

Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey and Governor Cox of Ohio are the two men of the Democratic Party who will uphold their Americanism—and American League of Nations—protect both the interest of capital and labor and American State rights.

We must remember our allies, France, Italy and Portugal, who produced in 1914 some 3,000,000,000 gallons of wine, the importation of which we prohibit. Wines of those countries are their big assets. They will soon get on their feet and then why should they not put an embargo on our products? If such were placed on our exports we would do the same.

These narrow-minded Congressmen know only of "red liquor" and never were educated to the wines of sunny France and Italy, so they class everything as "intoxicants." Are such to rule and lay down what we must eat or drink?

Bolshevist Victory.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Millions of starving Russians anathemize the Bolshevist, so called, authorities. As if in reply to them, the Bolshevist soldiers sing: "We have sent God into retirement." Such is the Russian of today. And the English Government, the proudest in the world, is welcoming in London a representative of that Russia. Is it not a signal Bolshevist victory? Certainly it is. Admiral Kolchak is defeated and murdered. General Denikin was defeated and ran away to England to save his life. General Yudenitch is defeated and is nowhere. So far it is a complete victory. And "victors are not to be tried." It is better to use them for English interests. That is what they think in London. And who can blame Lloyd George for so thinking? As the head of the British Government, he must foresee what the Bolsheviki are going to do at home and abroad in the near future. If Russia has nothing to export as trustworthy observers affirm, England will not be worse for it. But by friendly treatment of representatives of Soviet Russia the Bolsheviki may be kept from doing mischief in Persia, India and elsewhere. If even a single English regiment would be thus saved, Lloyd George would be entitled to the thanks of his nation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Owners of automobiles can bring pleasure to the wounded soldiers undergoing treatment at the Fox Hills Government Clearing Hospital on Staten Island by taking them out to ride these fine Spring days.

Those desiring to furnish cars for wounded soldiers should communicate with the Red Cross at the hospital. Telephone Tompkinsville 2531 and ask for Captain Brooke, Miss Lawton or their assistants before sending cars.

Wounded men may go out any day between 1 P. M. and 4 P. M. and preferably Sunday, and for a longer period if desired.

Arrangements can be made to take men to country clubs or homes to dinner and bring them back in the evening.

It is better to make arrangements a few days in advance in all cases.

Soaring Coal Prices.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Pocahontas run of the mines coal was quoted here today at $9 f. o. b. cars at the mines. The pre-war price of this same quality of coal was $1.25 per ton; price during the war was $2.75 to $3.25. When the Government relinquished control of fuel supply and agreed to a 27 per cent. increase of wages to the operatives it was hinted to the mine owners that that increase would not warrant any great advance of the price of coal to the consumer. Yet an advance of 700 per cent. is charged. Is the Government powerless to control the price of coal?

How are we going to get along? Our schools and colleges will be greatly burdened. Is there to be no relief? What says Dr. Garfield on this subject, or the Fuel Administration, if that is still functioning?

CHURCHMEN GOING ABROAD.

Expedition from Federal Council to Visit Nineteen Countries.

An "American Expeditionary Force" will be sent to Europe this Summer to cultivate international friendship and to restore confidence in the United States among the peoples who have been shocked by our failure to enter the League of Nations.

This "Force" will include leading clergymen and officials of religious organizations. Forty have been appointed to represent the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in visiting nineteen European countries. More than twenty-five have already arranged to make the journey. Most of them will also attend the several interdenominational conferences in Switzerland in July and August.

"We feel sure that such an association of our religious bodies would materially contribute to the success of the League of Nations," said the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, yesterday. Dr. Brown is a Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and will go to Europe as Chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Relations of the Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe.

The Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of Brooklyn has been chosen Chairman of the American delegation to a preliminary conference at Geneva, Switzerland, to plan for the Ecumenical Conference. The following Chairmen have been appointed for the delegations to the various countries:

Dr. Brown—For Hungary and Transylvania.

The Rev. Dr. Henry A. Atkinson of New York City, Secretary of the Church Peace Forum for Italy and Spain.

Other friendly visitors are: The Rev. W. B. Beauchamp, Nashville, Tenn.; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. James I. Good, Philadelphia; Hamilton Holt, editor of The Independent, New York; the Rev. Peter Ainslie, Baltimore; the Rev. C. Thurston Chase, Lynn, Mass.; the Rev. Finis S. Idleman, the Rev. A. C. McGiffert, the Rev. William P. Merrill, the Rev. Worth M. Tippy, the Rev. L. Harsanyi, New York; the Rev. Bruce Taylor, Kingston, Canada; the Rev. H. C. Armstrong, Baltimore; Bishop James Atkins, Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. Sidney L. Gulick, New York; the Rev. Charles C. Jarrell, Nashville, Tenn.; Bishop Francis McConnell, Denver, Col.; the Rev. R. H. Miller, Kansas City, Mo.; the Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, South Bethlehem, Pa.; Fennell P. Turner, New York; the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke, Princeton, N. J.; the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, New York.

POLAND RAISES $1,000,000.

An enthusiastic response to the $50,000,000 Polish Government loan was made at a mass meeting attended by Poles at Carnegie Hall last night, when nearly $1,000,000 was subscribed to the loan. Directors of the loan said that half of the sum already had been pledged.

Telegrams indorsing the loan and expressing regret for inability to attend the meeting were read from Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, and Hugh Gibson, American Minister to Poland.

Secretary Baker wrote:

"Poland is the barrier of Western civilization, and there is nothing between the Rhine and the Russian armies except the Polish Army. It is, therefore, of the highest military importance that the Polish Army should be maintained, and should not be maintained as an army merely, but sustained in its morale so that it will continue to stand a bulwark as it is now constituted."

Among large subscriptions announced last night were: People's Industrial Trading Corporation, $150,000; Chatham and Phenix National Bank, $50,000; American and Red Star Lines, $10,000; staff of the Polish Consulate General, $10,000; staff of the Polish Navigation Company, Dr. P. Lapowski and A. A. Knaap, $5,000 each.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE FAVORED.

Dr. Alexander, Addressing Missionaries, Recommends Shop Councils.

The majority of the 251 newly appointed missionaries, and missionaries home on furlough who are attending a week's conference at the Presbyterian Building, 156 Fifth Avenue, preparing to sail in the near future to twenty-seven foreign countries, attended a corporate service yesterday morning in the University Place Presbyterian Church, at Tenth Street.

The preacher at yesterday's service was the venerable Rev. Dr. George Alexander, 77 years old, who is pastor of the church and President of the Board of Foreign Missions. His subject was "Fruitage in the Life of God."

"Here we are, at the very crux of that which is threatening to shape the world," said Dr. Alexander. "There can be no permanent industrial peace so long as employer and employe remain apart. The toilers must be taken into the council of their employers, in order that confidence may be engendered, thus resulting in a greater spirit of co-operation. It is not a question of wages or working hours, but whether the toilers shall be admitted to the council of their employers. Whether they are to be slaves or to become partners, employes must not be distrustful of their employers."

Dr. Alexander asked the missionaries to make their lives one of service, knowing that their "labor would not be in vain in the Lord."

WOMAN'S CONGRESS ENDS.

Suffragists to Meet Next in Paris Unless Sex Wins Vote by 1922.

GENEVA, June 13.—The International Woman Suffrage Alliance Congress at its closing session here this afternoon accepted an invitation to hold the next congress in Paris in 1922.

The acceptance, however, is contingent upon the women of France not obtaining the franchise within a year previous to the date of the congress, as the members desire to convene in a country where women have not been enfranchised.

BANKERS IN 3-DAY SESSION.

Boston Meeting to Take Up Questions of International Finance.

BOSTON, June 13.—A "get together" meeting tomorrow night will open the eighteenth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking in this city. Three days of business and entertainment will follow.

National and international financial and economic problems will be considered, with addresses by bankers from all parts of the country. Gardner B. Perry of Albany, N. Y., President of the Institute, will preside at all the sessions.

MAYOR ASKS VOTE ON WAR MEMORIAL

WISHES OF PUBLIC SOUGHT

City Chamberlain Philip Berolzheimer, who favors the purchase of Madison Square Garden and its reconstruction as a city war memorial, declared in a statement issued yesterday that one of the reasons for the adjournment of the meeting Thursday of the Mayor's Committee on Permanent War Memorial without passing upon the report of the jury of artists was Mayor Hylan's wish that the people of the city have an opportunity to express their views upon the form of the memorial. The adjourned meeting of the committee will be held July 22.

Mr. Berolzheimer's project for a conservatory of music under municipal direction is referred to in his statement as one of the reasons why he favors the Madison Square Garden plan rather than the plan to build a bridge over the Hudson River, which was the first choice of the jury of artists. Mr. Berolzheimer had announced his conservatory plan at a luncheon last week, and three days later, when the Mayor's Memorial Committee met to take up the recommendation of the jury of artists, which had been indorsed by the subcommittee on art of the Mayor's committee, Mr. Berolzheimer announced that the Mayor was strongly opposed to a bridge, "because a bridge is merely a question of transportation and not of war memorial."

"This meeting was adjourned," said Mr. Berolzheimer yesterday, "not only for the purpose of giving the architects and other artists an opportunity to reconsider the question of a permanent memorial, but especially because Mayor Hylan desires to give the people an opportunity to express their views on this question before definite action is taken. If the people will write their views to the Mayor at the City Hall it will be much easier to come to a definite decision by the end of next month.

"After rejecting sixty-seven designs exhibited in the Mayor's reception room a short time ago the jury of artists now recommends a bridge over the Hudson River, a Liberty Hall on the site of the present Madison Square Garden, with a modification to add a conservatory of music to it, conducted on the highest standard, or finally a Liberty Arch.

"If the city furnishes the site, amounting to approximately $3,000,000, the building, which is to contain an auditorium for 20,000 people and other features, is to be provided for by direct subscriptions from the citizens of Greater New York, amounting to about $15,000,000.

"The organization of this conservatory of music is to be established by the best known experts free of charge, but the management is to be provided by the general budget or otherwise. The Chairman of the jury of artists seems to favor a Liberty Hall. No one has opposed the conservatory, which will be of international scope and give the poor artists of talent a chance to receive a musical education free of charge, which has probably never been done before."

LABOR NEEDS LIVING WAGE.

Prerequisite to Industrial Peace, W. L. Chenery Tells Ascension Forum

Never have the majority of workers in our industries received a living wage, and until they do we will not have industrial peace, asserted William L. Chenery, industrial editor of The Survey, who spoke last night at the People's Forum of the Church of the Ascension, at Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street.

Mr. Chenery's subject was "Six Months of Unrest, with Constructive Proposals." He first criticised methods used in some of the States to solve labor troubles, and, referring to the Kansas Industrial Court, said: "Governor Allen's plan of an Industrial Court, taken from the Australian system, would be a good plan if it worked, but it doesn't work. You can hale industrial leaders into court, but industrial leaders don't mine coal."

Mr. Chenery commended the Transportation act because it recognizes collective bargaining as the right of labor. "It is true that we had the railroad strike," he said, "but that came in spite of the Transportation act rather than because of it. The defects seemed to be in the actual government of the brotherhoods themselves."

Voluntary working out of the problems by the employer and employe themselves, the speaker said, through organization and collective bargaining on the part of both would bring the solution of industrial problems with the least friction. The printers and the garment trades were on the right track with their agreements established by collective bargaining, he declared.

Referring again to what he called the "fundamentals," namely, the fact that the majority of industrial workers do not earn today what the President's Industrial Conference called a "living wage," Mr. Chenery said: "According to the figures compiled by the Director General of Railroads, 91 per cent. of the railroad employes get less than a living wage, or $2,200 annually, and from 60 to 70 per cent. receive less than a subsistence wage, or $1,500 a year.

"Except in some organized fields you will find that these conditions are true for all of our industries. We will not have industrial peace as long as people are hungry."

SINGLE TAXERS TO MEET.

National Convention Called for Chicago, July 10, 12 and 13.

A call has been issued for a national convention of the Single Tax Party July 10, 12 and 13 in Chicago, it was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the National Committee of the party, 32 East Thirteenth Street. The call is signed by Robert C. Macauley of Pennsylvania, National Chairman. The Committee on Arrangements includes Herman G. Loew and E. Yancey Cohen of New Jersey, Arthur Morino of Rhode Island, James A. Robinson of Pennsylvania, and Joseph Dana Miller and Frank Choderov of New York.

An effort will be made to obtain the endorsement of the Committee of Forty-eight, which will hold a conference in Chicago at the same time.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 12 (Associated Press).—Damad Ferid Pasha, Turkish Grand Vizier, left here today for Paris on the Turkish steamer Goljemal. The vessel will take him to Taranto, Italy, and from there, it is expected, he will go by train.

The general impression in Constantinople is that Damad Ferid will not sign the treaty in its present form, it being pointed out that if he did so his life would be in danger.

An attempt was made recently to assassinate the Grand Vizier. Before his departure today the four men convicted of plotting to bring about his death were publicly hanged. The word "assassin" was printed on the white shirts which they wore. Three of the executed men were former army officers.

GIRLS LOSING CASTE, PRINCETON '20 HEARS

BLAMES GODDESS OF FOLLY

PRINCETON, N. J., June 13.—"We are weakly allowing ourselves to be ruled by the Goddess of Folly, slaves in her domain to the fashion of the hour. The modern dress, the modern dance, the modern music, and modern manners of today are symptoms that indicate that somehow in this age we have lost our bearings, and that the old values of life, once so highly prized, have been forgotten."

These startling words, uttered by President John Grier Hibben today in his baccalaureate sermon delivered to the senior class of Princeton University, were introductory to still more startling statements about the status of woman in present-day society. "There is no longer an aura of mystery about the young woman today," said Dr. Hibben. "Today our illusions seem to be gone; everything is obvious; no word is left unsaid and no veil drawn."

Dr. Hibben also deplored what he declared was the decline of the splendid idealism which marked the years of the war. He pointed to growing unrest and lack of restraint in industrial and social relations as danger signals to the nation. Of fiscal matters he said:

"In matters of finance there is an inflation not only of currency and credit, but of wild projects and enterprises which lack all substance of sanity and reason."

Dr. Hibben's sermon was delivered in Alexander Hall in the presence not only of the members of the graduating class and the Faculty, but of a host of relatives and friends of the seniors present for the exercises held in connection with the 173d commencement.

Recalls War Spirit.

Dr. Hibben said in part:

"Today I have particularly in mind the danger of a loss to you of something of incalculable value. It is not the danger of missing something which you have never experienced, but of losing that which you have already possessed. That possession you shared in common with us all during the years of 1917 and 1918. There came to you then a peculiar elevation of spirit, when the world suddenly awakened to a realization that there was a cause to defend, challenging one's loyalty and commanding one's devotion, and that there was something to believe in, something to fight for and something even to die for. There was no one of us who failed to experience this moral and spiritual exhilaration. In those days we lived on the high places of the earth, and saw the vision and dreamed the dream of a new order of things in the world. The words 'Duty, Sacrifice, Service' were often on our lips and constantly in our thoughts. More than that, they were actually illustrated in the lives of most of the men now before me. The cause itself has been vindicated by arms, but its ideals have not been realized as yet in the days of peace. Too soon we are tempted to forget past allegiance and loyalty.

"We had hoped that the results of the war would be wholly beneficent, and that in the new world, so dearly bought, it would be easier for one to do that which was right, and that every circumstance and condition of life would be conducive to a nobler mode of living, to a glorified view of duty and of opportunity, and to a wider scope for a manifestation of that which is highest in man.

Charges Moral Laxity.

"Instead of the fulfillment of this dream, we have come to feel the deadening effect of a violent reaction. We have allowed ourselves to sink to lower levels of aspiration and endeavor. About us is a world of confusion and turmoil, and under the spell of a general moral laxity we are groping in the dark for the ray of light which we have not yet discovered. In the industrial world there is under production restless discontent and unscrupulous profiteering. The high cost of living is not combated by thrift, but rather by reckless extravagance.

"Self-interest and self-indulgence have suddenly asserted themselves. The very world itself has grown smaller in our minds since the Fall of 1918. We have become cowardly in the face of evident responsibility, and there are many who are quite ready to limit our national obligations to the shores of the Atlantic and the Pacific and selfishly to say to all the peoples of the world, 'Henceforth, we are determined to live unto ourselves.'

"There is the danger of a lessening if not a loss of the old-time reverence for womanhood. There is no longer an aura of mystery about the young woman today, a mystery at once her defense and her glory, and whenever in the history of the race this divine prerogative of womanhood is lightly regarded or recklessly scorned, it has always proved a symptom of decadence far-reaching and disastrous. Every age of moral and spiritual progress in the history of any people has always been an age of chivalry, in which womanhood has not only been respected but revered.

Invokes Pilgrims' Code.

"What is the meaning of all this? This confusion of distinctions and standards in our industrial, social and political life? Is it to be explained merely by the suggestion that it is a natural reaction due to the great war? Suppose the war is the chief cause of the selfishness and extravagance, the foolish recklessness of our life today. This is no reason for us to accept the present situation without protest against it, or a determined effort to improve it. This year marks the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. We would not care to reinstate their austerity of manner in our present day and generation, but we indeed could accept with advantage somewhat of the austerity of their morals.

"The very helplessness of the world today is in itself a repudiation of that self-sufficient and self-confident view of life that the world in its progressive development has outgrown the need of religion. It is religion which gives the world what it most needs, a standard of right living, a cause to maintain and defend, a leader to follow and a law to obey."

After a tribute to Princeton men who died in the World War, Dr. Hibben said, in closing:

DAY SUGGESTS FINING EXTRAVAGANT BUYERS

Syracuse Chancellor Would Also Punish Labor Profiteers as Well as Merchants.

SYRACUSE, June 13.—Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and Major Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A., joined with Syracuse University today in honoring the memory of her sons who died in the World War.

"We all know America, we of France," the Ambassador said. "We have gone deep enough to find you out. Only a great nation could do as you have done. There is established a friendship that nothing can break.

"France has survived every great disaster in her history. We shall survive our victory. We have signed a treaty, your country and mine. But we know it is unimportant except as it says to the world that we stand together. We know that if you were threatened, our people would never be kept from coming to your aid. And we know that you would come to our aid in the same way."

General Edwards said that a vital need today was "a system that will train our boys to be citizens, that will establish their health and fit them for the battle of life, that will turn them out fit to marry at 20. And if you think that wars are ended, put two 9-months-old babies together on the rug and drop a toy between them and see what happens."

Chancellor James R. Day in his baccalaureate address to the graduating class said that "the peculiar and striking feature of this time was that service, public spirit, the common good, made no appeal."

"When the average working man," he said, "can earn the living of seven days in two, it is a great temptation to loaf four days. It is not the rich oppressing the poor. It is the poor oppressing both the poor and the rich. It is getting money on false pretenses.

"I would move an amendment on the profiteer price law: Fine the man who pays three times more than he can afford to pay. And if you are going to fine the traders for charging too much, fine the mechanic and workingman for exacting three times what their labor is worth simply because they can get it.

"What the world needs today more than all things is the old-fashioned religion with honesty in it and duty and service of men and faith in God in it."

SEES WORLD AT LOW LEVEL

But Union College President Believes It Will Rise Again.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 13.—The 124th commencement of Union College opened this evening, when President Richmond delivered the baccalaureate sermon before the largest graduating class in the history of the college. Many of the graduates had seen active service in the army or navy, and these Dr. Richmond's words on the duty of Americans appealed with special interest.

"In the last few years," said the president, "we have seen an exhibit projected on a scale which ought to serve the world as a warning for all time. We have seen that to produce a nation bred to cold-blooded efficiency and to scientific cruelty was not a service to the world, but a blow at its very life. We have seen it end in disaster. The fact that such a philosophy of life has been defeated and spurned has put new hope into the heart of all those who set the soul above the body and the spirit above the flesh.

"It remains for us to interpret this decision into fact. We have not done so. There is evidence enough to show that for the moment, at least, we have reacted to a lower level. The magnificent spirit called out by the demands for sacrifice and heroism has flattened out into a passion for self-indulgence and a mean competition of greed. It is a passing phase. We have too much faith in human nature to believe that we shall not recover. But we must not blind ourselves to the fact that the world over the mass of men and women are in the mood to barter their spiritual inheritance for a mess of pottage.

"If we think for a moment that the confusion into which this world has been thrown is to be straightened out by the devices of economists or by the manipulation of political experts we are making a hideous mistake. It will be done, if it is done at all, as it was done in the beginning when the Spirit of God brooded over the face of the deep and brought an ordered world out of chaos. Any League of Nations, revised or unrevised, is but a silly pretense unless it has under it and running through and through its very essence the spirit of faith and hope and love and the fear of God."

Miss Ada Titus Engaged.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ada Gibson Titus, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Coddington Titus of 127 West Eleventh Street, to Thomas Harvey McClure, a nephew of S. S. McClure. Mr. McClure was in the aviation corps of the Naval Reserve Force, and saw service in France. After the armistice he was attached to the Hoover organization in Northern France. He recently resigned as director of naval publicity. The wedding will probably take place in the Autumn.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES O. CAREY, proprietor of the Douglas Manor Hotel at Douglas Manor, L. I., died last night of apoplexy at a dance at the Douglaston Club. He was 43 years old.

JOHN F. SCANLON, 80 years old, a special agent of the Treasury Department and a former member of the Illinois House of Representatives, died at his home in Chicago last night of pneumonia. He was one of the founders of the Catholic Order of Foresters and was head of that organization for many years.

HOTEL COMMODORE FIRE PANIC AVERTED

escaped injury when the pieces of ceiling crashed to the floor. Deputy Chief Martin estimated that a conservative figure for the damage would be about $35,000, adding that he believed the loss would exceed that figure because of the expensive tapestries and draperies which were destroyed.

In the meanwhile the reserves from the East Fifty-first Street Station under Captain William Davis had been hurried down to the hotel. A big crowd of the curious attracted by the clanging of the fire apparatus and their stop in front of the big gray hotel were thronging the streets and making the work of the firemen difficult.

While the policemen were hurrying into the hotel and endeavoring to persuade the few guests who had made their way to the lobby that the building was not in danger the alarm of fire had been carried to the upper stories. Despite the earliness of the hour, many of the rooms were tenanted, and the word "Fire" speedily sent the men and women guests out into the corridors.

Although there was no mistaking the smoke that now and then carried to a floor immediately above the west ballroom floor, the guests, for the most part, failed to display alarm until after their attempt to get to the elevators had proved that the cars were not running. Guest after guest, many of them carrying bags and clothing, rushed down the corridors to the cars, only to find that their ringing failed to produce an elevator.

Then, balked in this and knowing that somewhere in the building a fire was in progress, some of the guests high up in the Commodore's twenty-eight stories began to get nervous. Most of them, however, returned to their rooms and put the telephone into service in an effort to find out what the danger was.

As a result of the sudden rush of calls the hotel's telephone board was swamped. Edward F. Sweeney, manager of the hotel, himself jumped to the board and worked strenuously, telling the guests that the Commodore's fireproof construction rendered it practically immune from the danger that some of the guests apparently feared.

This method of fighting any danger of panic proved effective, and even while the firemen were still battling away at the stubborn blaze on the second floor, calm gradually penetrated through the 2,000 rooms of the hotel. The telephone calls dropped almost to normal while Deputy Chief "Smoky Joe" Martin was still ordering more hose run into the hotel.

The deluge of water concentrated on the gilded ceilings and walls of the ballroom checked the blaze and the firemen were able to dash in with hooks and rip down the ceilings and the walls and get at the source of the flames. It was quickly found to be sparks from electric wires that were feeding the fire, and the current was ordered off. It could not be ascertained last night whether the stoppage of the lighting power had anything to do with the failure of the elevators to function.

Almost half an hour after the arrival of Martin and his men the fire was under control, and within an hour all sparks had been put out. The ballroom, however, and a big section of the corridor leading to it were practically ruined by the combination of flame, water and smoke.

The earlier fire in the hotel was trivial. A pedestrian passing the Forty-second Street side of the hotel saw an awning smoldering over a window on the eleventh floor, and he turned in an alarm. Before the firemen arrived, however, the hotel's force had succeeded in putting out the fire with fire extinguishers. The police declared that the awning had been ignited by the dropping of a cigarette. A similar fire, also caused by a smoker's carelessness, occurred at the hotel several weeks ago.

SAVES 4 CHILDREN ADRIFT ON LAKE ERIE

HAD BEEN LOST 27 HOURS

Broken Oar All They Had to Navigate With—Boy "Captain" Rescued Two.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., June 13.—Amid the cheers and hysterical sobbing of 1,000 passengers, men and women, on the steamer City of Toledo four small children who had been adrift for twenty-seven hours in a cockleshell boat were rescued on Lake Erie shortly before noon today, when they were about thirty miles off shore.

The children drifted from Lakeside, Mich., at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and while they were far from land two of them who got out of the boat were rescued by 9-year-old Merwin Daso, one of the party.

The children are Robert, aged 3, Richard 6 and Merwin 9, sons of Merwin Daso of 2,409 Maplewood Avenue, Toledo, and Violet Sperry, their first cousin, 11 years old, who had been living with the Daso family at Lakeside.

Young Merwin, the hero of the adventure, told the passengers just how it happened. They started out from Lakeside with a broken oar and two sticks, intending to push themselves along the shallow shore. Soon they were a long way out and they could not get the boat headed back for Lakeside.

Violet was suffering from sunburn Saturday afternoon and did "a lot of crying," Merwin said. Late in the afternoon she conceived the bright idea of getting out and pushing the boat.

She could not touch bottom, of course, and Merwin was afraid she was going to drown. When she was unable to climb back into the boat and the boy found it impossible to pull her in, he placed a rope around her waist and tied it to the bottom of the boat. For a long time it looked as if "Vi" would have to trail along the water, but Merwin finally succeeded in getting her into the boat. Violet was "about all in," Merwin told the passengers, and soon went to sleep.

Saturday night Bob fell overboard. Merwin at once plunged into the lake and keeping one hand on the boat caught Bob by his rompers and pulled him back in. Bob soon went to sleep and Violet woke up. Violet proceeded from the rear to the front of the boat to see how Bob was getting on and nearly fell overboard. Merwin insisted that she "turn in" after that.

As it began to get dark they all became frightened, but Merwin decided to take "command," and ordered the others to go to sleep, telling them he would wake them up after he had done the watch.

During the night Dick, Violet and little Bob, took turns at watching for ships. Dick says that during his watch two tugs passed them and Merwin confirms this, for he was awakened by the "First Mate." They did a lot of hollering, Merwin said, but the tugs went on their way.

With the rising of the sun Sunday Merwin decided to take off his undershirt, and placing it on the end of a stick he held it for hours, hoping that a passing ship might pick up his party. The sun soon became too hot, and Merwin, unable to stand the heat of the rays on his bare back, pulled down the signal and again took to paddling.

When the City of Toledo hove in sight Merwin and Dick, one with the broken oar and the other with a stick, were doing their best to send the rowboat along. They were going with the wind in a northeasterly direction and drifting further into the lake. Violet was crying that she was hungry. She had been putting water on her blistered back. Bob was curled in sleep in the bow.

EX-JUSTICE HALL DEAD.

Former Justice Ernest Hall of the New York Supreme Court died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at his home, 1,087 Boston Road, the Bronx, after an illness of a week of pneumonia, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He had offices at 64 William Street. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Faith, 166th Street and Trinity Avenue, and interment will be private.

Mr. Hall came to the United States in 1850 with his father. He was graduated from the Morrisania Public School and entered the law office of a Morrisania lawyer. In 1863 he enlisted in the 71st Regiment and served throughout the Gettysburg campaign. In May, 1864, he enlisted in the United States Navy. After leaving the navy Mr. Hall entered the law school of the University of the City of New York, from which he was graduated in July, 1866. In 1872 he was chosen Corporation Counsel of Morrisania. When Morrisania was annexed to the City of New York in 1874 Mr. Hall was retained by the Corporation Counsel until 1877, when the firm of Hall, Brown & Wescott was formed, with offices at 261 Broadway.

In 1881 Mr. Hall was elected Justice of the Marine Court, now the City Court of New York, where he served for six years without the loss of a single day, and without ever entering the courtroom more than a minute after the time set for opening court. In 1899 Judge Hall was appointed referee in bankruptcy for the Southern District of New York, and on June 9, 1902, he was appointed by Governor Odell a Justice of the Supreme Court of New York to fill the unexpired term of Justice Miles Beach, deceased.

THE CRANE TRADITION

GLIDDEN FINDS SIAM AGOG OVER AVIATION

Herman Bernstein Finds Her Warlike—Urges Trade with Russia.

Siam is leading most of the countries of the world in aeronautical development, and aviation is dominating the interest of the people, while governmental and private agencies are backing aeronautical enterprises on a large scale, according to Charles J. Glidden, who returned yesterday on the Imperator of the Cunard line. Mr. Glidden, who is back from a trip around the world in connection with the globe encircling aerial derby which the Aero Club of America is organizing, said that since leaving New York last October he had traveled nearly forty thousand miles. Commodore Louis D. Beaumont and Sidney Hillman, co-members of the aerial commission, remained on the other side to continue the work of organizing the race.

"In all the countries we visited we were most cordially received by the heads of the Government," said Mr. Glidden. "We found a world-wide interest in the race. Commissioners were appointed to assist in the race, and when the list is finally completed sixty countries and colonies will be represented. Handley-Page has arranged to provide for the transportation of three passengers around the world in the race as a test flight."

The Imperator, the former Hamburg-American liner allocated to the British, had been out of commission for several weeks as a result of a serious list which developed on the last trip to the other side. The smoke stacks have been shortened and other changes made, entirely correcting the trouble. Passengers yesterday were loud in their praise of the steamer's performance.

Mackay Party Returns.

Prominent among the 427 saloon passengers was Clarence H. Mackay, head of the Commercial Cable and Postal Telegraph Companies, who brought back with him Mrs. John W. Mackay, his mother, and the Countess Jules de Bonvouloirs, his niece. Count de Bonvouloirs was also a member of the party. The steamer carried the body of Mr. Mackay's sister, the Princess Colonna di Stigliano, who died in March of last year while in the service of the Italian Red Cross. The body will be interred in the Mackay mausoleum in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn. Because of the nature of the home coming, Mr. Mackay declined to make any comment on politics or business.

Peter Cooper Hewitt returned to attend to business affairs here. He will sail again for Europe in a few weeks to join Mrs. Hewitt, who is in Paris. He said great progress was being made abroad in the development of the wireless telephone. He believed the next step would be in using much less electricity. Experimenters on the other side, he said, were using only three kilowatts of electric power to operate wireless telephones successfully for a distance of more than 200 miles.

Herman Bernstein came back on the Imperator from a tour through Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, France, England and Italy. It was his intention to visit Russia, but the Soviet Government barred him.

"The present curse of Europe is that the people have either forgotten how to work or have lost their desire for work," said Mr. Bernstein. "The uncertainty of conditions today is preventing the working people from thinking of tomorrow.

Finds Hungary Warlike.

"Austria has indeed become a pauper State, whose condition is tragic. Hungary is warlike, in the throes of white or black terror, and before long there will undoubtedly be another outbreak in that part of the world. Czechoslovakia is meanwhile the most contented of the States that grew out of the war.

"Germany is perhaps the only country where, despite the disturbed political conditions, the people have returned to work, realizing that only in work lies their salvation.

"Peace must be made with Russia. The doors of Russia must be opened and free intercourse established between Russia and the outer world. Then the world will find out whether the Soviet régime is as good or as bad as it is painted. It seems that they have abandoned some of their extreme Bolshevism, and are ready for peace with the world. The world needs Russia as much as Russia needs the world."

Central Europe is showing a preference for American made goods and the opportunities offered to American business in those countries should not be overlooked, said H. Land, a New York business man, who spent four months there. An American passport was an open sesame, he declared, and nowhere was there any hostility shown. Conditions in Vienna were very bad at present, Mr. Land found; the shops were half empty and the merchants showed little desire to sell their stocks, hoping that the deflated currency would get back to normal again.

"Bucharest and Vienna are singing American jazz songs," he said. "The populace learn all the tunes familiar here and won't tolerate national music."

A. Rathbone, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, was among the arrivals. He said he had been in France on Governmental business, chiefly in connection with reparations.

The docking of the Imperator on a Sunday cost the Cunard line more than $2,500, representing the sum they will have to pay under the Customs ruling adopted a few months ago. The Customs officials receive no salaries for Sunday or holiday work, and the steamship companies have to pay them double rates for their services on such days.

HEAVY TRAVEL FROM SOUTH.

Every steamer arriving now from Cuba and South and Central American points is bringing a capacity quota, and every train from the South brings between fifty and a hundred Cubans who were unable to get steamship accommodations to New York and therefore journeyed via Key West and the railroad, according to Charles Le Maire, Latin-American travel representative of the Boomer-du Pont Hotels.

"In Havana a few weeks ago I was told by officials in their foreign department that fully 20,000 Cubans, including many whole families, would leave the island for Summer vacations," said Mr. Le Maire. "A great many of these people are making their first visit from home, and they are about evenly divided between Europe and the United States. I do not believe that prohibition has much to do with the situation, and it is steamship and hotel accommodations which have the final bearing upon the vacationists' ultimate destination.

Put yourself in their place

BELIEVING that the average woman would be eager to have the settlement of her husband's estate left in experienced hands, the Columbia Trust Company sent out a trained woman investigator to secure the viewpoint of New York women.

The following interviews selected at random are typical. We recommend that you read them thoughtfully. Some of them may strike close to home:

Elderly housekeeper for Barnard students

"If, before my husband died, I had known something about a Trust Company's service, such as you describe, I would not now be trying to make both ends meet by keeping a students' boarding house."

Prominent suffragist stopping at the Waldorf

"I wish I could get hold of a course of lectures or talks about finance and the handling of other people's money. What you say about having a Trust Company settle estates interests me."

Elderly woman on the train

"My husband attends to all financial matters. If he died I would not have the slightest idea what to do."

Nurse taking care of elderly invalid

"I know all about a Trust Company because it happens that Mr. H's affairs are being taken care of by your own Company. I have had a splendid opportunity to see how finely his money matters have been handled since his illness. He told me way back last fall that you were going to settle his estate."

Woman shopper in Altman's

"I cannot get my husband to talk to me about wills and Trust Companies. When he does he uses such terms as executors, beneficiaries, etc., and when I ask him to explain what they mean I always forget which is which."

Woman in Federal Reserve Board Office

"I am very busy today but can tell you that thousands of dollars of the insurance money left to women folk by their soldier husbands, brothers or fathers has just flitted away."

Grey-haired woman—a clerk

"It is several years since my husband died leaving me a large sum of money. He put everything in the hands of a friend of his, and then my daughter and I traveled abroad for two years. When we returned, I found that this man had used my money to cover margins on speculations and had lost almost all of it. Of course, my husband should have left that money for me in the care of a Trust Company. I didn't know anything about Trust Companies then and suppose he didn't either."

Business woman connected with a stock and bond house

"Most women who come to us don't know the difference between a stock and a bond. I don't believe they realize the difference between a bank and a Trust Company, or the common sense advantages of having a Trust Company settle their husband's estate."

The above are cold facts. Your own experience can no doubt add many others—cases of actual want and privation—which could have been so simply avoided if men had written into their wills, "I appoint the Columbia Trust Company as my executor."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, June 13.—A most daring Bolshevist cavalry raid brought about a unique battle southwest of Kiev before that city was once more evacuated by the Poles.

As I have recently reported, General Budenny, who commands the Red army on the Ukrainian front between the Dnieper and Dniester, reported to Trotsky his despair regarding the task of retaking Kiev. Trotsky's answer was to send him strong reinforcements and bid him attack on a certain date when his movements would coincide with important action elsewhere.

Now Budenny is nothing if not daring, and on receiving additional troops he decided on a coup of a remarkable nature. A force of 5,000 of his Red horsemen drove on Wednesday night right through the centre of the Polish lines west of Byelaya Tsirko. A few miles farther on it split into three, one detachment moving on Berdichev and another on Fastova, cutting in the two places the southernmost of the three railway lines to Kiev, while the centre column rode, boot and saddle, on Jitomir, which was entered yesterday before the Polish General Staff was aware Budenny was on the warpath. Through Jitomir runs the central of the three lines of communication with Kiev.

The raiders spent Thursday working destruction over a considerable area. Farms were set on fire, railway lines ripped up and captured stores and rolling stock destroyed. It was a Red joyday.

Toward evening three columns again began to push north to cut the only remaining line to Kiev at Korosyshev thus isolating the city and placing about 50,000 Polish troops in the greatest danger. But opposition was encountered from Polish infantry posts and strong cavalry patrols rushed south from Korostyshev.

Early in the following forenoon, the raiding Reds got a great surprise. Polish airplanes were out against them. From Korostyshev one squadron sent the Soviet horsemen riding for their lives out of Jitomir, while another swarm from Kiev attacked those who were playing havoc at Fastova.

Cavalry and airmen all day played a deadly game of hide and seek, the fliers running the Reds to earth by forcing them to take shelter in woods.

WARSAW, June 13 (Associated Press).—The evacuation of Kiev has been completed, the Poles withdrawing to the region of Jitomir after destroying the bridges over the Dneiper. The American Red Cross workers, according to latest accounts, had made preparations to evacuate Kiev with the army.

News of the evacuation reached Warsaw Saturday night, being the first report from Kiev in several days. Just prior to the cutting off of communication by the Bolsheviki, General Rydsmigiy, the commander at Kiev, sent a dispatch that he would make a stand unless otherwise ordered. With difficulty the Poles got through a personal order from General Pilsudski, the Commander in Chief, to the Kiev commander to evacuate immediately.

General Budenny, the Russian commander who fought against Denikin, is bringing up reinforcements, the dispatches say, but the military authorities assert that the fight for Kiev is not yet ended by any means.

North of Kiev the Poles are battling against the Bolsheviki, who are endeavoring to cut the Korosten-Kiev Railroad to join forces with the cavalry of General Budenny, which is striking northerly from the region southwest of Kiev. Fighting is general all along the Berdichev-Fastova-Kiev Railroad, and the territory in this region is changing hands daily.

In a dash to the northwest the cavalry of General Budenny passed Berdichev, killing peasants en route. It proceeded as far as Jitemir, where it is alleged the cavalry killed several wounded Poles in a hospital.

Fighting on the northern front has brought victory to the Poles, who have ousted the Bolsheviki from territory gained in the recent offensive. The Poles are consolidating their lines from the Dvina southward along the Beresina.

Say Poles Wrecked City.

LONDON, June 13.—Before evacuating Kiev, according to the latest Bolshevist communique issued yesterday, the Poles blew up the Vladimir Cathedral, the railway stations, the electric power station and the aqueduct. Destruction of the latter, the communique says, doomed the population to the horror of epidemics. The communique adds:

"Capture of Kiev was effected by the Bolsheviki debouching to the rear of the enemy and capturing the Kiev-Korosten Railroad in the Korodianka-Tedrev sector. We then crossed the Dnieper River and entered the city. Near Vasilkoff we defeated the enemy, who is fleeing in panic northwestward, abandoning military transports.

"In the Crimea, after three days' fighting, we have taken 3,000 prisoners."

The workers of the world are appealed to by the Russian Official Investnik News Agency to protest against property destruction by the Poles at Kiev and Borisov, says another wireless message received from Moscow. The responsibility for this damage, asserts the appeal, must be shared by the British and French Governments. It declares the destruction of the Vladimir Cathedral a more barbarous act than the destruction of Rheims Cathedral by the Germans.

"The patience of the world's proletariats," continues the statement, "must surely be exhausted by these barbarities. The Polish reptile must be made harmless. We must abolish the barbarous rule of the land owners and capitalists by means of fraternal cooperation with the Polish workers."

VIENNA, June 13.—The Austrian Government has notified the Entente Powers of a demand of the Soviet Government to allow the transportation of Bela Kuhn and his confederates to Russia.

The United States and France have replied giving consent only on condition of the instant release of American and French citizens interned in Russia. England has not yet replied, while Italy declares she is not interested in the matter.

DOUBTS SOVIET HAS FALLEN.

LONDON, June 13.—Nothing has been received in London from any source confirmatory of the report from Tokio that the Bolshevist Government has been overthrown by a revolution and Leon Trotsky killed.

The Bolshevist military communiqués by wireless have been received daily. The latest, dated June 12, was received today and announces that the Bolsheviki have occupied Kiev.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE, 94, HAS OPERATION ON EYE

MADRID, June 13.—Former Empress Eugenie of France is able to see much better than for years, thanks to an operation for cataract, performed since her arrival in Madrid, where she is the guest of her nephew, the Duke of Alba. Despite her 94 years, the former Empress consented to undergo the operation, which was performed by Dr. Jacinto Barraquer, a Barcelona oculist, who invented an instrument for cataract removal.

The frailty of Eugenie permitted the use of only a local anaesthetic. The surgeon made a slight incision in the cataract, applied cocaine, and then the instrument, which acts on the suction principle, was used. After six days the obstruction was drawn aside, without pain. When the bandages were removed Eugenie was able to read for the first time in many years. The cataract cannot be removed entirely without cutting, therefore the ultimate success of the operation cannot be forecast.

BELFAST, June 13.—Another policeman, Constable King, was murdered at Glengariff, County Cork, last night.

CALLS LEAGUE A NECESSITY.

But Brown's President Says It Must Have Good Will Behind It.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, June 13.—"Some sort of League of Nations we must have to save the world from Chaos," declared President William H. P. Faunce at the annual baccalaureate exercises of Brown University this afternoon. "But no possible league will work unless the spirit of international respect and comity and good will lie behind it. We cannot clamp the nations together by stout legislative appliances.

"Let us cease to rely on Governments to do our thinking for us, to cure our disease, to solve our problems and bring peace on earth to men of ill-will. That task is impossible. We must travel steadily away from mechanism to spontaneous action, away from the external clamps to the unity of the spirit, away from enforced organisation to the free brotherhood of man.

"We imagine that if we could organise the industrial world more perfectly we could solve our problems. If capital could combine in one great corporation, if labor could form one big union, if each occupation could form its own soviet, if every trade could have its own journal and executive council—then we imagine we could attain our ends. No delusion could be greater. The soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul.

"No court of arbitration can take the place of sincere good will. No shop committee can bring peace to those who do not want to understand the other man. No collective bargaining can bring happiness to those who hate their daily task. No shrewd scheme of organisation can do away with the one great essential of life together—to know how the other half thinks and why he thinks so."

Wins a Fellowship in Architecture.

On exhibition in Avery Hall, Columbia, are the drawings entered in the competition for the McKim traveling fellowship in the Columbia School of Architecture. These designs are also the thesis drawings for the graduating class. The winning design is by Samuel Oxhandler and is a "bird's-eye perspective" submitted for a war memorial and city stadium. The fellowship is valued at $1,500. It permits the student to travel in Europe as long as the money lasts.

MILD GREEK RULE PREVAILS IN SMYRNA

FIGHTING ON KEMAL'S FRONT

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SMYRNA, June 7.—The occupation of Smyrna by the Greeks, according to the terms of peace with Turkey, has aroused the armed resistance of Turkish conspirators and stirred them to greater anger than the allied occupation of Constantinople. A hundred kilometers from the coast of Asia Minor the Greek Army faces Turkish soldiers enrolled, armed and disciplined, mostly against their will, by Mustapha Kemal and his confederates in disobedience to the Sultan's orders, but in secret alliance with all those Turks who under the old regime lived by the system of political tyranny, corruption and plunder which it embodied.

They hold a line which isolates the interior from the coast, so that the old caravan routes are broken, two railway lines to the port of Smyrna are cut, and the merchandise which used to pass coastward from ships in the gulf, flying the flags of all nations, in return for the oil, figs, raisins, wool and carpets of Asia Minor has ceased to flow. Along the line where Turk faces Greek with hostile purpose there is something in the nature of the old trench warfare, desultory shelling, night raids, affairs of outposts, when bodies of Turks cut up a Greek patrol or slit the throat of a Greek sentry, or when the Greeks make a dash into the Turkish lines.

Here, therefore, in Smyrna and its neighborhood is a test case which will decide whether Ottoman rule shall prevail over Asia Minor and over all the Christian communities which have been under the Turkish yoke so long, or whether the Greek spirit will be strong enough to break the evil spell which was cast over their race when the Ottoman Sultans began their massacres in the Middle Ages.

Turkish Outrages on Greeks.

Since I have been in Smyrna I have heard tragic narratives of the sufferings inflicted upon the Greek populations in Asia Minor during the last six years. Like the Armenians, the Greeks were deported from their villages into the interior, and on these long marches through the snow in Winter and under burning sun in Summer, starved, flogged, robbed, outraged, stricken with disease, thousands of them died. Many of their villages are in ruins as complete as those which were made a thousand years ago.

Their vineyards are leveled, their industries are destroyed. Of the survivors many are refugees living on the charity of other towns, and in Smyrna there are thousands of orphans whose parents have disappeared in the mystery that hides many tragedies of massacre and misery. Beyond the Turkish lines there is a great silence as to the fate of many little communities of Greeks and no news comes through.

Something about all that story was told me by the Metropolitan, or Archbishop as we should call him, of Smyrna. In his black robes with a high black cap over his long hair, this tall, bearded man pointed to a picture on the wall by his side, representing the martyrdom of St. Polycarp, a man of 86, who died for his faith in Smyrna at the hands of the Romans 155 A. D.

"Many of my people have suffered worse tortures," he said, "during the last few years, and many Greek men and women have died like Polycarp rather than adopt the faith of their oppressors."

He deplored his ignorance of the fate of all the Greek Christians cut off from communication in the interior, but rejoiced in the belief that with England's help they would be rescued from the perils that menaced them.

When one recalls the brutalities inflicted by Turks upon Greek men and women so recently, as for many centuries, it is to the credit of the Greeks that in their zone of occupation in Asia Minor their policy and practice—after the deplorable day when they first landed at Smyrna—are to give the Turkish populations friendship and favor. In Constantinople I was told that Smyrna was an unsafe place for any stranger and that in the city and countryside there were constant fights and murders between the two races. My first impressions and my last give the lie to those tales, and I have been impressed by the absolute peace prevailing between Greeks and Turks within the Greek zone.

Greeks' Mild Rule in Smyrna.

Under the wise guidance of Venizelos the Greeks are administering their Turkish territory with justice and mercy, and with even a generous spirit, to the Turkish population. The Prefect of Smyrna is a Turk, Hadji Bey, and all the Turkish officials of the municipality have remained at their posts with authority over the civil side of the administration. I took coffee with Hadji Bey and his assistants, and they told me that the Greek rule had been accepted by the Turks in Smyrna with resignation and without rebellion.

The problem of the Greeks is difficult, and the courage of the people will be tested by what the next twelve months holds for them. With Mustapha Kemal raising Turkish levies against them, they cannot demobilise their army, and the daily cost of maintaining these officers and men is a dreadful drain upon the resources of the State. Unless communication is established between the coast and the interior the port of Smyrna will be idle and empty and many Greek merchants will be ruined. The line held by the Kemalists must be broken by force or by persuasion or the Greek hold will be hard to maintain. If Kemal's line is broken by force there may be guerrilla warfare among the mountains, which will be long-enduring and costly to both sides. That is the gloomy side of the picture for the Greeks, but I find them full of hope and with spirits elated by the great chance which fortune offers them.

Troops Guard Milan Railroad.

LONDON, June 13.—Troops have occupied the Milan railway stations, following a strike of the railway workers, according to a Central News dispatch from Rome.

King Victor Receives Giolitti.

Italian and German Political Crises Cause Concern Among French Statesmen

PARIS, June 12.—The simultaneous resignation of four European Cabinets—the Italian, Polish, Hungarian and Austrian—is viewed in official circles here to be significant chiefly as demonstrating the difficulty of adapting politics and economic conditions to the peace terms.

The immediate causes of the resignations were different in each case, but behind them, said a well-informed French diplomat today, were economic anxieties and general unrest, with lingering pangs on the part of the defeated peoples not reconciled to the sacrifices demanded of them.

The young parliamentary Governments, this diplomat says, are likely to be susceptible to these crises for some time to come, until the political situation has crystallized and the various parties become so organized as to furnish homogeneous majorities behind the Cabinets.

He points out that the older Governments—Italy for instance—are suffering from similar trouble during the transitory period of recovery from the war waste. The bread situation was given as the immediate cause for the resignation of Premier Nitti, but this, the diplomat says, he does not consider to be the determining influence, but rather only one incident among many which, in the absence of any homogeneous majority in Parliament, make the government of the country a most difficult problem.

Of the five crises now in course of solution only the Italian and German are giving concern, according to official statements here. It is said that the advent of ex-Premier Giolitti in the Italian situation provokes apprehension of a tendency on the part of Italy toward a separate policy with regard to Germany, while the German situation is being watched with the greatest interest because of the possibility of a reaction which might mean resistance to execution of the Treaty of Versailles.

HEINZE ALSO FAILS ON GERMAN CABINET

OLD COALITION MAY STAY

BERLIN, June 13.—Herr Heinze, the Moderate Conservative, who was asked by President Ebert to form a new Cabinet to replace the Government of Chancellor Müller, which tendered its resignation last week, has renounced the task after meeting with opposition by the Majority Socialists.

BERLIN, June 12.—Rebuffed by the Independents, Chancellor Müller has thrown his hand in, and President Ebert has summoned to Berlin Dr. Rudolf Heinze, Chairman of the victorious People's Party, the old National Liberals. It is not likely, however, that Heinze will take the job, for the Stinnes party of great industrialists is much too wary to make itself responsible for a purely bourgeois Government, with the whole working class in opposition.

The solution therefore is still a matter of speculation, but at the same time there are indications of its probable character. What is anticipated is the establishment of the old coalition with its precarious majority given a certain amount of stability by the People's Party promising benevolent neutrality, or to quote the paradoxical phrase some one of its organs has coined for the occasion, "loyal opposition."

Of course this at best is only a temporary expedient. That is to say, this Government is only going to be a provisional one to carry on at any rate until the Spa Conference is over. Another general election in the Autumn is becoming increasingly regarded as inevitable, with reaction or revolution as the issue. That must be decided sooner or later.

GENEVA CLEANED UP FOR LEAGUE'S COMING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, June 13.—In expectation of Geneva's becoming the headquarters of the League of Nations the authorities are trying to cleanse Calvin's City, literally and metaphorically. Thus they have ordered the closing of a gambling place where baccarat and roulette were played at very high stakes. During the discussion of this gambling place in the Swiss Parliament the Minister of Justice admitted that individuals had lost hundreds of thousands of francs there in a single night and that suicides had resulted.

The so-called club where this gambling proceeded was in the Geneva Casino and in flat contravention of the recent referendum by which the Swiss people decided that all Swiss casinos must close their gaming tables. Lately the management of this place employed former diplomats, Princes, Dukes, Counts and other highnesses of Central Empires as decoys to induce rich foreigners to gamble. Some well-known Austrian ex-diplomats and statesmen connected with ex-King Charles, who still lives a few miles from Geneva, were induced to play at high stakes. Not a few Americans have lost large sums at Geneva's gambling casino.

In fairness to Geneva it must be said that the place was managed not by Swiss but by foreigners.

Another measure proposed to Geneva's authorities is the issuing of a warning to Geneva house agents who have attempted to raise rents extortionately in expectation of the League of Nations business. Should Geneva become the League headquarters, the authorities themselves may be obliged to arrange accommodations for its officials.

PENROSE GAINS RAPIDLY.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—Senator Penrose is recovering rapidly. From a physical point of view, today was the best he has spent since many weeks before the convention.

Free from the worry and severe strain of keeping in constant touch from his sick room with the Republican convention in Chicago, the Old Guard leader passed a day marked with nothing more strenuous than numerous telegrams regarding the nomination of Senator Harding and Governor Coolidge by his party.

While Leighton C. Taylor, Secretary to Mr. Penrose, refused to discuss the nature of the telegrams, Penrose was silent concerning the nomination of Coolidge.

Further denial was made of the rumors circulated Saturday that Senator Penrose had suffered a relapse. It was asserted that his physicians were looking for such progress during the next few days as would allow him to walk about the house at will, as he did before he became ill.

PARIS IS CENSORING BILLBOARD DISPLAYS

TWO VIEWS IN THE PRESS

One Is That Theatres Show a Corrupt Tendency, the Other That "Paris Is Paris."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 11.—Squads of police are going about Paris today scraping from the billboards the theatrical posters which Senator La Marzelle, on the floor of Parliament yesterday, branded as indecent. Other policemen are busy raiding establishments which print the indecent post cards which bothersome persons are forever trying to sell every foreigner who walks the boulevards. Several tons of Malthusian and pornographic literature have been carted to police headquarters and will be material for a bonfire tonight.

Nearly every newspaper in Paris has taken up the debate which the Senator from Morbihan started last night. There are two opposing views. One party holds that Paris is Paris, and freedom is freedom, and that all censorship is obnoxious. The other maintains that Rome fell because the Romans became dissolute, and that France is going the same way. It will be seen that there is room for argument.

Observers have noted in recent months the return of the nude to the French stage. Although out of line with conventional theories, during the war the French stage was rather free from such displays. The return of peace brought with the high cost of living such a reduction of the costumes of music hall artists that at two halls there are now two spectacles in which nude women promenade the stage, in which nude women are "crucified," and in which nude women monopolize the first act, the last act and the second act as well.

It is only within the past month that the music hall managers have gone the limit in poster advertisements of their attraction. The billboards have waxed bolder and bolder, and evidently the Senator from Morbihan thought the thing had gone far enough. In a ringing speech he assailed the Government for permitting what he called licentiousness. He said he regretted the effect upon young people who saw such things, and warned the country against the impression tourists were receiving at a time when France should present herself as a serious country. He said that such spectacles as those in the theatres he named showed that France was going in a dangerous direction.

"We know by the lessons of history," he said, "how the greatest people of antiquity perished. It died from debauchery, even at the time when it was still astonishing the world by its victories, by the glory of its thinkers and artists. Civilization would have been lost had not Christianity come to save it."

Great applause greeted the Senator, and M. Steeg, Minister of the Interior, immediately replied. He said it was important not to draw too hasty conclusions. He recalled that through French literature ran a certain lightness of spirit that other peoples did not think very proper, but which did no harm to the French. He said it was not true that France was sinking into debauchery; that she was stronger and purer today than ever. However, he admitted that there were certain abuses of privilege which might be corrected.

M. l'Hopiteau, Minister of Justice, then said that laws were lacking to make it practicable to apply a very strict censorship, but that steps would be taken as far as possible.

The Journal des Débats today recommends that the Government establish some sort of censorship for the Paris music halls, if not for all theatres and motion picture houses.

The Petit Journal says it is high time something is done to halt the birth control campaign that is going on in France. The Petit Bleu agrees, especially in view of the propaganda in the opposite direction which is being conducted in Germany.

The Petit Parisien asks to be excused from drawing the line between French gayety and immorality, but thinks such a line ought to be drawn.

The Midi pokes fun at Senator La Marselle and says he must have been looking for trouble. As for moving pictures, the Midi says it believes that pictures of undressed women do less harm to the youth of France than bandit films from America.

However, it appears that the appeal of Senator La Marselle finds a great deal of support in the minds of French people. The conservative comment is that, while it is not perhaps wise to censor the music halls themselves, indecent posters should not be permitted on the boulevards. It is observed that those who wish to go to the music halls passed by the Senator know in advance just about what they are going to see and want to see it, but that women and children on shopping tours or boulevard strolls have no desire to see such posters as are being torn down today.

Gallagher Appointment Opposed.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 13.—President Wilson's recess appointment of Daniel J. Gallagher, Assistant District Attorney, to succeed Thomas J. Boynton as United States Attorney for the Boston district, has created indignation among members of the Boston Bar Association, a prominent member of which sent a telegram to the President, declaring that the appointment would be a "public calamity." A committee of three has been appointed to go to Washington to protest to Attorney General Palmer against the nomination. They will see Mr. Palmer Tuesday.

BURLESON DENIES PLATFORM CHARGES

POINTS TO POSTAL RECORD

Asserts It Was Democrats Who Cut Rate and Says Congress Crippled Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—"How foolish it is for a political party to make charges against public officials which are so easy of refutation," said Postmaster General Burleson in a prepared reply today to assertions in the Republican platform adopted at Chicago.

The Postmaster General's statement is the third made by a Cabinet officer within the last week, attacking Republican policies and declarations. Secretary Daniels of the Navy and Secretary Meredith of the Agricultural Department have already charged that "penuriousness" by the Republicans in Congress had seriously crippled their departments.

In his statement Mr. Burleson quotes both Chairman Good of the Ways and Means Committee, and Senator Smoot of Utah, two Republican leaders in Congress, as paying high tribute to his management of the Post Office Department, including the Federal control of the wire system.

Replying to the Republican platform assertion, "We took from the incompetent Democratic Administration, the administration of the telegraph and telephone lines of the country and returned them to private ownership," Mr. Burleson says:

"Immediately after the wires were returned, the chief executive officer of the telephone companies which embrace 50 per cent. of the telephone service in America, a great Republican, but an honest man, who is recognized as the greatest living expert on wire communication in the world, in an address to his thousands of shareholders, said 'during the Government control (by the Postmaster General) not a single order was issued which was not in the interest of the service,' and further:

"'It is gratifying to say that your property has been maintained and will be returned in as good first-class condition as though it had never been out of your possession.'"

Quotes Telephone Executive.

According to Mr. Burleson, 10,000 independent telephone companies (largely Republican owned) unanimously adopted a resolution thanking him and his assistants for his "fair, just and impartial administration of the wire systems of the country."

"The President of a telegraph company (a Republican) operating approximately 75 per cent. of the telegraph wires in this country, in his annual report for the fiscal year 1919 made the following statement:

"'The policy of the Post Office Department during the year of Government control was constructive and eminently fair to the property.'

"The Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, Mr. Good, but an American who would not stoop to join in slanderous falsehood, on June 2, 1920, while handling one of the Government supply bills, said:

"'* * * and in this connection I think I should say the administration of the wire systems of the United States was a splendid administration of those systems. There was a billion or two of property involved, and the Postmaster General took over these properties and handled them in a manner that I think reflects great credit upon his executive ability, and he turned back the properties, not as we turned back the railroads, but he turned them back with only an increase of 10 or 11 per cent. in rates. But he turned them back in a condition so that those systems can now carry on their work without an additional increase in rates. He did it, not by yielding to every demand for an increase in wage, whether it was necessary or not, but by following a business policy that ought to have been followed in every department of the Government. The Postmaster General is to be commended in the conduct of this wire system, for he carried on its operation in a manner that was satisfactory, I think, to the public, to the employes in the main, and without cost to the owners of the systems whose property he held.'

"We reduced the cost of postage and increased the pay of the Postal employees, the poorest paid of all public servants."

Of this, Mr. Burleson says:

"Evidently those who drafted this platform were wholly ignorant, not only of what was done by the Republican Congress, but of what it refused to do. No reduction was made by the Republican Congress. The only reductions of postage during the past seven years were made by order of the Postmaster General on parcel post matter, and whereas three reductions have been made on this class of postal matter, to the great betterment of the producer, the merchant, and the people at large, it has only provoked hostile criticisms from those of the class who drafted this platform. The Democratic Congress did on Feb. 24, 1919, at the suggestion of the Postmaster General, relieve the people of the war tax imposed on first class mail matter, but this was a tax and not postal revenue, and was promptly paid into the Treasury as general revenues.

Says Congress Refused Rate Cut.

"The Postmaster General did urge on the Republican Congress a reduction of the first-class postage rate so as to give the business interests of the country, who now bear an unjust portion of the postal burden, a relief to which it was justly entitled. The postal officials were led to believe this act of long delayed justice—penny postage on drop letters—would be granted; but for reasons known only to themselves the Republican majority, after an acknowledgement that it should be done, refused to act.

"The claim of increased wages to 'the poorest paid of all public servants' would be ridiculous but for the tragic consequences of the action of the Republican majority in Congress. A Democratic Congress had made provision for a Postal Commission to re-classify postal employes, looking in the light of increased living cost to a just and equitable increased compensation to these employes. As a result of the death of Senator Bankhead the control of this commission passed from the Democrats. This defeated the earnest recommendation of the Postmaster General for a plan of increased compensation, under which just and equitable action would have been taken resulting in an increase of salaries of post office clerks and city letter carriers fairly entitled thereto on a maximum basis of $2,062.50 yearly and, like increases to those engaged in the other lines of postal activity; but the recommendation was ignored and a horizontal increase granted, which gives to some an increase not deserved and denies to thousands of faithful and efficient employes increases commensurate with their work and to which they were fairly entitled.

"The Republican Congress refused to grant authority to construct a mail tunnel for use in the largest city in the world, which every postal expert declares to be absolutely essential for proper postal development and efficiency; refused authorization to secure adequate space to meet the phenomenal growth of our parcel post service to foreign countries, which is of vital concern to every export merchant in America; also refused to meet a positive exigency in the postal service of Chicago, through which city a large percentage of the mails of this country constantly flows, thereby imposing on the postal establishment enormous and unnecessary burdens with no proper compensating advantage."

Newfoundland May Name Board to Consider 'Dry' Law Changes

BRITAIN ANNOUNCES PALESTINE POLICIES

Promises Complete Religious Liberty and Economic Development of Country.

TO REALIZE JEWISH HOPES

Education and Spiritual Influences to be Fostered Under British Mandate.

LONDON, June 13.—The general principles which will be followed by the new administration in Palestine were announced today by Sir Herbert Samuel, High Commissioner for Palestine. Sir Herbert said:

"Complete religious liberty will be maintained in Palestine. Places sacred to the great religions will remain in control of the adherents of those religions. Civilian administration for the country will be established immediately. The higher ranks will consist of British officials of ability and experience. The other ranks will be open to the local population, irrespective of creed. Order will be firmly enforced. The economic development of the country will be actively promoted.

"In accordance with the decision of the Allied and Associated Powers measures will be adopted to reconstruct the Jewish National Home in Palestine. The yearnings of the Jewish people for 2,000 years, of which the modern Zionist movement is the latest expression, will at last be realized. The steps taken to this end will be consistent with scrupulous respect for the rights of the present non-Jewish inhabitants.

"The country has room for a larger population than it now contains, and Palestine, properly provided with roads, railways, harbors and electric power, with the soil more highly cultivated, the waste lands reclaimed, forests planted and malaria extirpated, with town and village industries encouraged, can maintain a large additional population not only without hurt but, on the contrary, with much advantage to the present inhabitants.

"Immigration of the character that is needed will be admitted into the country in proportion as its development allows employment to be found. Above all, educational and spiritual influences will be fostered in the hope that once more there may radiate from the Holy Land the moral forces of service to mankind.

"These are the purposes which, under superintendence of the League of Nations, the British Government in the exercise of its mandate for Palestine will seek to promote."

BABY KILLED BY AMBULANCE

Hospital Car Hurts Several Persons When Steering Gear Fails.

A Gouverneur Hospital ambulance, which was being tested by Bartholomew Cronin, a driver for the hospital, ran upon the sidewalk at Gouverneur and Montgomery streets early last evening, killing a baby and injuring several persons. The car, it was said, had just been received from Bellevue and Cronin was trying it out when the steering gear went wrong and the driver lost control.

Ray Munton, a nine-months-old baby, was in a carriage which the ungovernable ambulance struck and demolished. He died shortly after he reached the hospital. John Hand, 14, of 347 Cherry Street was taken to the hospital with a possible fracture of the skull. Details of the accident were withheld by the police.

J. C. McKnight Wins Cigars on His Harding and Coolidge Forecast.

There is a box of cigars awaiting J. Calvin McKnight on his return from the Republican National Convention to Bayside, L. I., where he lives. Just as Mr. McKnight, who was secretary for Benjamin B. Odell when the latter was Governor, was about to leave home a week ago for the convention a neighbor approached him and inquired his opinion of the outcome in the convention.

"Any idea who is going to receive the nomination, Cal?" the neighbor asked.

"Very well," agreed Mr. McKnight.

UNION MEN TO TRAIL 'OPEN SHOP' TRUCKS

Longshoremen Decide on Concerted Opposition to Efforts to Move Pier Freight.

EXPECT FIRST CLASH TODAY

RILEY HINTS AT A BOYCOTT

Predicts Lightermen, Piermen and Warehousemen Will Refuse to Handle Goods.

Concerted opposition by organized labor to the independent trucking operations of the Citizens' Transportation Committee is planned for today, leaders of the longshoremen's unions declared after a meeting yesterday at 164 Eleventh Avenue. Delegates from fifty-six union locals, representing coastwise longshoremen along the Atlantic coast, attended the meeting.

The longshoremen decided by an overwhelming majority to continue their strike against the four coastwise lines in this city, which is the underlying cause of the trucking difficulties here. Their action is contrary to the advice of their leaders and of Governor Smith, who offered to serve as mediator for the longshoremen at a conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The delegates also passed resolutions condemning the American Legion for permitting its members to act as drivers on the independent trucks—an action which the Legion leaders have already repudiated.

First Clash Expected Today.

The first class of the cross interests will come today, the longshoremen say, when the non-union drivers on the committee's trucks try to have union men on deep sea piers and lighters and in warehouses handle the merchandise. John J. Riley, President of the District Council of the International Longshoremen's Association, who in the absence of other labor leaders is directing the local situation for the unions, declared that the longshoremen were ready for the fight and would have the co-operation of organized labor generally in fighting what they believe to be a campaign for the "open shop." Mr. Riley added that the unions have "all the money they need" for their struggle with the merchants.

"The merchants will find that the union warehousemen will not handle merchandise that has been carted by non-union drivers," said Mr. Riley. "They will find also that if any one attempts to run a lighter alongside a coastwise ship all the men on board will go out at once. They will find that if they attempt to take stuff from the coastwise piers to deep sea piers that the deep sea longshoremen will decline to take it."

Mr. Riley asserted that sympathetic action on the part of union men already had hampered the committee's trucks. He said that on Saturday two trucks of cotton, loaded on the independent trucks at the Morgan line pier, had been refused at deep sea pier 35, where they were taken for export, and the drivers had to take the cotton back to the coastwise piers.

Union to Trail Each Truck.

Pickets will be sent out today in light, high-powered cars to follow every independent truck, Mr. Riley said. They will trail the trucks wherever they go and make a report of every load carried and the firms to which the merchandise is delivered.

The longshore leaders also declared that many men employed on the committee's trucks have quit since the operations began. Reports to this effect have been denied by the committee.

"We are in this fight to a finish," said Mr. Riley, "and you can bet we are going to win. There is no question about that. The boys are all with us in this fight. There will be no general strike called. We will fight in other ways, and the public may be assured that we will obey the law."

The American Federation of Labor convention at Montreal is expected to take action today with regard to the operation of the independent trucks. Several of the local leaders, including Peter J. Brady, of the Allied Printing Trades; T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, and representatives of the Transportation Trades Council have been in communication with leaders here, and it is believed that the union program has been directed from Montreal.

Referendum Upholds Strike.

There were 112 delegates at the meeting here yesterday, representing fifty-six locals. It was announced that the referendum, which has been taken among all the coastwise locals on the coast, had resulted in an emphatic decision to continue the strike. Leaders said that only one or two locals in the South had given a majority for returning to work and that the total vote was strongly against such a course.

Union leaders here were in communication with William Smith, James Reilly and Joseph B. Stanton, representing the coastwise longshoremen and the port and terminal workers in negotiations with the steamship and railroad men and Government officials in Washington. It was said that there are still hopes of a settlement as a result of the attitude of Attorney General Palmer, who, the union men said, was inclined to favor wage increases for the strikers.

No trucks were run yesterday by the Citizens' Transportation Committee. Col. Frederic A. Molitor, head of the operating sub-committee, said he expected to have 100 trucks at work today and that from now on they should be able to move at least 500 tons of merchandise a day from the coastwise piers.

Prepare to Appeal to Courts.

In a statement issued yesterday the Merchants' Association disclaimed any attempt to attack organized labor. "The clearing of the coastwise piers does not mean any attack upon labor unions or the organization of wage earners," the statement says. "This must be kept clearly in mind. It simply means the assertion of the fundamental right to freedom of individual action. The Citizens' Transportation Committee has been organized to maintain this right in the transportation of merchandise, and it proposes to see that it is maintained in the future."

The Citizens' Transportation Committee, it is said, is ready to take legal action to combat any attempts by the unions to call a boycott. Former Attorney General George W. Wickersham and former United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall have been added to the Legal Committee and it is not impossible that injunction suits and possibly criminal proceedings may result from attempts by the unions to hamper the operation of the trucks.

The recent decision by Justice Fawcett in Brooklyn, holding that the refusal of union men to move merchandise which had been handled at any point by non-union men was "a crime" is expected to be the basis of the committee's litigation. The merchants' counsel are preparing to take the case to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

PLAN NATIONAL TRUCK UNION

Firms Will Organize Association at Chicago Conference, June 26.

Representatives of motor trucking firms from all parts of the United States will hold a conference in the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, on June 26 and 27 to organise a national association to deal with the problems which have arisen due to the extension of long-distance trucking as a result of the rail congestion.

Among the questions which will be discussed are the construction of highways powerful enough to withstand the heavy loads, study of automotive construction elements, research in operating costs and equalization of loads, problems connected with the necessity for co-operation between commercial haulers in different cities in order to keep trucks supplied with return loads from long distances and many other matters vital to the industry.

Representatives of the trucking industry from New York, Iowa, Michigan, California, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Massachusetts, Nevada, Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Illinois, Louisiana and Nebraska have accepted an invitation to attend.

Tangles Up New Yorkers When They Get Familiar with Doak—Burns Makes Sparkling Catch.

Six runners stranded on the bases in the sixth and seventh innings yesterday is the story of another setback for the Giants. While 18,000 fans rooted until as many throats were hoarse Benny Kauff, Lew McCarty and Lee King failed in the order named to relieve the congestion on the base paths in these two big innings and the St. Louis Cardinals made it two straight over the McGrawmen. The score was 5 to 3, the Cards profiting by their timely stickwork against Barnes and some loose work by other Giants in the early frames.

The combination which carried the Cards to their victory over the Giants on Saturday wasn't used yesterday but the result was the same. In the first game of the series Branch Rickey, weekday manager of the club, was the directing genius, and victory was achieved through the hitting of Janvrin and McHenry. Yesterday Branch followed his usual program of taking Sunday off and put Bert Shotton in charge. Jack Smith roamed the centre field precinct, where Janvrin operated Saturday, and Heathcote patrolled left field in place of McHenry. These changes were made because a righthand pitcher was opposing the Cards.

The pennant bug has camped among the Cardinals and the team is full of hustle all the time. Yesterday's victory was the eleventh scored by the Mound City aggregation in its last thirteen games, and this morning the Cardinals are resting only two games behind the pace setting Reds. With the Phillies and the Braves looming up in the immediate future the Cardinals have visions of being in front when they move westward at the close of the current invasion.

Hope Is Nipped in Bud.

Visions of a New York triumph ran high in the seventh after two runs had been chased over the plate and the runways were crowded to suffocation. Bill Doak had been driven to the clubhouse, but Pinch Manager Shotton, who was directing the Cardinals' campaign, produced a new candidate when he found that McGraw's Old Guard would not stand for Doak. The dark horse was Bill Sherdel, who southpawed his way to success. Sherdel handed out the pass which filled the bases and then he spread gloom over the stands by fanning King, who was sent up to hit for Kauff.

Aside from the sixth and seventh innings, the Giants did not give the visitors much of a fight. Doak held them to two singles in the first five innings and Sherdel did not allow a hit after he took charge of the hill. Pinch hitters were rushed in to turn the tide, but to no avail. The entire catching staff of the Giants—Smith, McCarty, Gonzales and Snyder—passed in review and the Giants made shifts at third base and centre field.

A catch by George Burns in the fifth inning was the fielding gem of the contest. In that inning, with Heathcote on first base, Milton Stock hit to deep left centre, and Burns, running at top speed, pulled in the ball with his gloved hand. A better catch has not been made at the Polo Grounds this season and the play won back the crowd, which had begun to ridicule the Giants for their inability to keep the Cards from scoring in the early innings. In the sixth and seventh the fickle fans were again with the Giants, rooting hard for a victory, but the earlier attitude of the crowd was far different from that which New York teams have been accustomed to while playing at the Polo Grounds.

Base Spirit Toward Doyle.

The fans picked Larry Doyle for their target and the veteran second baseman, with more than ten years of faithful service behind him, must have reached the conclusion that Fletcher has nothing to regret in being sent away. Doyle made one brief lapse in the second inning, not enough to cost a error as he retired his man at first base, but he lost a play at the plate by the momentary fumble. Thereafter Larry was wildly applauded for his work on a few easy chances, the applause being as sarcastic as it was wild. It was a new experience for the veteran and did not speak well for the sportsmanship of the fans.

Jess Barnes, on the mound for the home team, had the game well in hand except in the fourth inning. In this chapter the Cardinals got to him for three hard smacks, two of them good for extra bases, and two runs were chased over the pan. In the other innings the Cards were held to one run at a time and two of these markers would have been shut off with tighter fielding by Barnes's supporting cast. Barnes allowed only three scattered hits and no runs in the last five innings and the defeat can be charged more to the fall-down in batting in the late innings than to poor work on the mound.

Young Gets a Brief Life.

A pass to Young was the only incident that offered encouragement during the Giants' half of the first. It came with two out and Doyle's grounder to Fournier closed the inning. Schultz opened the Cardinals' second inning with a double along the left field line and reached third on Lavan's infield out. Clemons rolled to Doyle and Larry missed a play at the plate by fumbling. He got the ball in time to retire Clemons, but that did not satisfy the fans. They wanted a goat and Larry was nominated on the first ballot.

Cards Settle the Game.

The Cardinals grabbed off a brace of runs in the fourth. Hornsby singled to left and got an extra base when Burns fumbled the ball. Fournier sacrificed Hornsby to third, Schultz fouled out and Lavan tripled to left centre, scoring Hornsby. Dilhoefer's double to left scored Lavan. In the fifth the Cards got their last run. Heathcote singled to centre, stole second, then stole third, and when the ball got away from Sicking he scored.

The Giants filled the bases with one out in the sixth but could not score. Burns singled to left, Bancroft walked, Young flied to Heathcote and Doyle singled to right, filling the bases. Kauff hoisted a short fly to Heathcote and McCarty, batting for Sicking, lined hard to centre but into Smith's hands.

In the seventh singles by Kelly, Smith, Burns and Bancroft sent two runs over and drove Doak to the showers. Barnes had grounded out while the rally was on. Sherdel went to the mound and Young flied to Lavan for the second out. Then a pass to Doyle filled the corners and King, who replaced Kauff against left hand pitching, went out on strikes. In the last two innings the Giants went out in order.

Send Boston to Defeat, 11 to 5, in Raggedly Played Game.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—St. Louis continued its hitting streak today, defeating Boston for the second straight time. The score was 11 to 5. Errors started the visitors toward all of their runs, and Boston also fielded raggedly. Sisler sent the locals off in front with a single that scored Gedeon in the first inning, and his home run in the third also came with a man on base.

YANKS BURY INDIANS UNDER 14-0 DEFEAT

RUTH HITS 17TH HOME RUN

Lewis Wrenches Knee and Is Carried from Field — Pipp Leads Attack with Three Doubles.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, June 13.—The contagion of Babe Ruth's remarkable popularity spread like wildfire this afternoon through the greatest gathering that ever jammed the baseball park here.

The superslugger crashed the suffering ball high over the wire screen on top of the right-field fence in the sixth inning for his seventeenth home run of the season, and 30,000 spectators went into spasms of delight over the mammoth slam.

Ruth's big bang cleared the wire by many feet and disappeared from sight over the roofs of the houses on the opposite side of Lexington Avenue. The crowd was transformed. It forgot all about hooting the Yankees for upsetting the Indians and sending them down to the worst defeat they have suffered this season, 14 to 0. It forgot to call the Yanks "bushers," and joined in a grand community chorus in praise of the wondrous hitter.

The Yanks beat the Indians in the first inning today, when they batted Uhle out of the box. After that Huggins's lads, imbued with the spirit of conquest, rubbed it in, and as run after run rushed over the plate reliable Bob Shawkey held the Cleveland batsmen in his hand and gave them a whitewash bath.

Record Crowd Looks On.

This 30,000 crowd today came all keyed up to see Cleveland down the Yanks again. It was the city's greatest baseball holiday, and the stands were jammed to capacity. The large gathering overran right and left fields in such droves that ground rules were necessary. The new concrete pavilion in left field was jammed for the first time. The largest crowd Cleveland ever played to before today was in 1917, when the Yanks drew more than 26,000 here at a Sunday double-header.

The Yanks went at Cleveland today with destruction in their hearts. They cracked the pitching of Uhle, Myers and Faeth wide open for eighteen hits and a total of twenty-eight bases. In the collection were seven two-base drives into the crowd, three of them being made by Wallie Pipp.

The Yanks' victory cost them the services of Duffy Lewis, who badly wrenched his left leg while sliding into the plate in the first inning. Lewis's leg was twisted at the knee, and he was carried off the field. He was taken to a hospital, and an X-ray plate of the leg showed that no bones were broken. He will be out of the game for at least two weeks. The conversion of the Cleveland fans to Babe Ruth admirers became so strong as the game progressed that they hissed Myers when he attempted to pass the blunderbuss, and from all over the stands came yells of "Let him hit it!"

While the Indians hit Shawkey for twelve slams, Bob had them under his spell in the pinches, and at other times he let the Yankee defense do the work, and it did it well. The Huggins lads played with confidence and aggressiveness, and they smashed the ball in a batting uprising which made the ambitious Cleveland pennant aspirants look sad and weak.

Yanks Make Fine Start.

Peck flied to Jamieson in the first inning, and then the fun began. Meusel poked a double into the crowd in left, and Pipp sent him home with a two-cushion slap to the crowd in left centre. Uhle gave Ruth a pass, Thomas, the Cleveland catcher, violating all and every section of the new rule which prevents him from leaving his position to catch a pitchout. Umpire Hildebrand paid no attention whatever to the violation. Pratt ambled and filled the bases. Ping Bodie crashed a double along the left-field foul line, scoring Pipp and Ruth, while Pratt went to third.

That was the finish of Uhle, and Beanpole Elmer Myers came to the mound. Lewis singled to third, Gardner falling over the ball, and Pratt crossed the plate. Hannah lofted a sacrifice fly to left, Bodie scoring and Lewis going to second. Shawkey rapped a single to centre and Lewis scored. As Duffy slid into the plate he was tripped by his spikes and twisted his left knee so badly that he had to be carried off the field. Peck forced Shawkey at second, and the chapter closed with the Yanks enriched to the extent of half a dozen runs. Lewis's injury necessitated a shakeup in the Yanks' bill of fare. Ward went to third, Meusel to right field and Ruth to left.

Cleveland thickly populated the bases in its half of the first, but couldn't squeeze a run through the Yank defense. Jamieson singled to left, and was forced by Chapman. Speaker's single sent Chapman to second and Smith skied to Ruth. Wamby got an infield hit and jammed the corners. Ward tossed out Johnston and prevented impending trouble.

Cleveland changed catchers in the second, Steve O'Neill going behind the bat. Myers sent thrills of joy through the Cleveland enthusiasts in the second when he fanned both Meusel and Babe Ruth.

More Hits and Runs.

Gardner tossed Pratt out at first in the third, and Bodie singled to left. Ward's out at first sent Ping to second, and he scored on Hannah's safe whang to left. Shawkey fanned. There were two down in the fifth when Ward beat out a tap to Chapman. Hannah singled to left, sending Ward to second. Shawkey delivered his second hit, a single to left, and Ward scored. Peck rocketed to Jamieson.

Then came the sensational handiwork of the destructive Ruth. Meusel had flied to Jamieson and Speaker made a great galloping catch of Pipp's wicked drive. Babe uncorked his now famous swing and lifted his seventeenth home run over the high screen in right field. When the excitement subsided Pratt singled to right centre and Speaker gathered in Bodie's fly.

Meusel lined to Chapman in the eighth and Wallie Pipp got his third two-bagger of the afternoon, a smash into the left-field crowd. Ruth jammed a grounder at Wamby, and the ball went through the second baseman's legs, Pipp scoring. Gardner tossed out Pratt and Bodie singled to centre, scoring Ruth. Chapman disposed of Ward for the final out of the inning.

The Yanks were still at it in the ninth and finished the day's job with three more runs. With Faeth pitching, Hannah walked and Shawkey skied to Chapman. Peck walked and Meusel soaked a double to right, scoring Hannah. As Wamby was throwing Pipp out at first Peck counted. Ruth poked a double into the right-field populace and Meusel tallied.

Curves and Bingles

As the Cards view it, this is a year for dark-horse candidates, so there is no valid reason why they should not give St. Louis its first National League pennant. Harding's success gives them a lot of encouragement.

When Johnny Lavan slapped out his second triple, one of the inhabitants of the press coop remarked that the Australian wool and rabbit covers must have found their way into the National League. As an American Leaguer Lavan did not specialize in long hits.

The Giants are dangerously close to the basement. Yesterday's reverse dropped them to within one game of Janitor Cravath's Phillies.

Doyle and Fournier had a race for first base in the fourth. The track was heavy, and Doyle ran while Fournier slid. Jacquer got the decision.

The cards in the last two weeks have won three of four games with the Pirates, three straight from the Cubs, three of a four-game series at Brooklyn and two in a row at the Polo Grounds. No wonder that the Cards are dreaming of a pennant.

While the crowd was waiting for the Giants to hand out a thrill the Yanks sent one over the wire from Cleveland. The fans went into a delirium when the scoreboard showed six runs for the Yanks in the first inning.

Ferdie Schupp, who is showing signs of a real comeback, may get a chance against his old team this afternoon. Art Nehf is scheduled to do the flinging for the home team.

Babe Ruth Is Distributing Favors Without Partiality

Babe Ruth has only to make a home run off some member of Connie Mack's pitching staff and his tour through the various American League Clubs will be complete. Up to yesterday Babe had not manufactured a circuit clout against Cleveland, but he added Speaker's team to his list in the rout at Cleveland. To date Ruth has hit five home runs against Boston pitchers, four against Washington, three against Detroit, three against Chicago, one against St. Louis and one against Cleveland. Babe has hit for the circuit in four of the six American League parks in which he has performed as a Yankee. He failed to do so at Philadelphia and Washington, and he has yet to visit Chicago and St. Louis. On this date a year ago Ruth had only four home runs to his credit. He got his seventeenth circuit slam last season on Aug. 14, so he is now two months ahead of his 1919 record.

DODGERS BLANKED BY CHAMPION REDS

Brooklyn went down to second place in the National League standing yesterday afternoon, as the result of a 1 to 0 defeat administered by the champion Reds at Ebbets Field. For the second time in a couple of days the Dodgers produced an eighth-inning rally that just fell short of turning the tide of battle the other way. With one out, they had a man on first and another on third with the tying and winning runs, but a double play killed their chances. A similar situation in the fifth also produced nothing but pangs of disappointment among the 20,000 spectators in attendance. The fans saw a good game, however. It was as full of thrills and fielding frills as that of the day before, both teams proving to be good mudders and playing brilliantly on a diamond so slippery that there would have been ample excuse for skidding into errors.

Jimmy Ring and Rube Marquard figured in a pitching duel in which the margin of superiority was the smallest possible. Both twirlers allowed six hits, but Ring had stuff enough to turn the Dodgers back when a hit meant a run, while Marquard, by unloosing a wild pitch at a critical moment, contributed to his own undoing. That one erratic heave sent Daubert to second in the sixth inning, putting him in a position to score the only run of the game on Roush's single. Barring that one occasion, Marquard pitched splendid ball—the sort that, with proper batting support by his mates, would win nine games out of ten.

Kilduff Shines in Field.

Pete Kilduff played a rattling good game for the Robins. He knocked down a wicked-looking drive by Duncan in the ninth by a brilliant effort, slipped and fell in the mud, but threw to Konetchy in time to get his man. In the first inning, too, he slipped and fell fielding a smoking grounder off Roush's willow, but recovered in time to make the out. Petey had other chances a bit less difficult and accepted them all cleverly. Olson made a glittering stop and throw of Daubert's bid for a hit in the first, and Johnston in the same inning made a marvelous stop of Groh's bingle, limiting it to one base while executing a sensational diving act in the mud around third. Zack Wheat had six putouts, which he handled in a highly commendable manner. The Dodgers encountered hard luck with the stick, many violently propelled blows traveling straight to the fielders.

Roush's hit won the game for Cincinnati in the sixth. Rath started the inning by sending up a foul to Johnston. Daubert singled prettily to centre. Groh flied to Wheat, and Daubert went to second on Marquard's wild pitch, already mentioned. Roush then hit past third for a base, and Daubert counted. It looked from the stands as though Johnston might have blocked Roush's hit by a strenuous effort, but the effort was not forthcoming and the ball continued on its journey to left. Duncan was the third out on a fly to Wheat.

Except in that one inning the Reds obtained small benefit from Marquard's offerings. That was the only inning, in fact, in which a Red runner got beyond first. Groh singled in the first, Rariden got to Konetchy's station in the third when Myers dropped his Texas leaguer after a long run, and Rath singled in the eighth, but none of them advanced any further. Roush walked in the fourth, but was out when Duncan's hit nicked him in passing. In the other four frames the Reds went out in order. Sherrod Smith pitched the ninth inning for Brooklyn, after Marquard had been relieved to allow Mitchell to bat for him.

Griffith Gets First Home Hit.

The Dodgers didn't connect safely with Ring's shoots until the fifth. With one down, Griffith singled over the box in that inning, and went to third on Kilduff's hit to right. The crowd clamored for a hit, or at least a long fly to the outfield, but Otto Miller struck out and Marquard ended it with a grounder to Ring.

In the eighth Brooklyn again had two on the bases with only one out, and the crowd yelled its head off for the semblance of a safe hit. Mitchell, batting for Marquard, singled to left. Duncan tried to make a shoestring catch, and the ball got by him, Clarence reaching second. Neis ran for Mitchell, and Olson sent him to third on a slow-bounding ball to short. Johnston killed off Brooklyn's hopes with a grounder to Rath, who, with Kopf and Daubert, put through a fast double play. Konetchy made his second single of the game in the ninth, with two out, but was left when Griffith flied to Roush.

When Bill Rariden was made the recipient of a diamond watch fob before the game started, the donors being the Brooklyn Council of the Knights of Columbus, of which Rariden is a memebr.

UMPIRE IS SAVED FROM FANS' ATTACK

Yesterday's double-header between Toronto and Jersey City at the Jersey City Ball Yard provided more excitement for the big gathering than is often offered as a side issue to the game. During the initial line-up, after several unfavorable decisions had been rendered against the home team by Umpire Corcoran, who decided plays on the base line, the home rooters became so enraged over the removal of Manager Donovan and Shortstop Bill Zitman from the game that they made an attack upon Corcoran with pop bottles, several of which hit the umpire on the body.

The police were called into service and, in order to avert the possibility of further trouble and a probable riot, Police Captain Thomas H. Nugent of the Ocean Avenue Station ordered Umpire Corcoran to retire to the dressing room. The umpire refused to obey and Captain Nugent ordered his men to remove him from the field, which they did.

Thereupon Umpire Stockdale, who was in charge behind the plate, refused to officiate alone, and declared the game forfeited to Toronto by a score of 9 to 0. No further attempt was made to play the game out, with Toronto having obtained a lead of four runs while the Skeeters had failed to count, although they had a runner on the way and two out when the police halted the proceedings in the fifth inning.

Umpire Stockdale refused to appear for the second game and the contest was run off with players serving in the capacity of umpires. Everything worked to the satisfaction of both teams in this game, as far as decisions went.

Jersey City put up the snappiest kind of ball in the final performance and came through with a cleverly earned victory by a score of 6 to 2. They wiped out an early lead of two runs gained by the Leafs in the fourth round with some stiff batting in their last two cracks at the ball, finding Peterson's benders for three safe drives and two runs in the seventh and four wallops and a trio of counters in the eighth.

Carlson twirled for the Skeeters and kept the ten safe raps of the visitors scattered in every round but the fourth. Manager Hugh Duffy declared he would protest the second game and there is a possibility it will be ordered played over again. The scores:

DETROIT QUITS CELLAR.

DETROIT, June 13.—Detroit climbed out of eighth place for the first time this season by winning from Philadelphia today, 4 to 3. The game went ten innings. Philadelphia scored three runs in the third, but the Tigers evened up by scoring one in the fifth and two in the eighth, when Veach hit a home run with a man on base. A single and a triple in the tenth gave Detroit the winning run.

RACING GOES BACK TO JAMAICA TODAY

Racing shifts back to Jamaica today for the second of the sessions of the Spring meeting at this course, which will last for nine days and which promises to provide some of the best sport that has been seen on the metropolitan circuit this season. The entries for the opening day indicate that the fields are to be much larger than at Belmont Park and at the same time practically all of the high-class performers will be seen in action.

It is quite certain that with this meeting local racing will improve greatly. The warm weather of the last week or so has brought to hand many of the horses which were backward during the Spring and which have not had a chance yet to race. At the present time there are more than 1,500 horses quartered at the Long Island tracks, and with warm weather and suitable conditions good contests should be the rule.

The Excelsior Handicap, a $6,000 race at a mile and a sixteenth, for three-year-olds and upward, has attracted some of the best handicap performers in the East, and even with some scratches should result in a fine race. Among horses which have not yet been seen here and which are named for the race are Mad Hatter, Royce-Rools and Lanius. Lion d'Or, Naturalist, Corn Tassel and Boniface are also scheduled to measure strides in this event, Naturalist having been honored with the top weight of 122 pounds.

N. Y. A. C. ATHLETES WIN TRACK TITLE

CORNETTA RUNS FINE RACE

Gains Impressive Victory in 5,000-Meter Event—Record Crowd Views Games at Lewisohn Stadium.

Bernie Wefers, Sr., New York A. C. track coach, mustered a team of thirteen wearers of the Mercury Foot yesterday and they carried off the Metropolitan A. A. U. junior track and field championship title in the annual games held under the auspices of the Glencoe A. C. at City College Stadium. The Mercury Footers showed their greatest strength in the track events, with just enough power in the field competitions to give them the total of 36 tallies, more than double the score of their nearest rivals.

The Glencoe A. C. carried off the cup for the second team, with 16 points, nosing out Al Hulsebosch's Paulist A. C. cohorts in the final event of the afternoon, the half-mile run. The Winged P wearers were third, with 15 tallies. St. Anselm's A. C. finished fourth, with 14; St. Christopher Club, fifth, with 11, and Yale, sixth, with 10. Princeton and New York University, the other colleges represented in the battle for juvenile supremacy, finished eighth and fourteenth, respectively.

In attaining the junior title for the second successive year, New York A. C. athletes accounted for a quartet of titles. Garland S. Courage annexed the championship at one mile; George Cornetta, in the 5,000-meter run; Raymond Georgi, in the 220-yard dash, and H. Helffrich in the half-mile run. Two of the fifteen titles contested went to the Paulist A. C., L. Lloyd annexing the quarter-mile low hurdle wreath, while Thomas Cooke, a juvenile who has been striving for graduation for seven years, outheaved his rivals in the 12-pound shot-put.

Cornetta's Impressive Victory.

The most impressive victory was recorded by George Cornetta, the strong-legged, deep-chested Mercury Footer who romped to victory in the 5,000-meter run, an event of slightly more than three miles, installed on the program for the purpose of developing potential Olympic Games' talent. The tall Mercury Foot wearer, one of a field of seventeen title-seekers, left his nearest rival half a lap to the rear at the finish. J. O'Connor, St. Anselm's A. C., was second, about forty yards in front of Jack Costello, Paulist A. C. The time for the race was 16:01 3-5.

Cornetta clearly outclassed his field in this test. Before the runners had covered a mile the New York A. C. athlete was out in front, running steadily. Cornetta showed the way thereafter and through the closing half mile had no opposition. L. Atkins, Cygnet A. C., started the race as if in a sprint, dashing off to a lead of about fifty yards in the first lap, while the remainder of the field raced steadily back of him without attempting to overhaul the Port Chester runner. Atkins was displaced in the second lap by Jim O'Connor, who carried the field around until before the start of the fifth lap, when Cornetta went to the front and led to the finish.

The meet attracted a record crowd. More than 4,000 spectators viewed the competitions from Lewisohn Stadium, while close to 1,000 were jammed against the iron railing enclosing the field on three sides. Weather conditions, no doubt, interfered materially with the attendance, but nevertheless the crowd of 5,000 made a record for the juvenile championship games. Because of the rain the cinderpath was heavy and at points soggy, while the infield was a morass. These conditions militated against topnotch performances, and produced comparatively slow time in the track events.

H. Helffrich, New York A. C., scored in the half-mile run, leading home twenty rivals in 2:01 1-5. Helffrich was a contender from the outset, following the pace set by H. Boettcher, Mohawk A. C., until the gun barked the beginning of the last lap. Then the Mercury footer dashed to the front and tore around the path at a pace which carried him to victory over J. Fleck by a margin of eight yards. N. Schrecker, Glencoe A. C., finished third.

Courage First in Mile.

A last-lap burst by Garland Courage in the mile brought the New York A. C. runner home fifteen yards in front of T. J. O'Brien, Yale University, who was only a step in front of F. Brenna, another Mercury Footer, who finished third. The time for the race was 4:35 1-5. A field of fifteen sought this title. The three leaders, with A. Helfenstein, Loughlin Lyceum, and M. Schaefer, Brooklyn A. A., alternated in the pace until Courage made his victorious bid in the closing lap.

F. P. Heffelfinger, Yale short-distancer, carried off the quarter-mile title after a bitter struggle with C. Sherman, St. Christopher Club. Heffelfinger got away to a good start and led until about seventy yards from the finish, when Sherman suddenly shot from third position to the Eli runner's shoulder. For twenty yards they raced as a team, but Heffelfinger had the greater strength and proceeded to victory, while Sherman dropped back steadily in the last fifty yards and had to be content with fourth position. The time was 52 3-5 seconds.

Ray Georgi, New York A. C., had to extend himself to his limit to beat off a challenge by P. Friedlander, Glencoe A. C., in the furlong title dash. The Mercury Footer eked out victory by less than a yard in the closest finish of the day. Georgi's time was 24 1-5 seconds.

The victory of L. Lloyd, Paulist A. C., in the quarter-mile low hurdles was impressive. Lloyd gained the lead in the last 100 yards and worked up an advantage of about ten yards on Al Dolder, New York A. C. entry. The veteran, Thomas Cooke, gave the Paulist A. C. its second individual title in the shot-put, when he heaved the 12-pound ball a distance of 48 feet 10 inches, a fraction less than two feet in excess of the toss of D. Rosenberg, Glencoe A. C., who was second. In the running high jump four competitors tied at 5 feet 9 inches, but on the jump-off W. Boston, Alpha P. C. C., cleared the cross-bar at 5 feet 10 inches and gained the title.

American and French Teams Open Davis Cup Play July 8

LONDON, June 13.—The United States tennis team will meet the French team in play for the Davis Cup at Eastbourne, England, July 8, 9 and 10. The winners will play the British team at Scarborough July 15, 16 and 17.

Although it had been tentatively agreed by cable that the meeting of France and America should take place early in July, the final arrangement was allowed to rest until the arrival of the American team in England. William M. Johnston, William T. Tilden, 2d, Richard Norris Williams, 2d, and Charles S. Garland, with Capt. Samuel Hardy, have been practicing on various English courts, and are entered this week in the open tournament at the Queen's Club.

STATE TITLES AT STAKE.

Two important State tennis tournaments begin simultaneously on the courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, South Orange, N. J., this afternoon, the men playing on turf for the championship of New York, while the women battle on clay for the New Jersey title. The former event has eighty-six entries and the latter fifty-two. It is planned to start the women's tournament as soon after 2 P. M. as possible, with the men beginning about an hour later. Ichiya Kumagae, present champion of New York State, will not defend his title, as he is entered in the open tournament of the New Haven Lawn Tennis Club, which also begins today.

The complete draw of both tournaments is as follows:

RIVAL CREWS ENJOY REST.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 13.—Yale and Harvard oarsmen had a day's respite from rowing and examinations today, but heavy rain early in the morning and intermittent showers the remainder of the day interfered considerably with out-of-door plans.

Harvard's squad and coaches went down the Thames River in their speed boats, were transferred to the steam yacht Corsair's launches at the railroad bridge, and boarded the yacht at anchor in the upper harbor here. The Harvard men were guests of Captain Harry Morgan of the freshman eight.

The Corsair got under way about 10 o'clock, steamed out into Long Island Sound, passing Fisher's Island, continuing as far as Greenport, and returned to quarters at 6:30 o'clock this evening. No stops were made on the trip.

Harry Payne Whitney's power yacht Whileaway was placed at the disposal of the Yale squad, and a sail was taken out into the Sound as far as Black Point. The yacht returned to quarters about 7 o'clock this evening.

COURTNEY IS CONFIDENT.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 13.—Today was a day of rest in the camps of the Columbia, Cornell and Syracuse crew squads, none of the eights going out on the lake or inlet. The Columbia squad had a motor boat ride down the lake for several miles, while the Cornell and Syracuse oarsmen were permitted to do as they pleased.

As is customary, the Cornell oarsmen followed their own pursuits. Coach Courtney is not working his men very hard, and this has led to the general belief that he is not much worried about the outcome of the three events. As a matter of fact, he told a group of newspaper men that he hears the perch are biting well down the lake, and he is anxious for the races to be over so that he can get to the fishing grounds. When seen he was busy getting his fishing tackle in order, and did not appear to be thinking much about the races.

LETSON-ANDERSON TEAM WINS TITLE

Gains New Jersey Tennis Honors in Doubles by Defeat of Hammett and Henderson.

Ben Letson and Fred C. Anderson became the tennis doubles champions of New Jersey at the Montclair Athletic Club yesterday afternoon, taking a hard-fought five-set final from Alfred D. Hammett and Embree H. Henderson of the University Heights Club by scores of 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3. The winners had entered the final round by the default of Harold Throckmorton and Ichiya Kumagae, the latter, for some unknown reason, failing to appear, while Hammett and Henderson gained their last bracket at the expense of the Vandeventer brothers, whom they defeated in straight sets, 9—7, 6—4.

Letson and Anderson, therefore, had the advantage both of youth and of freshness on the court, and, while an adequate period of rest was allowed between matches, the strain of the double ordeal told perceptibly on the veterans before the concluding struggle was over. Their style of game also resulted in a test of endurance, for neither Hammett nor Henderson possesses a single real forcing shot in the team game, both depending almost entirely on steadiness and the errors of their opponents for victory. Yet they have so perfected the science of lobbying that they make of this apparently innocent shot a real weapon of attack, which not only wins many a point outright but opens the way for even more chances to kill a weak return at the net. Their theory is evidently that out of every half dozen lobs one or two at least are likely to be netted or hit out of court by the opposition, assuming merely an average depth and accuracy. They bend every effort, therefore, toward getting back all the overhead smashes on which they can place a racquet, stringing out each rally until the desired error materializes or a bolder and better executed kill than the average puts the ball away with absolute finality.

Defeat of Vandeventer Brothers.

This method of play proved exceedingly successful yesterday against Philip and Ludlow Vandeventer. The University Heights men literally never varied their tactics, and while the two Princetonians kept their overhead steady and severe2 for a time they eventually cracked under the strain. Philip was the first to give way, and his errors paved the way for a lead of 5—3. At 40—0, with Henderson serving, his side seemed to have a decisive victory served up, but the server whaled an easy "sitter" out of the court and the game was thrown away, the Vandeventers then squaring the court on their own delivery.

The extra six games necessary for a decision at 9—7 took much of the stamina of the winners, and they were already weary when the second session began. They remained steady and cautious, however, and actually led at 4—1 before the younger players succeeded in making their shots count. Then the Vandeventers staged a brilliant rally and soon had tied up the games again at 4—all. Errors were their undoing, however, for Henderson pulled out his service for a 5—4 lead, and a final break went against the elder of the brothers for a 6—4 decision, the last point going on a close volley that just missed the sideline.

The closing match of the tournament began with young Letson serving, and he lost his first effort through the combination of two double faults and a wild overhead shot. The tall pair, however, retaliated immediately against Henderson, taking a deuce game, and then working up to the substantial lead of 4—1 by repeating the process against Hammett and winning on both of their own deliveries.

Henderson Starts Rally.

Henderson started a rally by capturing his service and the count was virtually squared when Anderson's offerings were upset, a double fault contributing to his downfall. Hammett, however, failed to hold his own, and lost another deuce game, Letson quickly serving out the set, 6—3.

In the second session the games alternated with the service up to 4—all, Hammett pulling out the seventh after a terrific struggle in which deuce was called no less than seven times. Henderson put his team ahead, 5—4, in another deuce affair, and then the youngsters literally threw the set away, 6—4, by completely losing the boundaries of the court and flubbing three short lobs in succession.

In the third set the youthful pair were again ahead at 3—1 by breaking through on Henderson's service. The veterans, however, took three in a row with a counterbreak, and at 4—3 seemed to have a good chance for the set. Letson won a service, however, and then Hammett dropped a love-game, being repeatedly passed on his way to the barrier. Anderson made sure of the odd set at 6—4.

During the intermission Letson received first aid for an injured finger, which was bleeding freely, but seemed to be handicapped when he returned to the court and never quite reached his real standard to the close of the match. Henderson pulled out of difficulty on his opening service, after being in the hole, 15—40, and thereafter the games alternated until a single break sufficed to give the University Heights team the set at 6—3, once more squaring the match.

Letson and Anderson, however, had by this time enjoyed so much practice overhead that they hit the ball with increasing confidence, even in the gathering darkness. Starting with service in the rubber, they plugged away tenaciously until even the steady defense of Hammett and Henderson was worn down and the new champions took their title by a count of 6—3.

Win Professional Golf Match, 6 and 5, on Shackamaxon Links.

Pete O'Hara, the pro at the Shackamaxon Country Club, and his brother Pat, who recently came to the United States from Ireland, where he once won the national title, were the victors in a professional golf match on the links of the Shackamaxon club at Westfield, N. J., yesterday. The victims of the team of brothers were George Fotheringham, the Richmond County Country Club pro, and Tom Mulgrew of the Hackensack Country Club, who fought valiantly but in vain against the winning pair. The O'Haras won 6 up and 5 holes to play.

The match, which was for thirty-six holes, was divided into morning and afternoon play. When the morning session had terminated, the O'Haras were two up, a lead that they had amassed at the end of nine holes, lost at the sixteenth hole and regained in the last two holes of the morning play.

When the battle royal was resumed in the afternoon, the Fotheringham-Mulgrew combination squared the count again on the sixth green, when Fotheringham made a 3 for the hole. At the end of the third nine, the O'Haras had regained their advantage and had increased it to three. The fourth nine was a rout, the winners taking the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth and halving the eleventh.

GOLF TRIP ABANDONED.

United States Will Not Have Team in Olympic Games.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—A United States golf team will not compete in the Olympics at Antwerp, according to an announcement by Max Marston of this city, who was chosen to captain the team and who had charge of the arrangements. Marston said that after making reservations for a team of eight men to sail on June 25, he found it impossible to get a representative team together. Out of eleven men invited to make the trip, he said, only two, Bobby Jones of Atlanta, and himself, definitely had accepted. Two others, Robert Gardner and Nelson Whitney, are already abroad and promised to play on the Olympic team. The United States Golf Association, Marston said, wanted at least eight men.

Comment on Current Events in Sports.

Untapped Speed of Man o' War.

The remarkable performance of Man o' War in the Belmont Stakes Saturday, when he set a new world's record for a mile and three furlongs, has raised among horsemen and racegoers the question of how fast this son of Fair Play can run if fully extended. Although he has already lowered the American mark for a mile in competition and set a new world's record for a mile and three furlongs, he has not been extended. He has not been touched with a whip or urged to do his best, there not having been any reason to put him to the test.

It is no longer possible to provide a contest for Man o' War among horses of his age. He outclasses the best of the other three-year-olds so far that only a ridiculous weight arrangement could bring him to even terms with one of these, and a defeat of this great horse under a weight adjustment would not meet with public approval. The interest, therefore, turns to what he may accomplish in the way of setting new records for the various distances, accompanied by a general desire to see him do his level best.

There seems to be no doubt that he is a superhorse, such as horsemen have so long dreamed of breeding and bringing to the races. He has all the qualities of greatness and no faults. He is probably as nearly perfect as it is possible for a horse to be. He is not only a great sprinter, but he appears to be able to go any distance that horses are required to run in this country. A mile and three furlongs is the longest jaunt he has yet tried but he finished it galloping and seemed ready to go on, despite the fact that he had set a world's record. If put to a drive, he might give an exhibition that would absolutely dazzle the racing world.

Though Man o' War's greatness was recognized while he was a juvenile, he has come out a vastly improved horse as a three-year-old. He far more clearly outclasses the horses of his age now than he did when they were his rivals in the two-year-old division. He has grown to be an exceptionally large colt, and he has a tremendous stride. He goes over the ground as if he were possessed of wings. He shows no effort in his running. He seems to get into his stride in a single bound from the barrier, for he is always a length or two in front after going fifty feet and he appears merely to gallop playfully while other horses strain to catch him. So far his races have been mere canters, despite the amazing speed developed, and not even his trainer and owner know how fast he can run.

One-third of the journey which major league clubs must cover in a season's play will be completed by most of the clubs during the coming week. Some of them already have reached or passed the half-century mark and others will go bounding over their fifty-first game before another Sunday dawns. Getting a clearly defined line on the pennant contenders has not been possible, but the first lap of the pennant journey has brought out some surprising features. Some teams which had been picked as certain contenders have failed dismally, while others have been playing far better than was expected.

The race in the National League is a much more open affair than that in the American. Less than nine games separate the leader and eighth-place club in the Heydler circuit, and with the teams so closely bunched any sort of a spurt will completely change the pennant prospects of a particular club within a short time. In the American League the gap between leader and tailender stretches to about eighteen games, with the sixth-place team further behind the leaders than is the last-place club in the National. The dividing line between the contenders and the also rans is clearly marked in the junior major league, but not in its older rival.

For New York fans the continued failure of the Giants to exert a real influence in the pennant fight has been a big disappointment. There is still hope that the Giants may come through, as they are not far behind the leaders, but there is the disadvantage that several other teams are as close up or closer. It is not a case of beating one or two teams. The Giants have several to excel before they can become a real factor, and up to date these other clubs have been stepping along a bit faster than the McGrawmen. The fans have not given up hope, but they are becoming a trifle lugubrious.

The Reds are performing up to advance dope, while the Robins and Cardinals are doing better than the critics expected of them. The failure of the Cubs to win more than half of their games, even with Alexander pitching up to his old-time brilliancy, is a knock to the chances of the Cubs. The Giants alone of the second division clubs had been rated as a pennant contender, though it was expected that the Pirates would string along in the first division.

American League teams are running closer to predictions. The Detroit débâcle was wholly unexpected, but otherwise there has been no marked surprise. The Indians and Yanks were rated as the real contenders and they are now making the fight. The White Sox are finding it difficult to follow the pace with only fair pitching, and the Red Sox, after a brilliant start, are gradually dropping back from the leaders. The Washington club has shown surprising ability in hitting and run-getting, but the pitching has not been strong enough to put the team much above the .500 mark. It would not be surprising if the White Sox spurted and made it a three-cornered fight, but it is difficult to figure any of the five other clubs as likely to figure heavily in the big fight yet to come.

The Informality of Gardner.

To say that Bob Gardner has surprised himself and the golfing world at large is to put it inadequately. One thing is certain. The joke is on most of the golfing experts of this country, and more particularly on officials of the U. S. G. A. Happily, it is a joke that is as pleasing as it is funny.

When it was announced that Gardner would compete in the British amateur championship, most of his friends yawned, said "Oh, hum," laid aside their morning newspapers and refused to get excited. Then the former national champion recruited a few golfing friends and divulged, not through official sources but in a letter to the Yale News, that they would go to England as a team. After several days of silence a U. S. G. A. bulletin condescended to take cognizance of the fact, but made it very clear that it was an "informal" American group, and not the American team that was to meet the Oxford-Cambridge combination at Rye. Then it was announced that all seven invaders would compete in the championship. Unfortunately, the matches with the English collegians finally were abandoned.

Bob Gardner went abroad, therefore, as an "informal" American golfer. En route to the final J. L. Jenkins, the champion, and the one and only Harold Hilton dropped by the wayside, unable to keep up with the dizzy speed. Then news came from Muirfield that Gardner had informally beaten Lockhart, one of Scotland's big three, and on the same day had eliminated, still without formality, the Honorable Michael Scott, than whom there is no other than whomer in English links. The stagehands cleared the scenes for the grand finale. Hagen and Barnes rushed up from Croyden to Muirfield, along with three thousand others. English newspapers, anticipating the worst for their native entry, acclaimed Gardner as quite whole-heartedly a golfer who had won not only their deep respect but their hearts.

That final will not quickly be forgotten, how the Chicagoan led at the early stages, was all square at the thirty-sixth hole, and played strictly par golf on the thirty-seventh. But Cyril Tolley, the Oxford student, the World War hero, the youngster who had spent thirteen months in a German prison camp, had to do the sensational to win. His birdie 2 on the extra hole would have beaten anybody as easily as it beat America's "informal" competitor.

Gardner will come back to this side in a few weeks covered with glory that has been deprived all Americans since the days of Travis in 1904. He will be a contender for the national amateur event at Roslyn, L. I. in September, where Tolley and probably Weathered and Macfarlane will represent Britain. Golf galleries of spectators are never large because to see a match of thirty-six holes means walking ten miles. But if Gardner should gain the final with an English opponent thousands will drop all else to see the spectacle.

Yachting Pot Is Bubbling.

In another month the America's Cup races will begin off Sandy Hook. Which yacht, Resolute or Vanitie, will represent the United States of America in defending that trophy against Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, the Shamrock IV., is a question to be decided in the very near future, and it may not be the easiest thing in the world for the America's Cup Committee to make that selection for several reasons.

In the first place, Vanitie has shown marked improvement since the trial races off Newport started, and, also, she appears to be more dependable as regards ability to carry her canvas without meeting with mishaps. On the other hand, on previous showing, the Resolute had all the better of Vanitie and, with but few exceptions, has heretofore shown greater speed in that most important point of sailing, to windward. Of late, however, Vanitie seems to have pointed higher and also has more than held her own in running free, which has been considered another strong point in favor of the Bristol craft.

Boat for boat, Vanitie has won far more than her share of the races so far this season, if the "flukes" be eliminated, but, when it comes to the question of racing against Shamrock IV., allowance must be considered and Resolute is likely to receive over a minute and a half more time from the green challenger than would Vanitie. Is that extra allowance of serious enough concern to cause the committee to pick the Resolute?

It is generally admitted that the challenger will be extreme in one way or the other. She will either prove to be a world beater or a flivver. If it is the former, all the allowance that might go to Resolute would do the Bristol craft no good, and if it is the latter then either craft may find it no difficult task to win from the challenger. But no one who has seen the green mystery craft in action would take any chances on her proving to be easy prey for the better of our American defense craft. The chances are that she will show surprising speed.

Between now and the time for the big contests many things may happen, not only to the challenger, but to either of the defense candidates. All three of the yachts are overrigged and oversparred, particularly the Shamrock, and all of them are lightly constructed, particularly the Resolute. The chief concern of the committee will be as to whether both of the challengers may be depended upon to hold together under such conditions as are liable to be encountered off Sandy Hook during the big races, for, no matter how much more speedy one might be than the other, she would be useless if she could not be depended upon to stand the strains that would be imposed upon her.

If the committee believes that the chances of one craft over the other might be bettered by any change in crew or afterguard, then it is safe to assume that in the interests of American supremacy afloat all hands will willingly subordinate personal ambitions to the best interests of country and sport. At any rate, it is certain that this country will be represented by what the America's Cup Committee honestly considers to be the best craft and crew obtainable.

A Long Stride for Billiards.

The New York State Billiard Association has been launched. It has met with the unqualified endorsement of every one who has the best interests of the sport at heart. The fact that it stands for everything that is best in billiards; that it intends to clean the game wherever it needs cleaning; that it will not only act as an anchor to windward for the most popular of all indoor sports but that it will stimulate and maintain interest in it by promoting competitive play has aroused a responding chord everywhere in the State.

The need of such an organization has been felt for years. There was such need ten years ago and it has increased with the passing years. Billiards is a great sport, but there is no doubt that it can be made greater. There is room for improvement and it is the intention of the association to exert every energy and effort possible in an endeavor to further the best interests of the game. The fact that the organization is one of players as well as rooms and clubs and that it has no connection with other associations now in the field and is not governed or affiliated with any manufacturing interests makes it a truly independent body of billiardists, for billiardists and to be governed by billiardists.

It is the intention of the association to work in co-operation with city and State authorities to see that billiards is conducted properly. In this way the few isolated cases of misconduct can soon be rectified or eliminated. The announcement that the association will conduct district and State tournaments of its own has aroused a great deal of interest, for it is realized that these tournaments will attract more players than have ever before been entered in similar events. Championships in balkline, three-cushion and pocket billiards will be decided, district champions competing in the big final tourneys to determine the State champions.

All clubs and rooms that are members of the association will hold preliminary events to select their best players at the three styles of play. The winners will meet in the district events and the district champions will compete for the State titles.

The association has set a membership of 100,000 by Dec. 31 as its objective. With nearly 10,000 already enrolled there is every reason to believe that this mark will be attained if not surpassed by the first of the coming year.

Davis Cup Team Tuning Up.

The American Davis Cup tennis team has arrived in England, and the London experts are already marveling at the speed shown on the turf courts by our four representatives, particularly William M. Johnston and William T. Tilden 2d, upon whom the chief burden of play is likely to rest. One critic wonders how the American racquets are able to stand the constant strain of the terrific hitting, a good advertisement for the home product.

The first impression of Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory does not seem to be so favorable abroad, and it is suggested that the standard of play among American women is so low that her game assumes an artificial brilliance by comparison. It may be, however, that the dusky Norwegian has something of a surprise in store for the English women. The youthful May Sutton, now Mrs. T. C. Bundy, playing a similar deep-court driving game, swept all before her when she crossed the ocean, and it has not yet been proved that she was distinctly Mrs. Mallory's superior.

It is a pity, however, that Miss Mary Browne of California has never had the opportunity of foreign competition, for her tennis, at its best, is overwhelmingly in advance of even the fastest driving game commanded by such an expert of the base line as Mrs. Mallory. As for the redoubtable Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, if reports are to be believed, she is in a class by herself at present, and her defeat in the coming championships would be a shock indeed to the European tennis world.

A noted English authority, A. Wallis Myers, in a recent ranking of all the men players bracketed Johnston and Gerald Patterson at the top, with Tilden lower in the list, evidently ignoring the latter's decisive victory over the great Australian at Forest Hills. The inclusion of Willis Davis among the world's first ten players, with the omission of Charles S. Garland from the same group, gives further indication of the rather distorted view of American tennis still prevalent abroad.

A mere glimpse of the American Davis Cup quartet in preliminary practice, however, seems to have been sufficient to bring the conviction that nothing can stop Johnston and Tilden short of the challenge round in New Zealand. But it is only actual competition that will tell the story, and the first definite conclusions will be drawn from the open tournament at the Queen's Club, which begins today. All four of the Davis Cup players, as well as Captain Samuel Hardy, are entered, and it has been announced that Johnston and Tilden will team in the doubles, with Richard Norris Williams, 2d, and C. S. Garland as a second combination. Individually and in partnership, the Americans should do well both this week at the Queen's Club, and after June 21 at Wimbledon. The real international tests do not begin until July 8, and by that time there should be a definite justification of the high hopes already entertained.

CRICKET CHAMPIONS WIN.

Playing true to form in the championship match at Bensonhurst yesterday the eleven of the Manhattan Cricket Club, champions of the Metropolitan District Cricket League, defeated the Brooklyn Cricket Club by the satisfactory margin of nine runs, with five wickets to spare.

A splendid innings by Harry Meyer netted an even 50 runs for the winners, while H. Smith, R. Comacho and L. R. Miller also contributed doubles. W. Godfrey of the Manhattan, with six wickets for 22 runs, had the best bowling average.

SPENCER CAPTURES THIRD TITLE RACE

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., June 13.—Arthur Spencer won the half-mile national championship race at the Velodrome in Newark this afternoon, defeating Frank Kramer, Raymond Eaton, and Willie Spencer in that order. Spencer by his victory increased his total in the championship competition to fifteen points, he having won three races; Eaton is second with seven points, Kramer third with six, and Madden fourth with three. There are still nine more championship races to be run before the American title is decided. Spencer is getting better right along, after being in a bad slump. It is expected that in a week's time he will be his old-self once more.

The summaries:

Two-Third Mile Handicap, Amateur—Won by Joseph Schenke, Bayview Wheelmen, 85 yards; Thomas Fitzsimmons, East Orange, 60 yards, second; Benny Clark, Newark, 75 yards, third; Frank Cozzolino, Ridgewood, 100 yards, fourth. Time—1:17 3-5.

MORAN BACK FROM EUROPE.

Says He Has Returned to Force Carpentier Into Ring with Him.

Frank Moran, the heavyweight boxer, came back from Europe yesterday on the Imperator for the express purpose as he put it of "hounding" Georges Carpentier until the Frenchman agrees to meet him in the ring. The Pittsburgh scrapper with the rainbow hair declared he never was in better condition and was prepared to battle Carpentier on the shortest notice.

"I'm over here to hound Carpentier to see if I can't make him fight me," Charles Francis declared, punctuating each word by pounding the arm of his chair in the ship's lounge. "I'm going to camp on his trail until he meets me."

Moran was interested to know what Carpentier had been doing since coming to America and plied reporters with all kinds of questions. When he had finished interviewing his interviewers, he told of the success he had had on the other side, where he whipped Tom Cowles, Frank Goddard and Paul Journée. He said he left New York in January, the object of his trip abroad being to get his share of the money from the Johnson-Moran fight in 1914. The prize money was held up by the French authorities at the instigation of Johnson's creditors and the matter has been in abeyance ever since.

"The French cut me off every time I tried to find out when I was going to get my share," Moran said. "Each official would pass the buck to another, and, after I had gone all along the line of officials, they would start me over again. Then I wrote letters by the dozen and never got a reply. I believe the fight was handled by Theodore Vienne, who is close to Descamps, manager of Carpentier."

Moran said he was going back to England to meet Joe Beckett at the Olympic in September. He expects to remain in New York for a week, making his headquarters at the Hotel Astor.

Johnny Coulan, the bantamweight pugilist, also came back on the Imperator. He said he had been matched to meet Jimmy Wilde in the Fall, the bout to take place in London. Johnny was jubilant over his bout with Emil Julard, the French featherweight champion, whom he knocked out in two rounds on April 29.

Before coming home, Coulan spent a few weeks in Germany, where he found pugilism among the leading sports. The Germans have a lot to learn about boxing, he said. The Heinies would make better wrestlers than boxers, as they know little or nothing about the science of the game, Coulan declared.

LAYOFF FOR THE RESOLUTE.

BRISTOL, R. I., June 13.—The cup sloop Resolute was brought up the bay from Newport today in tow of the tender Montauk for a day's layoff to have some refitting to the sails and for a brief rest for the racing men. Manager Robert W. Emmonds, 2d, said this evening that no important changes would be made on the Resolute at this time. A slight fitting of spars and sails will be carried out tomorrow at Herreshoff's and the Resolute will not race tomorrow.

The races between Vanitie and Resolute will be resumed off the Brenton Reef course on Tuesday. Resolute lay at anchor off the Herreshoff shops nearly all day. She will proceed to Newport tomorrow afternoon.

Reekie and Dyer Win on Links.

W. M. Reekie, who defeated F. W. Dyer for the golf championship of New Jersey a week ago last Saturday, teamed up with his late opponent in a fourball match yesterday afternoon on the links of the Glen Ridge Country Club, J. F. Hale and Jerry Travers being the opposing pair. All four of the contestants, incidentally, were unsuccessful competitors for the metropolitan title in last week's championship struggle, and they met in a sort of consolation match. After a hard-fought battle Reekie and Dyer won the match 2 up.

YOU don't know the solid, hour by hour satisfaction there can be in soft cuffs until you have sent the old style loose link and shank buttons to the discard and adopted the Kum-a-part, the soft cuff's own button. Slips easily into place, clings like a burr to the buttonhole whether open or closed; snaps shut — opens swiftly—holds cuffs snugly without bagging.

Inferior or imitative buttons are sometimes carelessly called "come-a-parts." Do not accept them. Be sure the name Kum-a-part is stamped upon the back of each button.

COLBY HAILS FLAG IN PARTY TURMOIL

CALLS FOR WORLD SERVICE

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Secretary Colby, speaking this afternoon as orator for the Flag Day exercises of the Washington Lodge of Elks at the Sylvan Theatre, in the shadow of the Washington Monument, said it was fortunate that Flag Day this year came so swiftly on the heels of the Republican Convention. There had been heard there some allusion to the country, said the Secretary of State, but a great deal more had been said about party and party success. The flag, he asserted, called Americans upward from the level of party strife and turmoil to "serener thoughts of duty and thoughts of country."

"For a week," said Mr. Colby, "the attention of the country has been centred upon the struggle in Chicago of one of the great national parties to agree upon a candidate for the highest office in the land. We have followed the swaying fortunes of rival candidates. We have seen long-pursued efforts culminate in the supreme exertion of the convention hour. The week has been marked by valiant attack and stout defense, by bitter recrimination, but, I am glad to add, by much good nature. There have been some allusions to country in the outgivings which have reached us from the convention city, but a great deal more has been said about party and party success.

"How right and proper—indeed, how fortunate—that Flag Day comes swift upon the heels of a period so given over to personal striving and selfish turmoil. We have heard the din of party and of faction and of men. Let us hearken to the deep, calm note of the nation's flag, as it calls us upward from the level of party strife to the serener heights of duty and thoughts of country.

War Heroes Died for Flag's Ideal.

"I remember reading some time ago a little poem in which the refrain of each stanza was, 'Hats off! The flag is passing by.' It is one of those great phrases, brief and simple, but which make the heart soar and the blood tingle. 'Hats off! The flag is passing by.' Can you not see it borne aloft and carried with pride by the armies of the past? Does there not sweep before the mind's eye the great company of heroes? Can you not hear the whispered words of prayer and devotion with which the fallen great of yesterday and of remoter times have staggered forward in defense of that blessed banner? Can you not conjure up the rapt gaze of the fallen, on many a battlefield, lovingly fixed on the flag as they sank into a hero's slumber?

"These are times in which we should have the flag not only in our hearts, but in our minds and on our lips. The times call for great action, for high and disinterested action. We have problems at home which clamor for solution and which can be solved only in the spirit of the flag. We have duties abroad which are long postponed and which can only be distinguished in the noble and generous spirit of the flag.

Calls Nation to Serve the World.

"The ideals of America are wrapped in its folds. It commemorates the deeds and the sacrifices of our best and bravest men. It is the scroll upon which are written the finest visions of a free people. We are unworthy to lift it and we are incapable of carrying it unless we can appreciate its significance and respond to the tones in which it speaks. It is no flag for a nation which is selfish. It is no flag for a people which is pusillanimous. It is not an appropriate banner for a policy of declared indifference to the sufferings or the future of the world. Policies so un-American as these must find some other emblem.

"The American flag speaks today, as it has always spoken, a message of cheer and help to the oppressed; a clear note of leadership to the aspiring in all lands; a note of aid and succor to liberty wherever liberty falters or is assailed. It is the flag of a peace-loving, a benevolent and an unafraid nation. It speaks for the redemption and not the repudiation of the nation's pledges. No policy of selfish aloofness, no policy of callous detachment from life and the world, can find shelter under its folds. It is the flag of work, of service, of courage. It is the flag of chivalrous men and noble women. It is a flag of glory. It is a flag which has moved forward on every field, never backwards; and today, and at this hour, it cannot be the emblem of a moral retreat upon that field of highest service, the rescue of a world, to which our destiny as a nation calls us."

LOYALTY TO AMERICA WINNING, SAYS WILSON

WASHINGTON, June 13.—President Wilson today sent the following letter to Colonel John McElroy, Commander of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic:

"I wish with all my heart that I could be present at the loyalty demonstration which is being planned for the evening of June 14. I shall certainly be present in spirit, though circumstances prevent by being present in body.

"Fortunately for us Americans, loyalty is not so much a compulsion of duty as a compulsion of the heart. In being loyal we are being true to ourselves, to the principles in which we are nurtured and bred, and which we have long recognized as a true expression of our national character and purpose, and I believe that as the years go by and the policy of the country develops along consistent lines loyalty will grow warmer and warmer until it consumes everything that is base or hostile."

WOMAN HURT IN WRECK.

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, N. Y., June 13.—The south bound Pittsfield express on the Harlem branch of the New York Central was derailed early this evening just north of Croton Falls when the front truck of the baggage car jumped the track on a curve. The baggage car hit a freight car standing on a siding and broke all of the cars away from the engine, which continued for nearly half a mile before it could be stopped.

The train, which was crowded with passengers from the Berkshires returning to New York after the week-end, left Brewster at 6:13 and had just crossed a bridge over the Croton River when the accident occurred. Both the baggage car and freight car were demolished and many windows in two Pullman coaches which followed were broken. Many of the passengers were thrown from their seats, but only one, Mrs. Henry J. Nerig of Elmhurst, L. I., was seriously injured. She was taken to White Plains Hospital with a broken leg.

SPAIN'S FUTURE KING A PRIVATE SOLDIER

MADRID, June 13.—The Prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, tomorrow will take the oath of loyalty as a private infantryman in the regiment formerly known as the old Third Moaradas, which participated in the conquest of Seville in the thirteenth century and fought with Cortes in Mexico and with Pizarro in Peru.

For the first time in history an heir to the Spanish throne will serve as an ordinary soldier, the others having received the rank of Captain-General at birth. The Prince would have preferred to become a sailor but his father chose a military career for him.

For several months past the Prince has worked hard at acquiring the elements of military knowledge under three chosen officers. In the past month he has drilled constantly in the Palace grounds with a company of the regiment he will join, rising at reveille and going through the exercises in the morning. He has shown himself a good comrade, sharing all the sports.

During the afternoons the Prince has invited some of the soldiers to join him in his garden work on the piece of ground in the palace gardens given him by his father. He passes his spare hours with his brothers and sisters or in studying various subjects, to fit himself to rule when the time comes.

Prince Alfonso often has expressed the desire to study at the University of Madrid, but this is improbable, as only special professors have been employed to teach him.

Tomorrow's ceremony will take place at the Polo Grounds of the Casa Del Campo. Diplomats and Ministers have been invited, as also former officers of the regiment. On Tuesday the King will give a luncheon to the regiment's officers and men, who number 1,400.

Another son of the King, Prince Gonzalo, is to enter the same regiment in the near future.

STRIKERS CUT OFF MELBOURNE LIGHTS

MELBOURNE, Australia, June 13.—Enginemen in the electric power stations to the number of 800 have struck. It is estimated that the lighting and cooking arrangements of 200,000 families are affected. Many factories are idle. The streets and railway stations are lighted, but the suburbs are in darkness. Efforts are being made to maintain a limited supply of electric power for hospitals and other institutions. The tram service will cease this evening, to conserve the power supply.

The enginemen employed in the Government cold storage plant have also struck, leaving thousands of carcasses to spoil. The Government officials are doing their utmost to cope with the situation.

Indications seem to forecast a worse upheaval than that in 1917, as it is feared virtually all the trade organizations will eventually be involved in the present movement.

DENY PICKING CANDIDATES.

Special to The New York Times.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., June 13.—Governor Smith of New York, Charles F. Murphy, Tammany Hall leader, and Thomas Taggart, Indiana Democratic leader, and a few lesser lights, who are here for "a little rest" before the trip to San Francisco, denied today that any understanding on a Presidential candidate had been sought. Politics had only been discussed informally, they said, and no meeting of political significance has been planned or will be planned for this week.

Governor Smith and Mr. Murphy will remain here until next Saturday. Neither had any comment to make on the nomination of Senator Harding. Mr. Taggart, however, said:

"If the Republican Party should be successful in electing a President this Fall, which I doubt, Senator Harding would be my first choice. While serving a short term in the United States Senate I became acquainted with Senator Harding and in my judgment, when it comes to brains and ability, he is the peer of any Republican in that body."

Mr. Taggart declared that Indiana's thirty votes in the convention would be at the disposal of Vice President Marshall if he becomes a candidate. "Mr. Marshall has declared that he is not a candidate," said Mr. Taggart "and I have not been advised to the contrary. This matter will be determined after the delegates arrive at San Francisco."

TROY PUBLISHERS HURT.

Two Proprietors of Sunday Budget Are Hit by an Automobile.

TROY, N. Y., June 13.—Albert MacNaughton, one of the proprietors of The Sunday Budget, is in a critical condition at a local hospital, while his partner, Thomas H. Curry, is less seriously injured as the result of being struck by an automobile early this morning.

HARDING MAY BE FIRST BAPTIST PRESIDENT

Gov. Coolidge Holds to Congregational Faith of New England—Both Churchgoers.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 13.—Senator Warren G. Harding, the Republican Presidential nominee, is a Baptist in his religious beliefs. Down in the town of Marion, he is not only a member of the Trinity Baptist Church, but a Trustee of the church and a regular attendant at its service when his senatorial duties permit him to be at home. A part of his education was received at a little Baptist college in Hiram, to which he had been sent by his parents for a college course.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 13.—Governor Calvin Coolidge, who will be 48 years old this coming Fourth of July, comes of old New England stock from Plymouth, Vermont, where his parents were adherents of the Congregational faith. He has held to that faith, being a member today of the Congregational Church in Northampton. He is a regular churchgoer, never missing a Sunday service unless State duties interfere.

If Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, Republican nominee for President, succeeds in being elected, he will be the first member of the Baptist Church who ever ruled in the executive mansion. Senator Harding is a trustee of Trinity Baptist Church, Marion, Ohio.

James A. Garfield was a member of the Church of the Disciples of Christ which is an offshoot of the Baptist Church.

President Wilson has attended the Central (Southern) Presbyterian Church, of which branch his father was a clergyman. He is an elder in the First (Northern) Church, Princeton, N. J.

More Presidents have belonged to the Episcopal Church than to any other one communion.

Long Time Bonds

The amount and variety of long time bonds available at present low prices is limited, owing to the fact that most of the new issues are of short or medium duration. Corporations are unwilling to pay present burdensome rates of interest on new issues except for a relatively short period.

Those desiring long term investments must depend largely upon old seasoned issues, and many experienced investors are now buying this class of security.

We can supply a limited amount of long time bonds at prices yielding around 7%, and we recommend the purchase of such bonds at the present time. We shall be glad to send details and circulars to those interested.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

Stocks Dull, But Strong—High Money Likely to Continue.

The stock market last week gave rather a peculiar performance. It was exceedingly dull, as it had good reason for being, but, at least so far as the speculatively favored industrial list was concerned, it was not at all weak. On the contrary, it was strong despite its dullness. Considering the fairly numerous unfavorable factors this display of strength would seem to indicate a resumption of what Wall Street generically refers to as "pool activity." In other words, the movement of prices was very largely dictated by the professional forces, with only moderate and modest public participation.

That there was any activity at all was somewhat surprising. A national convention of one of the major parties usually exercises a certain blighting influence on markets, and there was small reason for supposing that the Republican Convention this year would be any exception to the rule. There was a fairly considerable radical element in the party which, it was feared, would make trouble, with the possibility of its gaining some substantial successes before the convention was over. Then, too, there was the possibility of "planks" being inserted into the platform which would prove embarrassing to business. Contrary to a more or less general belief in some quarters, "big business" does not want a lot of legislation, even by its so-called political friends, and would much prefer to be allowed to develop along natural lines to having the statutes altered promiscuously by the usual system of political log-rolling. There are some things, of course, which are desirable, but not nearly as many as is popularly supposed.

In addition to political considerations the movement against high prices still was being prosecuted, and this had a quieting, if not actually a disquieting, effect. Any economic readjustment tends to upset markets, makes for caution and stifles, temporarily, initiative.

As the week progressed the unfavorable features continued to develop. From a market point of view the higher rates for call money were not pleasant to contemplate, and the announcement of an issue of Treasury certificates at the unprecedentedly high rate of 6 per cent. certainly seemed to lay at rest all hope of "easy" money for some time to come. Then there was the collapse of the silver market and the demoralization of Chinese exchanges, and in the railroad field there was the totally unexpected reduction of both the common and preferred dividends of Chicago & Northwestern, followed by predictions that some of the other roads with long dividend-paying records would have to follow suit.

But the market steadfastly ignored these things. The industrial favorites were strong at all times and on some days were rushed forward as though there were no cloud in the financial sky, and while their actions failed to attract any considerable number of outside followers, they did succeed in giving the market the appearance of strength. It was only in the small day-to-day turnovers that the real professional character of the situation was disclosed.

Not every one will agree with the theory that an advance in the rate of interest on Treasury certificates means an automatic readjustment of prices on other Government securities and of investment securities in general. This theory might be unassailable if previous certificate issues were still being "pegged" at par, which they are not. In the last week, following the announcement of the new 5¾ per cent. and 6 per cent. certificates, there was some selling of Liberty bonds and some liquidation of other investments, but how much of this could be attributed to the higher certificate rates and how much to other causes is an open question.

So far as the Treasury's dealings with the money market go the Treasury for many months has been below the market; has been borrowing at artificially low rates, and it is no secret that the market has been discounting the artificial rates by making prices for the certificates at less than par. It still is doing so, as it could not do otherwise, for there are certificates now outstanding with rates which run all the way from 4¼ to 5½ per cent, and when the new issues get into circulation the spread until Sept. 15 will be from 4¼ to 6 per cent.

War bonds, it is true, did sell off following the announcement, but they recovered again, and neither the decline nor the recovery amounted to much, and neither could be traced directly to any one cause. What is going on in war bonds is that they are seeking their natural level, whatever it may be. Those who argue that the efforts of the Treasury to get abreast of the money market are hurting other securities are confusing cause and effect.

The industrial situation shows signs of further slowing down. Prices continue to ease off more or less sharply and business is in less volume than in some time. Deliveries are being interfered with by the intolerable freight congestion and the outlook is not bright. In the retail trades reports of lessened buying by the public are being sent out, despite the cut in many prices. The public, it would seem, has about reached the conclusion that refusal to pay exorbitant prices is one way to correct exorbitant prices.

The sharp break in the price of silver was, perhaps, a natural consequence of the economic disturbances which have been occurring in the Orient for some time past, but there is no doubt that it was aided and emphasized by technical conditions within the silver market. The situation in the Far East, so far as may be judged from this distance, is still rather precarious, but advices reaching New York this last week indicate that it is on the mend. June 30 is apt to prove a troublesome date, with the Japanese settlement coming at that time, but no calamity is anticipated, and reports state that bankers in Japan are confident that they have the affair well in hand and that the worst is over.

GETS SUGAR AT 15 CENTS.

14,000 Tons Bought in Argentina Is Expected to Cost That Landed Here.

BUENOS AIRES, June 12.—Based on the domestic price at which Frederic J. Stimson, United States Ambassador to Argentina, obtained 14,000 tons of sugar for the account of the United States, plus the transportation cost, it is estimated the sugar will be landed in New York at 15 cents a pound. It will probably require five ships to transport the sugar.

President Irigoyen's action in waiving the exportation restrictions on the solicitation of Ambassador Stimson is considered here to have been decided upon as a special favor to the United States.

In addition to the sugar obtained by Ambassador Stimson for the United States Government, it is learned that private interests have contracted for a total of 50,000 tons for exportation to the United States.

1919 Bond Sales

BOND SALES (Par Value)

1889...	$[illegible]
1899...	$836,451,120
1909...	$1,314,856,300
1919...	$3,771,217,764

The extraordinary volume of trading in 1919 may be partly attributed to public appreciation of bond investments brought about by the Liberty Loan campaigns.

Commodity Prices and Security Values

Under the conditions facing us securities of conservatively capitalized public utility companies are among the most desirable investments. Gross earnings of such companies are relatively stable, and with no large inventories to mark down every addition to the purchasing power of the dollar will increase the margin of profit through reduction of operating expenses.

OIL GEOLOGISTS

Practically all successful developments of new oil fields during recent years have resulted from preliminary examinations by geologists specially trained and experienced in petroleum work. New projects should, therefore, be subjected to most careful scrutiny by petroleum geologists prior to the expenditure of money for drilling operations. The cost of drilling has greatly advanced in recent years, and prospect or wildcat wells for this reason alone justify the cost of careful geological scrutiny.

Specialization in petroleum work has undoubtedly resulted in better service from the geologist.

ALIEN TAX DODGERS HAVE PAID $9,000,000

RESIDENTS ALSO DETECTED

In a statement given out yesterday Colonel Daniel L. Porter, Supervising Internal Revenue agent of the Federal Income Tax Collecting Service, said that through his squad of forty-five collectors stationed at piers and elsewhere he had collected between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000 from outgoing aliens, which otherwise would never have been collected. This is in addition to amounts collected by his agents at Ellis Island from delinquent aliens who go to the immigration station to insure the Government against their incoming relatives and friends ever becoming public charges.

Reports of the agents show that for the months of February, March and April more than $30,000 in cash was collected from alien tax dodgers at Ellis Island, while three times that sum was traced to other localities and the local collectors there notified. Since February Colonel Porter has had some of his men stationed at Ellis Island for the purpose of questioning resident aliens concerning their unpaid income tax. The bureau was established, by courtesy of the immigration officials, close by the courts of the special inquiry, where boasts of big incomes could be plainly overheard.

"This money was collected," it was explained by Colonel Porter in referring to the amount collected at Ellis Island, "in amounts ranging from $15 to $500. It represents taxes due the Government in small business concerns for the most part, but upon wage incomes, as well. It is money which might otherwise never have been placed in Uncle Sam's pocket, had the immigration authorities not co-operated with us in nailing these delinquents when they appear at Ellis Island as guarantors and bondsmen for their incoming penniless friends and relatives.

"A resident alien goes to the immigration station to get his sister, or cousin, or friend admitted to the country, knowing that the Government requires that some guarantee be made by responsible persons that such immigrants will not become public charges in this country. The resident alien, therefore, goes prepared to make a showing on oath that his income is ample to safeguard the public against such dependents. Our agents at once get interested in the question whether this resident alien has paid his income tax. Of course, we cannot collect upon the full value of income as represented on oath, but we call the delinquent into a conference and get from him such exemptions as he may be entitled to and then levy our tax upon the lawful figure subject to the income tax.

"While a considerable sum of money has thus been collected from aliens who are remaining in this country and bringing in their friends and relatives from other countries, a great deal more is being collected from aliens leaving this country."

The collections at Ellis Island will be continued, Colonel Porter said, as long as the work is productive.

APPROVE FEDERAL LOANS FOR BUILDING

MAY REQUIRE LEGISLATION

M. Morgenthau, Jr., who recently took up with Governor Harding of the Federal Reserve Board the question of granting credits to builders as a part of the housing program, announced yesterday that he had received a number of letters from prominent real estate men indorsing the idea. Douglas L. Elliman is quoted as saying that if the State or Federal Government does not come to the assistance soon bad times are ahead. Laurence McGuire, former President of the Real Estate Board of New York, said that in his opinion Congress would have to amend the Federal Reserve act before any money could be obtained from the Federal Reserve Banks.

William E. Harmon, real estate developer, made a new proposal. "I have not much faith," he said, "in any of the remedies heretofore suggested, such as priority on material used, of trade acceptances in the building industry, elimination of income from mortgages from State taxation, and other similar remedies. I do, of course, recognize their value, but the difficulties in the way of building are too deep seated and insurmountable to be offset by these minor remedial measures. My frank opinion is that the only thing that will create building on a large scale within the next few years is the elimination of new construction from taxation for a period of from five to seven or even ten years."

There appears to be no slacking up in the building boom in Westchester County. In the last month more than $1,000,000 worth of building permits were granted by the building departments in Yonkers, New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, White Plains, Tarrytown, Peekskill and Port Chester. The contractors are rushing work on new houses so that they will be completed by Fall. In White Plains work is progressing on the community houses which the housing corporation formed by local men is building. It is expected that 100 new homes will be completed by Oct. 1.

The shortage of houses has been relieved by many Westchester folk moving into bungalows at Rye and Oakland Beaches, while others have gone to their Summer homes.

In Yonkers about 200 small houses are now under construction and a number of new apartment houses are being erected.

BUENOS AIRES, June 12.—British, French and Italian ships in Argentine ports have resumed the loading of wheat contracted for, the exporters paying the new four peso export supertax on most of it. Some of these ships, however, will be allowed to depart without paying the tax, as a result of representations made by the Ministers of the three countries against the sudden embargo placed on the exportation of wheat prior to enactment of the supertax law.

It was learned today that six British ships carrying 13,900 tons will be thus exempted. The French and Italian Ministers got corresponding concessions, for which the French Minister, M. Gaussen, thanked President Irigoyen prior to his departure today for France on leave of absence.

While the remaining exportations will have to pay the tax, it is known to be yet an unsettled question as to whether the three Governments will ship all the wheat previously contracted for. The British Wheat Commission declared today it did not know whether additional wheat would be exported after the ships now in Argentine ports load and depart.

GIVES MEXICAN OIL POLICY.

MEXICO CITY, June 12.—General Jacinto B. Treviño, Minister of Commerce and Industry in the Cabinet formed by Adolfo De le Huerta, the Provisional President, issued a statement today defining his official attitude toward the petroleum industry. This attitude, he said, would be "one of pure nationalism based on definite legitimate national interest, and giving protection also to legitimately created foreign interests, without distinction as to nationality." He added that he would ask the sane counsel of all interested persons regarding his policy.

The petroleum industry, General Treviño said, was being steadily developed and there had been no complaint from the oil companies as to the conduct of the recent revolution.

He said 1,056 oil wells already had been drilled or were projected up to the present time, and that there were now 298 productive wells.

REPLIES TO HARDING INQUIRY

Interstate Commerce Commission Gives Authority for April 15 Order.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission, replying to a resolution introduced in the Senate by Senator Harding of Ohio, now the Republican Presidential nominee, asking by what authority it issued its war assignment of last April 15, said the order was based on the Interstate Commerce act. It added that its authority to take such action had been upheld by the Supreme Court in numerous decisions.

Under the order cars supplied to coal mines for the transportation of fuel for the railroads could not be charged against the distributive shares of cars to those mines. Senator Harding objected to the order on the ground that it was preferential to the railroads as against some of the mines and the public.

The commission said that the passing of the roads from Federal control and the suspension of the Fued Administration's rules, together with the transportation conditions and shortage of fuel on hand at the time, created an emergency to which it "acted with its best judgment." It added that "no other definite rule or practical plan has been suggested by the interested parties in the many conferences that have been held on the subject."

SPANISH BREAD CRISIS.

Madrid Millers Threaten to Stop Operations if Prices Are Maintained.

MADRID, June 12.—Conferences were held today between the Minister of Public Works and the Civil Governor of Food Supplies over the bread situation in Madrid, which is becoming worse. The bakers refuse to produce the ordinary bread, declaring it impossible on account of the existing price of flour.

Millers, in the course of an interview with Premier Dato, threatened to cease grinding wheat unless prices were reduced.

REPUBLICAN 'SAVING' IS CALLED ABSURD

Representative Byrnes Asks Why, Then, Taxes Were Not Correspondingly Reduced.

SEES PLAN TO FOOL PUBLIC

Asserts Indirect Appropriations Bring Total for 150 Days of Congress to $5,403,390,327.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Representatives James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, a eDmocratic member of the Appropriations Committee, challenged tonight the statement of Representative Mondell, Republican floor leader in the House, that the Republican Congress had saved the taxpayers more than a billion dollars.

"If Mr. Mondell's statement is true," said Mr. Byrnes, "why have they not reduced taxes in a corresponding amount?"

Mr. Mondell, in his financial statement at the close of the session, asserted that the appropriations by this Congress for the fiscal year beginning July 1, next, amount to $4,859,890,327.30.

"This is the truth, but not the whole truth," said Mr. Byrnes. "As a member of the House Appropriations Committee, I want the people to know that in addition to the direct appropriation of the sum mentioned, this Congress has by re-appropriations and authorizations made available for expenditure at least $543,500,000 additional, making the total amount available for expenditure $5,403,390,327.30.

"This is almost five times as much as has ever been spent by the Government in a single year in time of peace, the largest amount heretofore appropriated being $1,114,937,012.02 for the fiscal year 1916. This Republican Congress was in session exactly 150 days and an authorized expenditure of $5,403,390,327.30 means that the money of the people was appropriated at the rate of $36,000,000 a day and that to meet the expenditures for next year it will be necessary to levy an average tax of $50 upon every man, woman and child in America.

Tells of Indirect Appropriations.

"Inasmuch as it is advisable that the public should know the total expenditures authorized by a Congress, it is unfortunate that for political expediency this Republican Congress should have resorted to appropriating money in indirect ways, making absolutely misleading any statement of direct appropriations.

"For instance, of the $543,500,000 made available for expenditure over and above the direct appropriations, there are re-appropriations amounting to $156,600,000. This means that of appropriations heretofore made for expenditure during the presnt fiscal year $156,600,000 was not expended and under the law should be turned back into the Treasury July 1. Congress, however, provided that this amount should be made available for expenditure next year and has made a corresponding reduction in the amount of direct appropriations.

"Another plan by which the Republican Congress has endeavored to mislead the people is illustrated in the appropriations for the Shipping Board. This year the Shipping Board asked for $225,000,000. The Congress did not make the direct appropriation, but directed that $225,000,000 of the proceeds of the sale of ships should not be turned into the Treasury but should be made available for expenditure during the next year. The Republican leaders include this amount in the total alleged reduction of estimates and call it a 'saving,' but ablind man can see aand a fool can understand that the money is going to be spent, and it matters little to the taxpayer which one of his pockets it comes out of.

"Another instance of this effort to mislead the people by this pretended reduction of appropriations is in the Deficiency bill, where the Railroad Administration asked for $420,000,000 to wind up its affairs. Congress appropriated directly $300,000,000, and instead of appropriating the remaining $120,000,000, directed that the Railroad Administration be allowed to use $30,000,000 out of the loan fund appropriated in the Transportation act. This money will be spent and the loan fund will be reimbursed after the election. The balance of $90,000,000 was provided by directing the War Finance Corporation to purchase, at par, $90,000,000 Liberty bonds held by the Railroad Administration.

"In this way the $120,000,000 was provided without making a direct appropriation and the Republican leaders include this in the reduction of estimates and call it a 'saving.' But the $90,000,000 will be spent.

Makes Total $5,403,390,327.30.

"It is impossible to tell how many more similar 'reductions' have been included in appropriation bills, but the amounts made available for expenditure in these three items alone total $471,000,000, which must be added to the total direct appropriations. In addition, the expenditure of $72,500,000 has been authorized in several bills, but no appropriations have been made to meet these expenditures. These amounts added to the direct appropriations make a total expenditure by this Congress of $5,403,390,327.30.

"Confronted by their record of extravagance, the Republican leaders vainly endeavor to excuse themselves by explaining that the estimates of the departments were $1,312,417,650.30 in excess of appropriations, and that therefore they 'saved' this amount of money. No more ridiculous statement has ever been made by a public official.

"If such a reduction constitutes a saving, the last Democratic Congress is entitled to special commendation, for that Congress reduced the estimates of the departments for the fiscal year 1918 by $5,554,161,598.31."

Albert to Arrange Trade with Brazil.

BRUSSELS, June 13.—The forthcoming trip of King Albert to Brazil, it is understood, will aim at the creation of closer economic relations between Belgium and that country. It is expected the first result of the King's visit will be the conclusion of a special loan favoring the importation of Brazilian goods into Belgium.

FRENCH WHEAT MAY SUPPLY NEEDS FOR YEAR

Yield of 260,000,000 Bushels Expected — 800,000 More Acres Seeded Than in 1919.

PARIS, June 13.—Another month of good growing weather with favorable harvesting conditions will be worth between 3,000,000,000 and 4,000,000,000 francs to France, in the opinion of agricultural experts.

"It is impossible to tell what will happen in the next few weeks," said a high official of the Ministry of Agriculture today, "but if the crops meet with no disaster France will buy but little wheat abroad next year if conditions continue as favorable as now. She may not buy any. This means a minimum economy of 2,500,000,000 francs, which may reach nearly 4,000,000,000 francs."

In 1919, a poor year, France raised 173,000,000 bushels of wheat and had to buy 150,000,000 bushels abroad. This year is declared to be the best in the memory of farmers for all crops, with 800,000 more acres seeded than last year. The crop is estimated by experts of the Agricultural Department to be at least 50 per cent. better, bringing the yield to 260,000,000 bushels.

Reasonable restrictions, with a mixture of rye and corn meal, will further eke out the food supply, in the opinion of the Revictualing Department, so that France may virtually be independent with regard to breadstuffs for the year beginning next August. Last year it cost 3,067,000,000 francs to keep the people supplied with bread. The most the Revictualing Minister expects to pay next year is 1,250,000,000 francs.

The devastated regions, where there are still little more than temporarily roofed ruins and hastily thrown up shacks to shelter the population, furnish two-thirds of the increased seeding, with 500,000 acres more of wheat than a year ago and 1,000,000 acres more of all grain crops. They compare favorably with the best of France's wheat growing country, contrary to pesimistic opinions regarding recovery of the trench-lacerated and shell-plowed land.

France will this year, for the first time since 1914, have grown a crop of flax approaching the pre-war production. The regions in the north, which furnish the bulk of the crop and which were in the war zone or the hands of the enemy, have largely been seeded again, with excellent chances of a better crop per acre than has been known in years.

4,250,000,000 Marks Printed in May

BERLIN, June 13.—According to the Kreuz-Zeitung the Government printing works turned out in May 4,250,000,000 marks of uncovered paper currency and since the beginning of June the staff of the works has been increased.

ACCEPTANCES VITAL TO RESERVE SYSTEM

URGES USE AS INVESTMENT

Asserts No Other Credit Can So Easily Be Safeguarded Against Inflation.

The American Acceptance Council yesterday made public its answers to the questionnaire issued to bankers and dealers in bankers' acceptances. Replying to the question, "Is an open discount market an essential of the American system of banking?" the council, through its Executive Committee, which is headed by Paul M. Warburg, says: "Unless the Federal Reserve Board puts itself heart and soul behind the untrammeled development of acceptances as a prime investment for banks and Federal Reserve Banks the future safe and sound development of the system will be jeopardized."

The questionnaire was the result of a conference between members of the Federal Reserve Board and bankers from New York and Boston, held at Washington on April 13, and was sent out by the board in order to obtain complete information on every phase of the use and operation of acceptances, with related facts on rates, market conditions and methods of handling.

There are thirty-nine questions in the document, and it is expected that answers will be received from all of the bankers who attended the conference, as well as from the Acceptance Council.

In its replies, the Acceptance Council asserts that the development of the widest possible use of the acceptance as an investment is "the rock bottom foundation of the success of the Federal Reserve system," and adds: "Unless the acceptance secures its place as the most important asset in bank portfolios, functioning as a secondary reserve of all banks, we cannot hope to get away from our old system of basing the liquidity of the banking system of the United States primarily on the call money market of the New York Stock Exchange. It is a question of life and death for the Federal Reserve system."

The council answers "No" to the question: "Does bankers' acceptance credit as permitted under the Federal Reserve act tend to inflation of credit?" It takes the stand that there is no other form of credit that can so easily be safeguarded as bankers' acceptances against the abuse of inflation. The council also answers "No" to the question whether such credit tends to inflation of bank loans in the United States, on the theory that acceptances are issued only against things of actual value. Thus, it contends, the creation of bankers' acceptances also presupposes the creation of goods or commodities, and while this may mean "expansion," the council argues that it is not "inflation."

CALL COAL BOARD JUNE 21.

Anthracite Commission to Organize for Pennsylvania Hearings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Announcement was authorized tonight by the Anthracite Coal Commission that its first meeting, following its creation by the President, will be held in Washington on June 21. Members of the Commission are William O. Thompson, Chairman; William L. Connell and Neal J. Ferry.

Mr. Thompson is President of Ohio State University and was a member of the President's second Industrial Conference. Mr. Connell is one of the largest anthracite coal operators in Pennsylvania, while Mr. Ferry is a member of the Executive Committee of the United Mine Workers of America.

At the meeting on June 21 the Commission will determine the time and place of hearings to be held shortly thereafter. It is probable that these hearings will not take place in Washington, but somewhere in Pennsylvania.

The Commission is being assisted in its preliminary work by Herbert N. Shenton, Executive Secretary of the Bituminous Coal Commission, and James A. Gorman, who has been for some years Secretary of the Conciliation Board of the anthracite field.

WILL BOYCOTT HUNGARY.

BERLIN, June 13.—Vorwärts publishes today an order of the German Federation of Labor declaring a general boycott against Hungary, effective June 20, when all transportation to and from Hungary by land and water of food, coal, raw materials, mails and telegrams will cease.

The order, which is authorized by the International Federation of Trades Unions and is signed by W. A. Appleton and Leon Jouhaux, President and First Vice President respectively of the International Federation, and others, gives details of alleged horrible atrocities perpetrated by the "white terror" of Admiral Horthy, Hungarian Regent, upon the working classes of Hungary. The German trade unions of railwaymen, transport workers and others have declared their adhesion to the boycott.

HENRY RUTGERS, Esq.

Like many another of the stockholders of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, Henry Rutgers—during the Revolution a Captain in the Battle of White Plains, and who through the War of 1812 contributed toward defensive works in the City of New York—was in times of Peace distinguished by his services to the cause of free education. In April, 1806, he gave two lots on Henry Street, New York, for free School purposes. The lots were valued at $2500, no inconsiderable sum for the time. Another gift, which has perpetuated his name to this day, was $5000 for reviving Queens College in New Jersey, the name of which was changed to Rutgers College on December 5, 1825. From 1802 to 1826 he was one of the Regents of the State University. Being the proprietor of land on the East River, in the vicinity of Chatham Square, and in other parts of the city, he made other generous donations of land to be used as sites for public buildings, churches and various charities. Thus it was that the Bank of the Manhattan Company, through its early stockholders, backed our greatest national institutions and helped them through the struggles of their infancy.

Advertising is an Investment

"WASTE NOT" IN ADVERTISING

The merchant or manufacturer who advertises wastefully, discredits the most potent of all factors in business development.

Extravagant use of advertising space may produce a reaction that is neither profitable nor complimentary to the advertiser. Original, attractive, interesting, informative advertising, skillfully presented in adequate space, is far more impressive and productive than the advertisement that has nothing but size to commend it.

WOMAN DIES IN FALL FROM HOTEL WINDOW

BROKER FINDS THE BODY

Victim Was Mother-in-Law of J. A. Topping of Republic Iron and Steel Corporation.

Mrs. Ella Johnson, 71 years old, mother-in-law of John A. Topping, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Republic Iron and Steel Corporation, fell seven stories to her death yesterday morning from a window of her suite in the Hotel Beresford, Central Park West and Eighty-second Street.

A sudden attack of vertigo, the aftermath of several weeks' illness from heart disease, caused Mrs. Johnson to lose her balance, according to the police investigation.

Mrs. Johnson, who had lived in the hotel for seven years, suffered a severe recurrence of heart trouble two years ago. For days she was under the care of a nurse, day and night. Recently, however, she seemed to be rapidly improving and yesterday morning asked her husband, Seth W. Johnson, a retired merchant of Muscatine, Ia., to begin preparations for a trip to their country home, near Greenwich, Conn.

After breakfast Mrs. Johnson, her husband and Effie Swanson, a nurse, began packing trunks for the trip set for today. After a short time, however, Mrs. Johnson declared that she felt "fagged out," and said she would go into an adjoining room for a breath of fresh air.

Mr. Johnson and the nurse, who continued the packing, heard a window being raised in the adjoining room. Then, a few seconds later, they heard shouts from the street. Mr. Johnson, who is nearly 80 years old, called to his wife, asking what the shouting was about. When he got no answer, he hurried into the room. It was empty.

Meanwhile, down in the street, John F. Penny, a broker of 1 West Eighty-second Street, was sending in a call to Knickerbocker Hospital for an ambulance. The broker, on his way to church, had witnessed the fall and when he reached the woman's side, thought he observed signs of life. Dr. Anton Shapiro, however, said death had been instantaneous.

Investigation by detectives from the West Sixty-eighth Street station house disproved a report that Mrs. Johnson, melancholic, had leaped from the window.

Both Mrs. Topping and another daughter, Mrs. William L. Hope Simpson, whose husband is associated with the British and Foreign Marine Insurance Company, Ltd., were summoned to the hotel, but were too distressed to discuss their mother's death.

ASKS STRONGER OIL POLICY.

T. A. O'Donnell Says Our Interests Abroad Need U. S. Support.

Thomas A. O'Dennell, President of the American Petroleum Institute, before sailing yesterday to attend the International Trade Conference in Paris, issued a statement in which he said:

"That Americans have not been permitted to enlarge their program and insure the security of American petroleum requirements is due largely to the attitude of the American Government in not adopting a progressive and far-sighted policy with regard to the legitimate operations of its nationals under foreign flags.

"It is clear that the present situation is one that cannot be left wholly to chance and that the Government must, as intimated by the President, regard the position of American oil companies abroad as of national concern. It is believed that the expression of its disapproval of selfish covenants and restrictive legislation by other nations would carry weight with foreign Governments."

In an effort to obtain the substitution of the thermal unit as the gas quality standard instead of the candle-power standard, the Emergency Committee of the American Gas Association made public a copy of a resolution adopted at a recent meeting. The resolution makes emphatic protest "against the wasteful use of gas oil in maintaining candle power standards in the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, and any other cities where these non-economic standards still exist," and instructs the chairman of the committee to convey the purport of the resolution to the proper authorities.

General Porter Reported Better.

General Horace Porter, former United States Ambassador to France, who has been critically ill for several days at his home, 277 Madison Avenue, was reported yesterday to be "decidedly better," although he is still in a serious condition.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

OCEAN STEAMSHIP COMPANY OF SAVANNAH
Extension of First Mortgage 5 Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Bonds, due July 1, 1920.
Total Issue, $1,000,000. Closed Mortgage.

Savannah, Ga., June 7, 1920.

The Company offers to all holders extension of the maturity of the principal from July 1, 1920, to July 1, 1925, with semi-annual interest (January and July) at 7% per annum until paid, subject to redemption on July 1, 1922, or on any succeeding interest date at a premium of ½ of 1% for each six months between the redemption date and the date of maturity.

Payment of the principal and interest on each extended bond will be unconditionally guaranteed by Central of Georgia Railway Company (owner of the entire capital stock, except Directors' shares), which is not now a guarantor. To each extended bond there will also be attached an Extension Contract and a new coupon sheet bearing ten semi-annual coupons of $35.00 each.

Details are fully set forth in an agreement dated June 30, 1920, between the Corporation and the Trustee, copies of which may be procured on application to Ocean Steamship Company of Savannah, Box 727, Savannah, Ga., or Illinois Central R. R. Company, 32 Nassau Street, New York, or Central-Union Trust Company of New York, the Trustee, 80 Broadway, New York.

The bonds are secured by absolute First Mortgage on two steamships now insured for $600,000, and on 247 acres of improved land at Savannah, Ga., with over one mile of dock frontage on deep water, being the principal terminals of the Steamship Company and the Railway Company, and recognized as the most important terminals at Savannah. The water commerce of Savannah largely exceeds that of any other South Atlantic port.

On the basis of unit land values tentatively announced by the Valuation Bureau of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the land alone had a market value as of June 30, 1915, of $2,494,041.18. Present values are substantially greater. The improvements are conservatively valued at over $3,000,000. Including insured value of the ships, the value of the first lien mortgaged property is more than six times the mortgage debt.

The annual compensation of the Steamship Company under Federal control (standard return) was $1,048,782.89, equal to more than fourteen times the 7% annual interest on the extended bonds. The Company has no other mortgage debt, and only $25,000 of additional interest charges.

Holders should present their bonds on or after June 21, 1920, at the office of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, 32 Nassau Street, New York, for attachment to each bond of the Extension Contract, the new coupon sheet of ten coupons, and the guaranty of Central of Georgia Railway Company. Holders not desiring to extend may receive in cash from Illinois Central R. R. Co. (owner of the entire capital stock, except Directors' shares, of Central of Georgia Ry Co.) on presentation at its office, the full face value of their bonds.

Coupons maturing July 1, 1920, will be paid on presentation to Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, or to the Illinois Central R. R. Co. W. A. WINBURN, President.

CROKER DECISION AWAITED.

Judge Bonnell Says There Will Be No Developments for Two Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., June 13.—The arguments in the Croker case being finished, Judge E. B. Bonnell of the Circuit Court said today that the court reporter would require a week in which to transcribe the stenographic notes of the hearing, and the Judge would then take a week in which to study the record and the cases cited by counsel. The Judge's decision on the motion to dissolve the injunction obtained by Richard Croker, Jr., against Mrs. Bula E. Croker, he said, would be given in about two weeks. In the meantime there would be no developments.

The court directed the attorneys to refrain from discussion of the testimony respecting the life of Mrs. Croker before her marriage, saying that the record contained all the information on that point he wanted to hear.

TO DIG FOR CARUSO JEWELS.

Detectives Believe Thieves Buried Booty on Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTHAMPTON, L. I., June 12.—A systematic search of the 100 acres surrounding the Summer home of Enrico Caruso here will be made tomorrow at daylight for some trace of the jewels stolen from the house last week. Thomas J. Corrigan, in charge of the private detectives who have been investigating the theft, said that he was certain that the gems were hidden somewhere on the grounds and that the men would use picks and shovels on the theory that the robbers had buried their loot.

The guard about the house will be doubled at night to prevent any one from entering the grounds and recovering the jewels if they have been buried. The guards have been ordered to fire at any one who does not halt at command.

ASKS SPECIAL FRUIT PIER.

W. F. Morgan Tells Need of Equipment to Protect Perishable Food.

William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants' Association, has written to Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert urging the establishment by the city of a pier suitably equipped for the protection of fruits against freezing in the Winter and spoiling in the Summer. The lack of such a pier, Mr. Morgan says, is seriously detrimental to the public since it sometimes results in temporary shortage of fruits and farm products, with a consequent increase in prices.

"Arrangements are now in progress," Mr. Morgan writes, "for the organization of a steamship line suitably equipped for the handling and protection of fruits and other perishable food products. Effective operation of these and other ships carrying perishable food products make necessary the setting aside of a pier on the North River, convenient to the produce district."

SERVICES FOR WAR DEAD.

G. A. R. Memorial Exercises Are Held on Riverside Drive.

The allied organizations of the G. A. R. held memorial exercises for those who have died in war at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument at Eighty-ninth Street and Riverside Drive yesterday afternoon.

Among the speakers were the Rev. Paul M. Spencer, the Rev. Gregory O'Brien, Dr. Joseph Silverman and the Rev. J. E. Zeiter. Sergeant Tracy and Privates Cody, Shon, Nordey and Pierce of the Second Artillery fired a salute for the dead. The Post Office Clerks' Band played.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of STUTZ MOTOR CAR COMPANY OF AMERICA, INC., held at the office of the company on June 8, 1920, the following preambles and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, the Board of Directors at a special meeting held on April 1, 1920, declared, subject to due authorization by the stockholders, a stock dividend of 80,000 shares of the corporation without nominal or par value, payable in the following installments on the following dates:

WHEREAS, at a special meeting of the stockholders duly called and held at the office of the corporation on May 5, 1920, the stockholders authorized the directors to distribute the above-mentioned stock dividend in the installments and on the dates designated by the Board of Directors as aforesaid; and

WHEREAS, at said stockholders' meeting the stockholders further authorized the Board of Directors to distribute or cause to be distributed the aforesaid stock dividend in such different installments and on such earlier dates as they might in their discretion determine; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Directors in the exercise of the discretion thus conferred upon them by the stockholders, has determined that it is for the best interests of this corporation and of its stockholders to accelerate the payment of the aforesaid stock dividend;

RESOLVED, that the proper officers of the corporation be, and they hereby are, authorized and directed to distribute or cause to be distributed the aforesaid stock dividend of 80,000 shares of this corporation without nominal or par value, on June 29, 1920, to stockholders of record as of the close of business on June 18, 1920.

BEATEN AND ROBBED, SAYS YOUNG WOMAN

TELLS OF BITING ASSAILANT

Being without regular work for the Summer, since most of the wealthy customers for whom she designed children's clothing had gone to their Summer homes, Miss Anna Schwab, who lives at 288 Lexington Avenue, inserted an advertisement in a morning newspaper of June 4, stating her desire to be employed as a governess. At 10 o'clock that morning she received a telephone call from a "Mrs. Thompson of Yonkers," who promised to send her chauffeur to call for Miss Schwab. A man wearing a motor cap came to the house in the afternoon and took her to a lot near Van Cortlandt Park, where he beat her badly and robbed her of $60 and her house keys, she charges.

This information was given by Miss Schwab yesterday as she lay in her bed, still suffering from the attack. She has had four physicians, she said, and an X-ray examination of her head is being made to learn if the skull had been fractured.

An hour after her talk with "Mrs. Thompson," Miss Schwab said, a man called her up. He said he was "Mrs. Thompson's" chauffeur and had gone to 218 Lexington Avenue by mistake, as he did not know the correct address. Miss Schwab said she told him where she was living and at 2 o'clock he arrived, on foot, explaining that the automobile was being repaired.

"We went in the Broadway subway as far as Van Cortlandt Park," Miss Schwab went on, "where we took a surface car. After riding a few minutes we got off and started to walk along an automobile road.

"After walking about five minutes along this thoroughfare, I complained that I was tired. He then said we could walk through the lots to 'Mrs. Thompson's' residence, thereby saving some time. I agreed and when we had gone a short distance through the open fields he took me by the neck and dragged me to the ground. He then beat me on the left side of my head with his knuckles, saying, 'Now I've got you.' He thrust some grass into my mouth to prevent me from making an outcry. But I bit his finger while he had it in my mouth.

"Having taken out a short knife he raised it to slash me, but it was an easy task for me to grab it from him and throw it away. I offered him my pocket book. He snatched it from me and ran along the path."

Miss Schwab said she walked to the golf links in the park, where a caddy offered to call a policeman. When she reached the Fifty-seventh Precinct Station at Kingsbridge Terrace she had to wait some time for an ambulance surgeon to treat her, she said. The police, she alleges, refused to allow her to telephone to the rooming house to report the theft of the keys and would not call a taxi for her until after many entreaties.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The air pressure is relatively low over nearly all parts of the country, with disturbances central off the Middle Atlantic Coast, over the extreme Upper Mississippi Valyley and over Washington and Oregon. Warm weather continued during the day, generally east of the Rocky Mountains except in the North Atlantic States and along the north border from Lake Superior eastward.

During the last twenty-four hours there were local showers and thunderstorms in the Middle Atlantic and New England States, the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio and extreme Upper Mississippi Valley and at widely scattered points in the Rocky Mountain region and North Pacific States. The outlook is for generally fair weather Monday and Tuesday in the States east of the Mississippi River except that local showers are probable Monday along the North Atlantic coast and in the Upper Lake region.

No important temperature changes are indicated for the east half of the country except in the Atlantic States north of Virginia, where the weather will be somewhat warmer.

Winds off the Atlantic Coast—North of Sandy Hook: Moderate, variable, cloudy, showery weather; Sandy Hook to Hatteras: moderate variable, partly cloudy, occasional showers; Hatteras to Florida Straits, East Gulf and West Gulf: gentle varible, generally fair.

FORECASTS FOR TODAY AND TUESDAY.

3 A. M.	61	57	4 P. M.	71	80
6 A. M.	59	58	6 P. M.	65	74
9 A. M.	59	67	9 P. M.	62	65
12 M.	65	77	11 P. M.	62	64

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 64; for the corresponding date last year it was 70; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 68.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 59; at 8 P. M. it was 62. Maximum temperature, 71 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 57 degrees at 5:30 A. M. Humidity, 97 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 93 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.96 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.86 inches.

FAME THRUST UPON AMBASSADOR DAVIS

New Presidential Possibility Went Straight Up, Though He Never Sought an Office.

FRIEND TELLS OF HIS CAREER

He Wanted to be a Judge, but Went to Congress Instead — Then Made Solicitor General and Sent Abroad.

From The Philadelphia Record.

The sudden injection of the name of John W. Davis, American Ambassador to Great Britain, into the discussion of Democratic Presidential possibilities and the enthusiasm with which his name has been greeted has aroused interest in his unique and somewhat meteoric career. Ever since THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday seriously proposed him, Democrats all over the United States have been discussing his character and attainments, usually in a highly appreciative manner.

In Philadelphia there is an intimate friend of Mr. Davis who knew him all through his career in West Virginia and who is keenly interested in his candidacy. He is G. Burgess Taylor, formerly of Wheeling, but now General Agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, with offices at 807 Chestnut Street, this city. Mr. Taylor came here on Jan. 1, after an active career as a Democrat in his native State. He served on Mr. Davis's Campaign Committee when he first ran for Congress in 1910.

Mr. Taylor is vitally interested in Mr. Davis's Presidential boom. He has written for The Record an appreciation of the Ambassador, which is as follows:

Wanted to be a Judge.

In dealing with the political fortunes of most public men fate is a brutal old jade. She fans the flame of selfish ambition only to quench it by refusing to grant that for which she inspired the hope and inflamed the desire, and when at last, with courtesanlike caprice, she grants her filthy favors, she, in most cases, has so destroyed the self-respect of her supplicant that, to those who know the political game, the crown of civic distinction is only a disguised symbol of shame. And yet, now and again, she thrusts upon an unwilling recipient, whom she pursues with the fury of Nemesis, her lavish favors; dragging into incongenial service one who fain would go another way.

Of a truth, it may be set down that John William Davis, present Ambassador to Great Britain, has always shunned rather than sought, political preferment, and yet it is doubtful if any citizen of this Republic has, so early in life and within such a short time, had so many honors thrust upon him or performed with more signal ability so many public trusts requiring the largest measure of equipment and capacity.

Born and reared in the small mountain town of Clarksburg, W. Va., John W. Davis enjoyed every advantage to be found in a home of culture and a liberal education, and in young manhood, in home-town vernacular, gave promise of bein' somethin'. The early age of 23 found him admitted to the bar and acting as assistant professor of law in Washington and Lee University. After two years in this work, he resigned, and returned to his native State, where he was soon established in a substantial country law practice.

In 1910, at the age of 37, as an obscure country lawyer, he was with his most partial friends only daring to predict that he would one day be elevated to the bench. In fact, he confessed to intimate friends that his nearest approach to a political ambition was the hope that he might some day occupy a place on the Federal bench. In that year, however, the Democrats of his Congressional district decided to make him the party nominee, which was done in spite of a most vigorous protest from him. The handsome majority he received was due alike to his winning personality, and the dissatisfaction in the Republican Party.

An idea of just how little he felt at home in this environment is gathered from a reply which he made to me during his first term, when I asked him if he knew a certain distinguished statesman. He said, "He doesn't know obscure Congressmen." And yet, before he had completed his first term, he had so impressed the House of Representatives with his ability and character that during his second term, to which he was elected because of his recognized ability and character, he was asked by President Wilson to resign his seat and accept the Solicitor Generalship, where he made a national reputation as an accomplished lawyer.

How He Became Solicitor General.

It was an odd whim of his old friend fate that made him Solicitor General. He had made up his mind to retire from Congress and resume his law practice, when what seemed like an opportunity to gratify his ambition to serve on the Federal bench presented itself. His friends provided indorsements which were unsurpassed by any ever presented to the Department of Justice, but when Senator Chilton of West Virginia appeared before the Attorney General to press his appointment the General drew from his desk a note from Woodrow Wilson, which read:

"Dear Mr. Attorney General:

"When you come to consider filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Goff, please give careful consideration to the claims of Judge Charles A. Woods of South Carolina. Very respectfully, WOODROW WILSON."

It is needless to say Judge Woods was appointed, and it seemed to him and his close friends that the curtain had fallen on the last act of the political career of John William Davis.

However, it was but a very short time until this same Woodrow Wilson was looking for a man who measured up to his requirements for the important post of Solicitor General, and in the midst of his perplexities, produced by the usual horde of hungry units proposed by misfit Senators and ignorant Congressmen, fate took a hand and reminded him of the high character and splendid ability of the young West Virginian who had aspired to be a Federal Judge; and, having had some personal experience with the capricious lady, Mr. Wilson, in his most gracious manner, said: "May I not" be permitted to do the "handsome" thing by your self and burden him with the pleasant duties of Solicitor General; and John William remained in politics. Quietly, but brilliantly, he directed litigation before the Supreme Court of the United States in which the national Government was interested. A short time before the armistice was signed, following my usual custom to call on him at the Department of Justice when in Washington, I was informed that he had sailed for overseas to represent the Government on the commission that met at Berne to negotiate with the Central Empires on exchange of prisoners and a more humane policy of treatment of all prisoners.

This commission was scarcely organized before it was announced that Ambassador Page had died, and the story goes that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing—sorely perplexed by the loss of Page—were discussing a possible successor, when an obscure confidential clerk in the Department of State, who was present suggested John William Davis, who was overseas and readily available.

Hurriedly recalled from his work at Berne, he arranged his personal affairs, and when the George Washington weighed anchor for her first trip, bearing President Wilson and his distinguished party to the Paris conference, there sailed with him as the new Ambassador to Great Britain none other than John William Davis, who but a few short years before was a country lawyer in the hills of West Virginia; and, knowing the mystic touch in his nature as I do, I can see him as he stood watching the vanishing shores of his native land, reflecting upon the unsought and unexpected glory that had come to him.

Soon Made Influence Felt.

As evidence that it was both, The Pittsburgh Dispatch, published within sixty miles of his home, upon the announcement of his appointment asked, "Who is John William Davis?" The reception of his first speech as a representative at the Court of St. James's by the British public answered this question to the discredit of The Dispatch. It has been cleverly said that men suddenly advanced to prominent place in Washington official life either grow or swell. John W. Davis has grown immensely, but has refused to swell. In the wealth of his career as Solicitor General he was as simple and unaffected as in his modest law office in Clarksburg, W. Va.

I happen to have a first-hand story that shows that even in his walk with Kings he has not lost the common touch. I met in Milwaukee recently a West Virginia lad whose brother, upon his return to England from service in France, called at the embassy and was invited to dine. In a family letter describing his experience he said it was hard to realize he was in the midst of such historic and exclusive surroundings.

Men who have watched the star of this man rise are beginning to ask if its rays are lighting the way to the White House—that alluring Palace of Pleasure and Pain.

ASSAIL BOARD OF ESTIMATE.

Contractors' Association Wants Increased Subway Building Cost Paid.

An attack was made on the Board of Estimate by the General Contractors' Association because of its failure to keep a promise made in June, 1918, to the contractors engaged in building subways, to pay them the difference between the cost of labor and materials when the bids were submitted and the increase in these costs caused by the war. This action followed the failure of the board at its Friday meeting to take any notice of the matter when it was called to their attention.

The statement of the association asks the board whether it intends to carry out its promise, and reads:

"The situation is one in which the good faith of the city, as pledged by the Board of Estimate, is involved. Accepting the promise as made in good faith, the contractors went ahead with their work, and many of the sections were completed and are now in operation. To accomplish this, they spent upward of $7,000,000 of their own money, largely by securing credit from the banks, because of the city's promise.

"Thus far only four settlements have been made, two of them on the large contracts and two on small ones, involving less than $700,000. For some reason best known to the Board of Estimate, some thirty other subway contracts, equally meritorious, have not been settled, and efforts to secure settlement, either under the promise or through legislation, have persistently been blocked by the city administration."

JERSEY TROLLEYMEN STRIKE

North Shore Is Left Suddenly Without Service.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 13.—The discharge of five or six men because, it is alleged, of their union activities, started a strike today of the trolleymen of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railway Company, leaving the North Jersey shore from Pleasure Bay to Sea Girt without trolley service. Not a man, union or non-union, reported for work today.

The men, members of Local Division No. 949, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, recently demanded of the company a nine-hour day at 55 cents an hour. They are now working twelve hours at 40 cents an hour, with bonus, which brings the wage to 45 cents an hour. The company was to have had until next Tuesday to answer the demand.

The strike was totally unexpected, according to the officials of the company. George B. Cade, assistant to President Scott F. Hazelrigg, today denied the men were dropped for union activities. "We let them go for good and sufficient cause—not because they were connected with the union," he said.

SCOPE OF RAIL WAGE AWARD

When Made It Will Be Effective as of May 1, 1920, Labor Board Says.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The United States Railroad Labor Board announced yesterday that its wage decision, when made, would be effective as of May 1, 1920. It will apply, according to the time served, to all employes who were in service as of May 1 and who remained, or who have come into service since and remained.

The announcement added that the decision would cover only the employes of the roads represented by the Executives' Committee and of other roads whose cases were properly before the board.

"The decision, however, will cover approximately 93 per cent. of the railroad employes of the United States," said the statement, "and the board will, as soon as practicable, give a hearing to the representatives of the short line and other carriers not represented at the recent hearings, and as soon afterward as possible a decision for the employes of these carriers will also be made."

Discuss Taxing of Spanish Convents.

MADRID, June 12.—The question of taxing monasteries and convents in Spain was the subject of a long conference today between Señor Pascual, Minister of Finance, and Cardinal Guisasola, Archbishop of Valladolid. Hitherto religious institutions have been free from taxation, but they have been included as taxpayers under the recent financial measures.

Plan to Expand Spanish Navy.

LONDON, June 13.—The Spanish Government is preparing a bill providing for the construction of a second naval squadron, according to a Madrid dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph. The plan calls for the construction of a number of vessels of all descriptions, the dispatch adds.

SHORTAGE OF CARS HOLDS UP MATERIAL

BRICK MORE PLENTIFUL

Contractors Now Have an Oversupply of Labor—Material Prices Remain Firm.

Railroads terminating in and near New York have by word and action but a much more favorable aspect upon the immediate future of building construction.

When it was shown that the completion of living quarters for several hundred families this Autumn was dependent upon the immediate shipment of some twenty odd thousand barrels of cement, one company pledged 50,000 barrels, if necessary, out of its reserve of 500,000 barrels if transportation could be arranged.

When the matter was presented to Ralph Peters, President of the Long Island Railroad, through the Mayor's Committee, full co-operation was promised. Incidentally strong pressure is being brought to bear to put building materials next in line with food and fuel for railroad priority, with greater assurance toward the week-end of actual accomplishment than had heretofore seemed likely.

In a letter to Thomas J. Curtin, manager of the Farnham Cheshire Lime Company, L. A. Anthony, superintendent of car service, explained further exactly the relationship of the barren building material market to car shortage. He said:

"There is a shortage of box cars. We have an order from the Interstate Commerce Commission to forward twenty-five cars (from the Boston & Maine branch of the New York Central system) per day to the Great Northern Railroad (presumably to facilitate the movement of Western crops) and this order has to be taken care of regardless of our own requirements.

"After filling this order each day we are endeavoring to distribute the balance of the cars uniformly, giving the oldest orders preference.

"We cannot promise what we may be able to do in the future, as it depends very largely upon the number of cars coming to us. At the present time the eastbound movement of box cars is not so heavy as for other classes of equipment. We are hoping to be able to get some cars from the New Haven road tomorrow, and if we do we will apply some of them to filling orders on the North Adams branch."

While the building material supply situation in this city was still of the famine classification, with no cement, lime or plaster on hand in any of the dealer's yards, a glimmer of hope was found for partial relief in the action of the commercial interests of the city in attempting to unload some of the ships in the harbor. In some of these ships building materials have been awaiting unloading for three months.

This relief will come in the form of Oklahoma plaster and lime supplies sent through Galveston some time ago, when the railroad embargoes were in force.

The crux of the building material supply situation, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports today, seems to rest about equally upon car shortage and the inability to get building materials across the river in sufficient quantities from the New Jersey terminals. Local dealers are still dependent upon trucks for their supplies. This condition is explained in the ability of the building material distributers in the five eastern counties of New Jersey to get about 25 per cent. of their building material requirements from the railroads.

They say that once the cars get under way, loaded, at the mills, they seem to come through fairly promptly, thus indicating that the railroads have been able to clear their tracks to a considerable extent of the piled-up tonnage backed up by the late strike. Cement cars require from two to four days to come from Lehigh mills to terminal. Ohio lime cars take from three to four weeks.

By way of showing the extremity to which the dealers are being put to get building materials into this market, some dealers in New Jersey are receiving cement in bulk in any kind of car that is available.

For the first time since last year, the builders of the Hackensack district were assured toward the week-end that they would be able to get all the common brick they wanted from the Hackensack kilns. The North River brick manufacturers are producing about 25 per cent. of last year's supply, with labor fairly steady in supply and temper.

As the building material market now stands, new projects are not receiving much consideration from any angle. The full legal rate for money in most of the Eastern States is making mortgage money on new projects, even housing enterprises, timid. Contractors, who a few months ago were complaining about scarcity of labor of all kinds, say they have an over-supply now, but cannot get materials and are laying off surplus help.

The building material dealers are not interested in new buildings, because they have their hands full supplying jobs all ready in progress. Operators are awaiting the day when building materials will be in better supply, because they find that with an open price market the cost is not only undecisive but the factor of delay, through non-delivery of materials, endangers the equity in the job.

But the great big hopeful outlook is in the changing condition at the building material mill centres. The entire building construction industry faced a mill supply shortage three months ago. Today there is estimated to be an adequate supply of materials on hand for almost a normal market between now and October.

While this should not be interpreted as portending general price reductions, it at least removes the greatest single factor barring full resumption of building work when the transportation situation clears.

The certainty that there is behind the immediate temporary curtailment of deliveries not only a huge back-log of building projects that are destined to have the right of way through all departments, even including finance, is the buoy upon which the whole market is keeping itself from being submerged.

OSBORNE CHEERED BY 1,200 CONVICTS

Former Warden Visits Sing Sing for First Time in Four Years and Makes Speech.

"PLAY STRAIGHT," HE SAYS

Going to Devote His Life to Prison Reform in This Country and Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, June 13.—With cheering and band playing, Sing Sing's 1,200 prisoners and their outside guests roared out a hearty welcome to their former Warden, Thomas Mott Osborne, who visited the old prison today for the first time in four years to see his former charges.

Major Lewis E. Lawes, their new Warden, gave Mr. Osborne the freedom of the prison and asked him to give the convicts a speech. This Mr. Osborne was glad to do. In his address to the men of Sing Sing he urged them to behave and uphold the honor system and to deal harshly with a fellow inmate who breaks rules or makes mischief.

He urged the inmates to "play straight" with Warden Lawes, "who is playing straight with you."

"I saw many new improvements," Mr. Osborne said after his speech. He added: "The men greeted me by the term 'Tom Brown.'" "Tom Brown" is the name Mr. Osborne took when he did two weeks of voluntary "servitude" in Auburn prison six years ago when Superintendent Rattigan was Warden.

When asked what he plans to do, since he has retired from command of the U. S. Naval Prison at Portsmouth, N. H., which he has just left, Commander Osborne explained: "I expect to devote my time to prison reform work, not in New York State alone but wherever the occasion arises. I will act in the capacity of consultant expert."

Mr. Osborne met "O. K. Bill," Myers, the bank burglar, who was one of his right-hand men in Sing Sing, in the yard. Bill told the former Warden he was trying to get pardoned and Mr. Osborne expressed the hope that he would "make it."

Going into the hospital, Mr. Osborne asked specially to see "Ownie" Madden, the celebrated New York gang leader, who has just undergone an operation for stomach trouble, traceable to a gun-shot wound.

Shortly after the band marched to their stand on the ballfield, Mr. Osborne was asked to address the crowd in the bleachers. As he approached the diamond the band struck up a popular air and the crowd cheered wildly. Prisoners rushed down off the bleachers, swarmed around "Tom Brown" and began shouting to him for a speech.

Mr. Osborne recounted to the crowd some of his experiences in the navy during the war and especially in the Portsmouth prison. Then he took up the Mutual Welfare League he founded at Auburn and in Sing Sing, which Warden Lawes has preserved. There is a league at Portsmouth now.

"There is only one way to run the league," said Commander Osborne, "and that is to be on the level with the Warden. He praised Warden Lawes for treating the men fairly and continued: "Just as long as you play straight with the Warden, who is playing straight with you, you will strengthen the league and make it popular in other prisons. Play straight and see that every other man here plays straight. If he doesn't, soak him. If a man broke his leg you wouldn't hide him in a dark place. You would take him to the hospital and cure him. When a man does the wrong thing here you ought to see he gets the right treatment—see that he is sent to the hospital." [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Osborne said that the league is going to spread all over the United States, that they are anxious for leagues of prisoners in Japan and that he has an invitation to go to England to organize it there.

KISSEL TRUCKS
5 capacity models

The experience of our organization as automotive distributors on Broadway since 1902, combined with our unequalled service facilities, is at the disposal of New York business men in solving their transportation problems.

Relations between local Kissel Truck owners and this company are of mutual understanding, for they are based on our study of transportation requirements and the selection of the proper sized Kissel Trucks to meet them.
